NOTE.

The present volume commences a new series of the reports of the Mysore Archaeological Department in which an attempt has been made to incorporate some of the suggestions received from various scholars.

A brief summary of the work of the year is given in the administrative section with which the report begins. To the description of architectural monuments surveyed during the year and published in Part II have been added notices of ancient sites and fortresses studied in the course of the tours. Attempts will be made in the future reports to make more detailed studies of the great architectural and sculptural monuments with which the State abounds and to discuss problems connected with them. Numismatic studies which had been suspended by the department for many years have been revived in Part III and will be a feature of the new series. In Part IV it is arranged to publish information about new manuscripts discovered recently and also historical data gathered from official records and literary works. In the part on Epigraphy, in addition to the publication in extenso of more than one hundred inscriptions newly discovered during the year, a few improvements have been introduced. The readings of the lithic records are taken from the original stones themselves and verified in the office with the help of estampages which are preserved for reference. Translations are given for a number of the inscriptions and brief notes appended wherever necessary. Further, for inscriptions which are either epigraphically or historically of outstanding importance fuller editorial notes are given following the example of the Epigraphia Indica.

An important activity of the department during the summer of the year under report was excavation at Chandravalli, which has been highly productive of finds. The bulk of the matter to be published has so far outgrown expectations that the full note on the excavations would make a volume by itself. The introductory pages and notes on the trial excavations only are now published and it is hoped to issue with the next report a description of the main excavation and a detailed and fully illustrated statement of the finds the preparation of which has already made considerable progress. Since the completion of the latter is expected to take a few more months and the publication of this report cannot be delayed any further, the portion which was ready is now issued as a supplement to this report; but it is separately paged so as to allow it to be bound up along with the further instalments into a separate volume.

An attempt has been made also to illustrate the report more fully and give it a more decent and attractive form, though financial considerations have not permitted us to follow fully the example of the Annual Reports of the Archæological Survey of India.

Since this is the first annual report to be published by me as Director of Archæology, I take this opportunity to express my heartfelt thanks to all those who helped and guided me during the period of my deputation at the London University, in the British Museum and in the various excavation camps in Egypt and South Europe. My special acknowledgments are due to my teachers Prof. Sir Flinders Petrie and Vice-Chancellor E. A. Gardner, of the London University and to Dr. L. D. Barnett and Mr. J. Allan of the British Museum. To Dr. Sir Brajendranath Seal, Vice-Chancellor of the Mysore University, who has inspired a new life into the Archæological Department, it is not possible to be sufficiently grateful.

M. H. KRISHNA,

Director of Archæological Researches in Mysore.

GENERAL AND REVENUE DEPARTMENTS.

G. O. No. E. 1844-55—Uni. 34-30-5, dated 16th November 1931.

Report on the Working of the Archæological Department.

READ—

Report on the working of the Archæological Department for the year 1928-29, received from the Registrar, Mysore University, with his letter No. 3413, dated 1st August 1931.

ORDER NO. E. 1844-55—UNI. 34-30-5, DATED 16TH NOVEMBER 1931.

Recorded.

2. The Report has been received very late. It is hoped that such delay will be avoided in future.

3. Arthasastra Visarada Vidyalankara Dr. R. Shama Sastri, B.A., Ph. D., (Cal.) who held the Directorship of the Department from 1922, went on leave from 5th October 1928, preparatory to retirement and finally retired from service on 6th February 1929, after a total service of about 29 years. Government record with pleasure their appreciation of the valuable service rendered by him in the field of Archæology.

4. Dr. M. H. Krishna, M.A., D. Litt. (Lond.), Professor of History, Maharaja's College, Mysore, was appointed Director on 6th February 1929, in addition to his own duties. There was no other change in the staff of the Department during the year.

5. The Director toured in parts of the Mysore, Hassan, Kadur and Chitaldrug Districts in connection with the conservation and study of ancient monuments and for selecting suitable sites for excavation. His Assistant toured in parts of the Tumkur District to collect inscriptions and make a survey of other antiquities. The Architectural Assistant and the Travelling Pandit surveyed ancient monuments and collected inscriptions and manuscripts in the Shimoga, Kadur, Hassan, Chitaldrug and Mysore Districts. A detailed survey of manuscripts was made during the year in parts of Tirthahalli, Nagar, Chikmagalur, Mudigere, Channarayapatna, Kadur, Chitaldrug and Hiriya Taluks. An important activity of the Department during the year under report was the excavation of the Chandravalli site near Chitaldrug, which has been highly productive of finds. The introductory pages and notes on the trial excavations only have now been published, but it is hoped to issue with the next report a description of the main excavation and a detailed and fully illustrated statement of the finds.

No. E. 1844-55—UNI. 34-30-5, DATED 16TH NOVEMBER 1931.

The number of monuments newly surveyed and studied during the year is more than 20, the most important architectural discovery being a beautiful Hoysala Temple at Agrahara, Belaguli, Channarayapatna Taluk. The total number of records collected during the year was 120 which mostly belong to various famous Dakhan Dynasties like the Gangas, the Chalukyas, the Yadavas, the Hoysalas and the Vijayanagar Emperors. A copper plate grant received from Kolhapur, and deciphered with considerable difficulty is said to have yielded exceedingly valuable information about the early Rashtrakuta Empire of the 6th Century A. D. The oldest and the most interesting of the epigraphical discoveries was a rock inscription of the Kadamba Mayura Sarman in prakrit language and Brahmi characters which is said to have thrown new light on the condition of the Dakhan in the 3rd Century A. D. A separate chapter has been devoted in the report to the numismatic studies which had been suspended by the Department for many years. The most important work of this nature done by the Department during the year under report was the unearthing and study of a large number of very ancient coins in the course of the excavation at Chandravalli. Eight manuscripts were examined during the year.

At the invitation of various bodies, the Director and the members of the staff delivered more than 20 lectures on historical and architectural subjects at Mysore, Bangalore, Chitaldrug and Belgaum, several of these having been illustrated with lantern slides.

Government are pleased to record their appreciation of the work done by the Department during the year.

ANNUAL REPORT FOR THE YEAR ENDING 30th JUNE 1929.

ADMINISTRATIVE.

Arthaśāstra-Viśārada Vidyāḷankāra DR. R. ŚHĀMA ŚĀSTRY, B.A., Ph.D. (Cal.), who held the Directorship of the department from the Staff. year 1922, went on leave preparatory to retirement on 5th October 1928 and finally retired from service on 6th

February 1929 in accordance with Notification No. 1797—C. B. 20-28-4 and G. O. No. 1800-1—C. B. 20-28-5, dated the 3rd—4th October 1928 and Notification No. 2312—C. B. 20-28-8, dated the 3rd—5th November 1928 and G. O. No. 2310-11—C. B. 20-18-7, dated 3rd and 5th November 1928. In his place was appointed Dr. M. H. Krishna, M.A., D.Lit. (Lond.), in addition to his own duties as Professor of History at the Maharaja's College of the Mysore University.

The department continued to work during the year without any other change in the staff. In spite of the heavy increase of work in the department owing to its new activities and the need for conducting field investigation under very difficult and trying circumstances, the members of the staff discharged their duties with remarkable devotion. But for their ungrudging co-operation it would have been impossible to turn out the work described in the course of this report.

The Director toured in parts of the Mysore, Hassan, Kadur and Chitaldrug Districts both in connection with the conservation and study of Tours. ancient monuments and for selecting suitable sites for excavation. The Assistant to the Director toured in parts of the Tumkur District to collect inscriptions and make a systematic survey and study of other antiquities. He also camped at Chitaldrug in connection with the excavation work during the days the Director was called away on other duty. The Architectural Assistant surveyed several ancient monuments in the Shimoga, Kadur, Hassan and Chitaldrug Districts. The part time Travelling Pandit also toured in the Hassan, Shimoga and Mysore Districts to collect inscriptions and manuscripts.

The monuments at Hoḷênarsipur, Kôravangala, Bêlûr, Haḷêbîḍ, and Arsîkere in the Hassan District, and at Basrâl in the Mandya Taluk of the Mysore District, were inspected by the Director and detailed notes were submitted regarding the condition of the monuments in those place . Visits were also paid to the Aśôkan inscriptions at Siddâpur in the Moḷakâlmuru Taluk, Ânekoṇḍa near Dâvangere and Harihar in the Chitaldrug District, Dêvanûr in the Kadur District and Bûdanûr, in the Maṇḍya Taluk of the Mysore District and the condition of the protected monuments at Siddâpur and Arsîkere was noted. Monuments, for which inspection reports were received during the year are noted in Appendix A.

Estimates for the repairs of the following Monuments were received during the year, and were examined by the Director :—

In the month of March 1929 the duty of looking after the preservation of ancient monuments and conducting the periodical inspections was transferred to the Consulting Architect with the Government of Mysore, Bangalore, subject to the reservation of certain important powers to the Archæological Department in accordance with G. O. No. 9092-9104—Uni. 349-27-9, dated 4th March 1929.

The number of monuments freshly surveyed and studied during the year is more than twenty, the most important architectural discovery being a beautiful Hoysala temple at Agrahâra Belagûli, Channarâyapaṭṇa Taluk, Hassan District.

Monuments surveyed.

Nearly one hundred and twenty unpublished inscriptions were discovered during the year and prepared for publication. They mostly belong to various famous Dakhan dynasties like the Gangas, the Châlukyas, the Yâdavas, the Hoysalas and the Vijayanagar emperors. A copperplate grant received from Kolhapûr which was deciphered with considerable difficulty, has yielded exceedingly valuable information about the early Râshṭrakûṭa empire of the 6th century A.D. The oldest and most interesting of the epigraphical discoveries was a rock inscription of the Kadamba Mayûraśarman. The record which is in the Prâkrit language and Brâhmi characters has thrown new light on the condition of the Dakhan in the 3rd century A. D. Care was taken to verify the readings of the inscriptions meant for publication though the process involved much time and labour for the editors.

Epigraphy.

On the 1st of July 1928 a special office was started for cataloguing the old coins belonging to the Mysore Government, and in accordance with G. O. No. D. 9984-9—G. G. 100-26-8, dated 19th March 1928, fifty-eight gold coins, one hundred and twelve silver pieces and nine hundred and sixty-five coins of copper and other metals belonging to the Archæological Department, were handed over to the Officer in Charge of that office. But the usual work of collecting and studying ancient coins was continued in the department and in the course of the Director's tours the collection belonging to the Bêlûr temple, that of Patel Chikkannagaḍa of Halêbîḍ and smaller collections met with in the course of the tours, were examined. But the most important Numismatic work done in the department was the unearthing and study of a large number of very ancient coins in the course of the excavation at Chandravallî.

Numismatics.

Eight manuscripts were examined during the year. Of these, 'Dhanavâstu' a Kannaḍa palm-leaf manuscript purports to describe the treasures lying buried in the earth at various places in South India and the method of acquiring them. A paper manuscript on the History of Mysore belonging to the family of Nallappa contains many new and interesting points of information especially about the career of Hyder¹. The other palm-leaf manuscripts belong to the Government Oriental Library, Mysore, and describe the story of 'Paradârasôdara' Râmanâtha, son of the Bêḍar king Kamṇila of the Bellary District, a valiant ruler of Karnâṭaka who opposed the advance of Muhammad bin Tuglak into south Dakhan. Râmanâtha's heroic career ended tragically when he was besieged and killed by the overwhelmingly large forces of Delhi.

Manuscripts.

(1) A detailed notice of this work will appear in the next annual report of this department.

One of the most important activities of the department during the year which has more than doubled the work of the staff was the excavation of the Chandravalli site near Chitaldrug. The results have been extraordinarily interesting in that they have disclosed the condition of the Dakhan about two thousand years ago. A fully illustrated detailed report is being prepared, the first instalment of which is published with this volume.

Excavation.

The Archæological Museum of the department could not make much progress for want of sufficient accommodation. The work of collecting specimens however continued. Three Ganga copperplate grants were purchased while an ancient gun in two fragments was presented to the museum by the Deputy Commissioner, Chitaldrug District. Twenty-six interesting coins were also acquired and the excavation finds from Chandravalli were removed to Mysore for study and later for exhibition in the museum. During the tours numerous architectural and sculptural pieces suitable for the museum were noted but they could not be transferred to Mysore as there is no convenience for housing them. The Mysore State is so rich in ancient architectural and sculptural work that a very interesting museum of antiquities and fine arts could be built up, if proper accommodation were made available.

Museum.

The department sent exhibits to the exhibition of the All-India Oriental Conference at Lahore, the Karnataka Historical Exhibition at Belgaum and the Dasara Exhibition at Mysore. For active participation in the latter and for the excellence of the exhibits, the Dasara Exhibition authorities awarded the department a gold medal certificate.

Exhibitions.

The department has become a popular place of reference for scholars who send to it scores of interesting enquiries. The answers to many of the questions were given after careful study and research at the office.

Enquiries.

At the invitation of various bodies the Director and the members of the staff delivered more than 20 lectures on historical and architectural subjects at Mysore, Bangalore, Chitaldrug and Belgaum. Several of these were illustrated with lantern slides.

Lectures.

The monograph on Halebid temples has not yet been completed. The printing of the Index for the Annual Reports from 1906 to 1922 made considerable progress during the year. But the printing of the Index volume to the Epigraphia Carnatica and the supplementary volumes, made no progress.

Office work.

1. JAIN MANASTAMBHA, MELIGE. (p. 5).

2. JAIN MANASTAMBHA, HUMCHA. (p. 6).

SURVEY OF MONUMENTS AND ANCIENT SITES.

Detailed monumental surveys were made during the year at the following places :—
Mêlige in the Tirthahalli Taluk. Humcha in the Nagar Taluk, Khândya in the Chikmagalur Taluk, Gôṇibîḍu and Aṅgaḍi in the Mûḍgere Taluk, Agrahâra Belguḷi in the Channarâyapaṭṇa Taluk, Dêvanûr in the Kaḍûr Taluk, Chitradurga hill in the Chitaldrug Taluk, and Aimangala in the Hiriyûr Taluk.

Mêlige is a village 6 miles to the south of Tirthahalli. It has a Jain basti all in ruins and overgrown with lantana. An inscription stone standing here¹ dated 1608 A.D. states that this basti was first erected by one Bommaṇṇa Śrêṣṭhi and that it was re-built in stone by his grandsons in that year. The basti consists of a garbhagriha surrounded by a narrow passage for circumambulation, a sukhanâsi and a navaranga of about 16 feet square. In front of the navaranga and attached to it is a porch of two anḱaṇas. The pillars of the navaranga are of the usual 16 sided pattern on square bases; the ceilings are plain and the door of the sukhanâsi is uninteresting. The style of the monument is Dravidian of the late Vijayanagar class. An entrance maṇṭapa of five anḱaṇas stands in front of the basti at a distance of about 12 feet and at an equal distance in front of it stands a mânastambha of pleasing proportions. (Plate II. 1.) This pillar is a very beautiful piece of architecture and is exquisitely carved in the 17th century style. It stands on a stepped platform measuring about 15 feet square at the bottom and about 5 feet square at the top. The bottom of the pillar, each side of which measures 2'-10'' in length, is square in shape to a certain height, then octagonal, further up 16-sided and finally circular towards the top.

On the side of the pillar facing the basti, a bhaktavighraha is carved with folded hands probably representing the original founder Bommaṇṇa Seṭṭi, referred to in the inscription.

The whole place is so much overgrown with lantana that it could not be examined in detail and unless prompt measures are taken, there is every danger of the whole structure being enveloped with vegetation shortly.

Humcha is a village about 22 miles to the north of Tirthahalli and belongs to the Nagar Taluk. It was the capital of the Śântara kings who ruled the country from about the 8th century until the 16th century and were subordinate to the Châlukya, the Hoysala and the Vijayanagar rulers, being finally subdued by the Keladi chiefs. The village is variously named in the inscriptions as Hombucha, Pomburcha and Kanakapura. The place is very old and the existing ruins indicate the site of a large town.

There is a Jain matt here and the matt authorities have been constructing a very large building for the past 10 years. There are two Jain temples within the matt enclosure dedicated to Pârśvanâtha and Padmâvatî. This latter is the presiding deity of the place and is said to have been set up by Jinadatta, the founder of the town. The place is considered sacred by the Jains and devotees from all parts of India visit the village to do homage to the goddess.

Besides these two bastis there are three more in the village. The most important of these is the Panchakûṭa Basti. This basti faces east and consists of five cells all in a row with a common navaraṅga and an open mukhamanṭapa. A verandah runs all round the temple.

In front of the main structure and a few feet away on either side of it are two small shrines; and the whole is enclosed by a compound wall with a mahâdvâra in front. Between the mahâdvâra and the main building stand a small manṭapa and a mânastambha. (Plate II, 2.) This latter is a magnificent monolithic pillar and is the most interesting piece of work in the locality. The pillar stands on a high platform which has three tiers. The bottom-most one has four elephants at the four corners and four more at the cardinal points. Lions in different postures are carved in between these elephants. On the face of the next higher tier the procession of the Ashta-dikpâlakas with all their retinue and musicians is very beautifully carved. The column itself is square to a certain height and then octagonal and finally circular at the top. There is a small pavilion surmounting the pillar with a seated figure facing each of the four directions. On the whole, the mânastambha is very elegant and in pleasing proportions from top to bottom.

Of the two small shrines on either side of the main basti, the one to the south enshrines the image of Bâhubali and the one to the north is dedicated to Pârśvanâtha. This latter structure looks much older than the surrounding structures, the date of which is 1077 A.D. This fact is corroborated by the fragmentary inscription built into the wall¹. This inscription is dated A.D. 950 and mentions the existence of another basti called Pâliyakka Basti constructed about the Śaka year 800. Apparently the materials of this ruined basti have been used in the construction of the Pârśvanâtha Basti.

2. VASANTIKA TEMPLE AT ANGADI, (p. 8).

3. MARKANDESVARA TEMPLE AT KHANDYA, (p. 7).

There are a number of inscriptions in the basti from which it can be gathered that the main basti of five cells was constructed in 1077 A.D. by Chaṭṭala-Dêvi and was called Urvî-Tilaka (Glory of the world)¹. The tôraṇa pillars and the mânastambha also belong to the same date. An inscription on one of the pillars to the north of the Tôraṇabâgîl states that the northern paṭṭasâle of the basti was constructed in 1147 A.D.²

Three of the images in the cells of the Pañchakûṭa Basti were ascertained to be Chandranâtha, Śântinâtha and Pârśvanâtha. What the other two represented could not be ascertained. The navaranga consists of 10 ankaṇas with three doors and the images of Jvâlâmâlîni, Yaksha and Yakshiṇi are kept in it.

This monument has suffered much on account of excessive rainfall in the malnâd and is now covered by tiled roofing to prevent further deterioration.

There is a ruined basti in the garden attached to the mutt which the people say was once called Chandraprabhâ-basti and which may be assigned to the 10th century A.D.

On the top of a hill close by the village and overlooking the mutt there is an old basti dedicated to Bâhubali. It is called Guḍḍada Basti in the inscription and is said to have been erected in the Śaka year 820, (i.e., A.D. 898) by Vikramâditya Śântara³.

All the structures in the village are in the early Dravidian style of architecture. There are however certain portions here and there, which show Châlukyan and even later influence.

The temples, two in number, belonging to the village of Khândya stand on the right bank of the river Bhadrâ in the midst of a thickly grown jungle. The larger one is dedicated to Mârkaṇḍêśvara and consists of a garbhagriha with a passage for pradakshinâ surrounding it, a sukhanâsi, a navaranga and a porch. There are two very elegantly carved elephants in the Châlukyan style placed on either side of the flight of steps in front of the porch. (Plate III, 3.)

Khândya.

The smaller shrine is dedicated to Janârdana and consists of a garbhagriha and a long navaranga. The image of Janârdana is broken. It appears, years ago, some robbers broke open the gates of the temple one night, mutilated the image and carried away the golden kavacha that was on its body.

There are four inscriptions in the temple. The earliest of them dated 1180 A.D. refers itself to certain gifts granted by Vîraballâla to the God Mârkaṇḍêśvara-svâmi⁴. Hence the temple must have existed much earlier than that date. The temple as it stands is in such a ruinous condition that it does not offer any structural indications to enable us to determine its date. A second inscription is dated 1186 A.D. and the remaining two belong to the 16th century.¹

The monument is beyond the possibility of any substantial repairs. Yet on the recommendation of this department, an estimate was recently sanctioned for putting it into some presentable shape and for strengthening the broken beams.

Gônibiḍu Agrahâra is a small village on the left bank of the river Hêmâvati in the Mûdgere Taluk and peopled by Babbûru-Kamme brahmins. The temple here dedicated to Subrahmaṇya is a minor muzrai institution endowed with landed property worth about rupees 700 and having at its credit about rupees 300 in the Government treasury. It is an ordinary structure with a tiled roof. The temple faces south and contains three cells in a row. In front of all the three, there is a common navaranga and a mukhamanṭapa in front of it. There is a covered verandah surrounding the temple. The central cell enshrines Subrahmaṇya, the one to the right of it contains a linga, the one to the left contains a figure of Channakêśava. Just behind the central cell and attached to the temple is the shrine of the goddess opening towards the west. There is a small gôpura over the goddess's shrine.

The temple seems to have been repaired recently. A jâtra is held every year on the 13th day of the dark fortnight of Kârtika when people are fed sumptuously from the temple funds.

Angaḍi is a small village in the Mûdgere Taluk and is identified by Mr. Rice as Saśakapura, the original home of the Hoysalas. The inscriptions there call it Sosevûr. The Vâsantikâ temple where Saḷa is said to have killed the tiger is still standing. (Plate III, 2.) It is now a tiled structure and uninteresting to look at from an architectural point of view. Inside the temple five huge female figures built in stucco and brightly coloured are seated against the wall. One of the figures has three heads and another four hands. All of them hold the usual attributes of Śakti images. The Archak's people seemed to live inside the temple at the time of the inspection and none of the villagers could give any information about the temple and its history.

Besides this, there are two Jain and three Brahminical temples in the village all in ruins. The Jain bastis seem to be the earlier structures and may belong to the 10th century. One of these is called Makara Jinâlaya in one inscription²; another inscription states that the said Jinâlaya was built by one Mânika Poysalâchârî³. The earliest inscription of the place is dated about 1054 A.D. before which time the bastis must have been in existence⁴. The bigger basti contains three standing images in the

The smaller basti contains a huge seated figure which is said to represent Śāntinātha. The temple has been recently repaired by a devotee from Bangalore.

Of the three Brahminical temples, one is dedicated to Kêśava, the second to Vīrabhadra and the third to Śiva. All these are in utter ruins. The carvings on the temples and the mouldings introduced are rude and seem to belong to the earliest period of the Hoysala style. The Viṣṇu image is a very beautiful example of figure sculpture and is standing in the open without any roof. (Plate III 1.) Fortunately the image is intact and deserves to be removed and kept in a safe place. In case it is found difficult to remove, it may at least be protected from the ravages of the sun and rain.

The Beṭṭêśvara temple at Agrahāra Belguli in the Channarayapaṭna Taluk is the most important architectural discovery of the year. It is a Hoysala structure of the early 13th century and is in a very good state of preservation. The name of the village is Belguli which seems to have been its name from the beginning. In one inscription it is called Veḷugali¹ and in another it is called Panjâḍiya Belgali². A later inscription dated 1253 states that one Kêśirāja, minister to Vīra Ballāḷa, converted this village into an Agrahāra, named it Kêśavapura and built this temple dedicated to both Kêśava and Īśvara calling it Kêśavêśvara³.

The temple is a fairly large one and its plan is interesting. (Plate IV.) The temple faces south and is spread out east to west. It consists of a navaraṅga with a porch on the south side, the Īśvara shrine with a sukhanāsi on the west side, and the Kêśava shrine on the north side. On the east it is connected with a mukhamanṭapa. The latter has as usual projected ankaṇas on all the four sides. On the north side of the mukhamanṭapa there is an empty shrine presumably used for keeping the processional images; on the east side, i.e., right opposite the Īśvara image at the other end, there is a shrine with a big Basava (bull) facing the deity; on the south side there is a porch corresponding to the porch in front of the navaraṅga. (Plate V.)

The temple has beautifully carved pillars. The ceilings of the main temple are all deep and nicely carved while those of the mukhamanṭapa are plain ones. The outside wall is simple, divided at intervals with pilasters and thin corner bands. There is a jagati (plat-form) with a stone railing on either side of the navaraṅga. The Īśvara and Kêśava shrines have gōpurās in brick and mortar apparently built at a date much later than the construction of the temple.

The Kêśava image in the shrine is about 5 feet high and stands on a pedestal about 2 feet high. It holds a conch and a discus in the two back hands, and a lotus and a mace in the two front hands. Garuḍa is carved in the pedestal as usual. Other figures kept in the navaraṅga are : Shaṇmukha on a peacock : a seated Bhairava with trident and drum in the back hands and sword and kapāla in the front hands and a severed head hanging underneath the kapāla (Plate II, 4) : Durgā in sitting posture with pāśa and ankuśa in the back hands and sword and kapāla in the front hands, and a lion carved on the pedestal ; Sarasvati with ankuśa and pāśa in the back hands and rosary and pustaka in the front hands ; Vighnêśvara with ankuśa and lotus in the back hands and tusk and fruit in the front hands.

There are two more empty pedestals on one of which was perhaps Sûrya-Nârâyaṇa and on the other, Mahishâsuramardini.

The bull enshrined in the opposite cell is a fairly big one and is elaborately carved.

Inside the village there is a ruined temple dedicated to Sômêśvara. An inscription standing by its side tells us that it was built by one Sôvarâśi in the year 1157 A.D¹. There is nothing particular to mention about this temple..

DEVANUR.

The village Dêvanûr which lies 5 miles to the north of Bâṇavâr is a place of much interest specially because both Mr. B. L. Rice² and Mr. R. Narasimhacharya³ have declared that it was the home of Lakshmiśa, the author of the immortal Kannaḍa classic *Jaimini Bhârata*⁴. The place appears to be one of considerable antiquity since it is mentioned in an inscription of the thirteenth century. Close to the village is a large tank now much silted up, in the bed of which a mound is pointed out as the site of an old Râmêśvara temple. Near the rest-house stands the Siddhêśvara temple whose tower or Vimāna is pyramidical in shape with transverse lines of light and shade, closely resembling the plainer forms usually seen in the Hoysala period. In the navaraṅga is an inscription⁵ of Śaka 1156 (1234 A.D.) which mentions the name Lakṣmînârâyaṇapura as an alternative to Dêvanûr. Near it are images of Sûryanârâyaṇa, the Seven Mothers, Gaṇêśa, Dakṣiṇâmûrti, Mahishâsuramardini, Kumâra, etc. The sukhanâsi and the garbhagriha have both small lotus ceilings and the linga is said to have been brought from the Narmadâ river by Rudra Bhaṭṭa, the author of the Kannaḍa work Jagannātha Vijaya. The priests of the temple who belong to the Vasishṭha-gōtra, claim to be his descendants. It is clear that there must have been some more temples in the place since some stone images evidently of Hoysala workmanship were collected near the tank and are stored in the school compound. In the group are to be noted Narasimha, Nārāyaṇa and Vināyaka. Near the waste weir of the tank is an inscription by the side of which is said to have stood a Jain basti.

The whole village is full of the memory of the poet Lakshmiśa. Just behind the cattle-pound is a piece of Government land which is pointed out as the site of a house in which the poet was born. Traces of foundations and flooring are seen on the ground proving that houses stood there formerly. Two roads intersect near it and to the east of one of them a small area is pointed out as the exact site of the poet's house which appears to have faced towards the north opening into the main street. The tablet in memory of the poet which ought to have been placed here is now found at the back of the Lakshmīkānta temple.

The main temple of the village from which the chief street extends eastward is dedicated to Lakshmīkānta or Lakshmīnārāyaṇa. It is a moderate-sized structure mostly of granite with the rough plain finish common in the 17th century. The two pot-stone elephants standing at the east gate and some images placed near the north gate, probably belong to the disappeared Rāmēśvara temple.

In the garbhagriha, underneath a domed ceiling, is the image known as Lakshmīnārāyaṇa holding Śankha, Chakra, Padma and Gadā with Lakshmī seated on his lap. The images (ht. 3') are fine and show clear evidences of Hoysala workmanship. The prabhāvali has the common looped ornamentation with the 10 avatāras of Viṣṇu in the inter-spaces. As usual in the Hoysala sculptures, Kṛiṣṇa is absent, while both Balarāma and Buddha are present. The vimāna is pyramidical resembling that of the Siddhēśvara temple.

A plain sukhanāsi leads to the old navaranga whose fine bhuvanēśvari has been substituted by a useful and ugly sky-light. Under the south-east floor of the navaranga is a cellar now filled up with earth. On a platform on the north side are eleven images with folded hands seated in padmāsana, one of which is pointed out as a statue of the poet locally called Lakshmīkānta Hebbār while the others and two similar images in the outer navaranga are said to be the twelve Śrī-Vaiṣṇava Āḷvars. As the poet's statue has neither śikhā nor yajñōpavīta, and is much like its neighbours, its identification may be doubted. But it is worshipped with offerings after the Āḷvars. The outer navaranga has six pillars four of which are round and two ornate. A number of

Near the back-wall of the temple prākāra in a mantapa is a tablet in English, reading: 'Near this spot was born Lakshmîkânta Hebbâr, author of Jayamuni Bhârata.' It was erected about twenty years ago and is clearly in the wrong place as the birth place of the poet is several hundred yards east of the temple¹. To the east of the tablet is a mantapa with nine tall granite pillars of the post-Vijayanagar type, pointed out as having been constructed by the poet himself. On the full-moon day of Vaiśākha, the god used formerly to be seated here in state for the Koṭhâra festival and then taken round the temple five times. The following ceremonial takes place even now before the god during the successive rounds respectively :—

- (1) chanting of Vêdic hymns,
- (2) chanting of Tiruvây-moḷi,
- (3) readings from Jaimini-Bhârata,
- (4) vocal music,
- (5) instrumental music.

The local people state that the author of the Jaimini-Bhârata was their compatriot Lakshmîkânta Hebbâr who flourished more than two hundred years ago when the place was an agrahâra containing a large Brâhmin population. Nearly a hundred Hebbâr families of the Vaḍagalai Śrî-vaishṇava sect are said to have lived there though they usually had Smârtas as their Purôhitas, and observed many Smârta customs. Lakshmî-kânta Hebbâr is stated to have been a well-to-do man who left considerable property at his death. About forty years ago, a Hebbâr Ayyangar named Venkaṭaramaṇiah, of the same Bhâradvâja Gôtra, known commonly as Ballê-kereyappa, (after the name of a neighbouring village where he was residing) was being pointed out as a lineal descendant of the poet enjoying part of his property. He died a bachelor at the age of about fifty-five and his adopted son was a Śrînivâsa Ayyangar who also died childless about twenty years ago. The local officials still name pieces of property which formerly belonged to the poet's family. These facts deserve consideration as the poet's birth-place is incorrectly identified by some people with Surapura in South Hyderabad.

(¹) This mistake and the incorrect naming of the famous work could have been avoided if the Archaeological Department had been consulted.

The Lakshmînârâyana temple stands in urgent need of repairs and the tablet requires to be set up on the actual birth-place of the poet. The neighbourhood of his house may be converted into a village park and kept neat and clean since it is sure to attract large numbers of visitors in future.

AIMANGALA.

Aimangala¹ is a road-side village about 13 miles from Chitaldrug on the Hiriyr road. It has an unimportant modern temple of Kallu-kunṭe Kariamamma containing also two Vinâyaka images, while to the north of the village is a Virakta-maṭha of the Viraśaivās. The popular explanation that the name Aimangala was given to the place since the fort was built for a Vira-śaiva ayya by Hirê-Medakere Nâyaka of Chitradurga is untenable since the name is found in an inscription of 975 A.D., in the form of Ayyapamangala. Local tradition states that a certain dāsayya desired the villagers to lay the foundation of the fort when he blew his conch and struck the gong²; the fort would then become invincible. While the villagers were impatiently waiting, some other dāsayya gave the signal at a wrong time and the fort was built. Owing to this mistake, the fate of the fort became one of alternate prosperity and decay. It is said that about 50 years ago more than 2,000 inhabited houses existed in the fort.

The antiquities of the place including the fort, belong mostly to the 17th and 18th centuries, two of the local inscriptions³ dating from this period. The fort is a large oblong structure with straight sides provided with a high platform in each corner and numerous square bastions. It has three ruined gates one to the north, one to the east and one to the west, while the south wall has been recently breached to accommodate a cart track. The walls are massive and high, ruins of the surrounding moat being also visible in many places. Beyond the south gate is a tank. Through the east gate passes a winding road which perhaps connected the fort with the high ways. In the wall near the inner corner of this gate were found two years ago a large number of pot-stone balls. A little to the west of the east gateway is a vîragal of dark greenish stone containing a Nolaṃba inscription (Hiriyr :1) of 975 A.D. stating that at Ayapamangala one Mâramayya of Śrīvatsa-gôtra killed himself in order to save Pergaḍe Guṇḍayya.⁴ The story is illustrated in sculpture on the stone. The lowest panel shows the hero stabbing himself, his wife worshipping the funeral fire, and then both of them lying on the blazing logs. In the second panel they are taken to heaven by celestial nymphs, while in the top one the couple are seated in Kailâsa under a linga and bull with a chouri bearer on each side. The stone is 3' x 5'5" in size and the Kannaḍa characters which are one inch square belong to the slanting Chalukyan class.

To the west of the inscription on a mound stand two pillars of coarse grained stone one of which is 10 feet high. On the west face of the latter are engraved a Chakra and a Śankha with the Vaḍagale Śrīvaishṇava caste mark between them. They are evidently not earlier than the 17th century. To the west of the pillar is a large platform on which a Vaishṇava temple must have stood two centuries ago. About a hundred feet to the west of the temple lies a headless female statue with bosom bare and wearing a tāḷi, a post-Vijayanagar sculptured piece. About 100 yards to its south-west is a large area of about one acre the compound wall of which has now almost disappeared. It appears to have housed a garrison under one Sunkada Mallapa about 100 years ago. Near the west gate is a large pond by the side of which is a slab with a rough image of Āñjanêya carrying Sanjīva Parvata. On the way to the south breach lies a stone slab (3.5' x 1') containing a modern Kannaḍa inscription¹ of about the 18th century.

The most prominent monument is the temple of Vīrabhadra which stands to the north of the main road beyond the Vaishṇava temple and the ruins of what appears to have been a palace. The image of Vīrabhadra which is described as finely carved (5.5') is said to have been destroyed about 30 years ago. The garbhagriha and sukhanāsi are comparatively plain, while near the existing sukhanāsi doorway are several granite slabs with relief sculptures including a Purushā-mṛiga and whirling acrobats which suggest the Nāyak days. The bricks used for the roof (9" x 5" x 2") also support the same date. There are indications of other structures like a Prākāra and a pond to the west of the temple.

As stated above, most of the ruins belong to the Nāyak period, but the Nolamba stone Vīragal shows that the village had an earlier period of prosperity in the 10th century. On the whole the antiquities of the place are not of very great historical importance.

ANCIENT MONUMENTS ON CHITRADURGA HILL.

The town of Chitaldrug derives its name as is well known from the large craggy hill situated to its west. the present town itself having been originally an extension of the older town which was existing on the hill. The latter which is well-defended by strong fortifications has in its centre a wide space in which formerly existed the old town. Half a dozen peaks, mostly castellated, overlooked this hill town and served as its watch-towers. A hill so well placed from the military point of view naturally drew the attention of kings and soldiers and we find that it was a place of importance even nine centuries ago. A close examination of the inscriptions found in the neighbourhood shows that a Châlukyan Governor was ruling at the place which appears to have been known as "Sûlga" during the 11th century¹. In the Hoysala days the hill was known as Bemmattanakallu or Bramhapurigiri which name was, for a short time changed into Perumâlepura by a Hoysala governor in the 13th century. Other names like Hiḍimbapaṭṭana, Chinmûlâdri and Farrukh-yab Pissar² have also been given to the place. But the present name Chitradurga or Chitrakaldurga which was applied to it in the late Vijayanagar days appears to be most appropriate as the hill is full of rugged peaks, crags and boulders which give it a picturesque appearance. Local tradition connects the hill with the Pâṇḍavas one of whom Bhîma is said to have killed the demon Hiḍimba on its top. The valleys and peaks of the hill are covered with a large number of ancient monuments belonging to different historical periods, the earliest of which may be more than a thousand years old. (Plate VI, 1.)

The earliest monuments now existing appear to be the inner shrines of a series of Īśvara temples, the lingas of which have been installed in shallow caves or rock-shelters in various parts of the hill. The sanctums of the Hiḍimbêśvara, Siddhêśvara and Phalgunêśvara temples and also of the Ēkanâthêśvari temple are composed of such caves. To the same period belongs the Pañchalingêśvara temple on the hill neighbouring on the south-west. Such cave-shrines are also found in Paradêśappa's cave near Ankle Matt and on the top of Dhavalappana Guḍḍa. The older of these cave-shrines appear to belong to the late cave-temple period of the Dakhan which may reach back to the 9th century A.D. or even earlier. The most famous of these early temples was that of Hiḍimbêśvara which is often mentioned in the inscriptions.

Later on, stone *śikhara*s of the Châlukyan type, square in plan, with horizontal lines of light and shade were set up on the rocks and boulders overhanging the shrines. Maṇṭapas or pillared halls were also added to these temples with small open porches in front. On each side of the porch was a jayali (platform) bounded by stone-parapets of the rounded type so commonly seen in Hoysala temples. A typical structure of this kind is the Phalgunêśvara temple the maṇṭapa of which was constructed in 1260 A.D. Similar maṇṭapas were built for the Siddhêśvara and the Hiḍimbêśvara temples also, an important difference being the use of octagonal pillars in the latter instead of the round pillars of the former. Three other objects belonging to the same period are the Gôpâlakrishṇa image on the hill, the Vîrabhadra image in the Siddhêśvara temple and the temple of Bhairavêśvara near Ankle Matt. A noteworthy fact in the construction of these monuments is that though they belong to the Hoysala period they are mostly built of granite and have little evidence of the finely chiselled soap and pot-stone work so characteristic of Hoysala Architecture. That these latter stones also were occasionally used is seen from the existence of a finely ornamented small Basava shrine to the left of the main entrance of the Siddhêśvara temple, the two doorways and perforated screens of the Bhairavêśvara temple and the much later Îśvara temple at Karivarti which has a well carved dome in imitation of the usual Hoysala domes. Excavations may reveal many more such evidences as is seen from the recovery of the jambs and lintel piece of a finely carved soap-stone doorway in the Hulegonḍi defile.

When the pious rulers of Vijayanagar succeeded the Hoysala empire the temples on the hill naturally drew the attention of the local governors who erected a stone gopura and a swing tôraṇa for the temple of Siddhêśvara (1356 A.D.) and a tower for the Hiḍimbêśvara temple (1411 A.D.) As the main temple of Hiḍimbêśvara has no tower, the one built by the Vijayanagar governor was evidently the car-like structure with three floors standing lower down in front of the temple. The other tower leading to the Siddhêśvara temple appears to belong to the same period as it resembles in structure the Hiḍimbêśvara tower and the more elaborately worked stone gopura of the Siddhêśvara temple.

The greatest prosperity of the hill was very probably when the Nâyakas of the Kâmagêṭi line set up their rule as independent kings after the fall of the Vijayanagar Empire. To their days have to be attributed the majority of the old monuments existing on the hill and in the town below. It was they who repaired the old temples, embellished the stone structures with brick and plaster work and constructed new stone buildings in the late Vijayanagar style. To this period may be assigned the cloisters and compound walls of the Siddhêśvara temple in the court yard of which the Nâyakas were being crowned, parts of the Gôpâlakrishṇa temple, the maṇṭapa, monolithic pillar and stone tôraṇa of the Êkanâthêśvari temple, the greater part of the fortifications, and military works like watch towers, granaries and powder magazines and the temples of Uchchangiyamma and other deities in the town below. There were also numerous large buildings of sundried bricks and earth like the Nâyakas' palace which is now in ruins. A remarkable series of reservoirs and water works by which all the rain water falling on the hills was collected and the overflow was led from pond to pond appears to have been to a great extent the work of the Nâyakas. For instance, the overflow of water was led from the little tanks on Lâl-batêri to the Gôpâlasvâmi Hoṇḍa and thence through the Akka-tangiyara Hoṇḍa to Sinîr Hoṇḍa the overflow of which reached Sante Hoṇḍa. On the other side from Doddanna's tank the water flowed through Timmanṇa Nâyaka's tank and the Oḍḍu to the pond called "Nâga-tîrtha" near the first gate of the fort. To this period belong also the plaster work in Paradêśappa's cave and most of the structures on Dhavaḷappana guḍḍa.

Even after its capture by Haidar Ali in 1779, the hill continued to be an important place owing to its military strength and situation.

Mysore Rulers. Tippu built a palace and a mosque in the town below, retained the fortwalls probably adding arched frontages to some of the doorways and stationed his troops in the place. But gradually the hill lost its importance and even the town declined.

Of the monuments which stand either intact or partly ruined, some deserve notice by the archæologist. Proceeding up the hill from the east towards the ruined palace we see five large gateways each leading through a stone wall. The first gate appears to have been built in the last days of Vijayanagar and is ornamented with sculptures of Gaṇḍa-bhêrunḍa, Gaṇêśa and other deities. The fort-wall on either side (ht. about 25') is made of large finely dressed blocks of granite and is a formidable obstacle to the enemy. The elevated ground to the west of this wall is full of the debris of old walls, basements and pottery. At the south end of the ground is a cave temple with a headless seated Śakti figure near which is the powder factory with a pit containing four large grinding stones 5 feet in diameter and connected by toothed wheels. Passing by a stone trough called "Yenne Kôla", (oil tank) we reach the second and the third gateways which have nothing remarkable. The fourth fort-wall is a very strong structure of about 25 ft. in height, the blocks being cemented together. Its gateway is the best of the series having ornamented pillars and walls containing a large number of relief figures. In addition to the common figures of Hanumân, Gaṇêśa, Gajalakshmi and Kâṇṇiga-Mardana, Yâlîs and fish, we notice an elephant goring the earth, a man drumming, a soldier dancing with a dagger in each hand, a hero fighting a tiger, two elephants fighting each other, Krishna dancing with butter in his hand and a dancer in an interesting pose. A few yards higher up near a small Gaṇêśa temple we notice two stone buildings, one of which is roofless and the other intact and strongly built. The small doors leading into the latter, the low floor and heavy roof suggest that it was a powder magazine, though tradition calls it a garaḍi or gymnasium. The fifth gateway which is supported on the south by another large magazine leads to the area in which the temples and other important buildings are situated.

At a considerable height to the north is the old flagstaff platform known as "Jhāṇḍā-Batêri", and near by is the temple of Ēka-Ekanathesvari Temple. nāthêśvari the patron goddess of the hill. In the cave shrine which serves as its garbhagriha is a large relief head (ht. 2 ft.) of the goddess carved out of the living rock. She wears a kirīṭa and by her side is a small seated image (in the round) of Kālī, holding (commencing from the front back hand, clockwise): trident, ḍamaruga, bowl, and sword. In the navaraṅga is a small image of Bhairava and a pair of portrait paintings of Krishṇa-rāja III of Mysore and his queen. The hereditary Viraśaiva priest of the temple shows to the visitors an object weighing about 1½ lbs. and known generally as a tooth of Hiḍimbâsura. It is probably a left molar-tooth of a middle sized elephant. A smaller specimen of the same kind is kept in the Hiḍimbêśvara temple. The mukhamantapa is a recent building of the eighteenth century. The terrace in front of the temple has two low shrines containing the images of a Nâyaka and a Nâyaka with a queen. Opposite to the door of the temple, to its south is a large monolithic pillar about 40 ft. high and one yard square at the bottom, strengthened by a platform of dressed stone beams rivetted with iron hoops (Plate VI, 2). Its shaft has sixteen concave sides with octagonal mouldings and on the top is a fine lotus capital. On the north side of the pillar is a relief image (ht. 3 ft.) of a Pāḷeyagâr wearing long hair tied up on top of the head, beard, earrings, necklaces, armlets, bracelets, girdle with dagger, kâcha, daṭṭi, loin cloth and anklets. He stands with folded hands and is evidently the Nâyaka who got the pillar set up. On the east face of the pillar is his queen with her hair done up in a bun and wearing earrings, necklace, armlets, girdle and sâri. The upper part of the body is covered only by a tight-fitting bodice, as becomes the sanctity of the place. The people wrongly point to this image as that of a pregnant woman supposed to have been sacrificed when the pillar was erected. To its south, is a stone frame or tôraṇa made up of two lofty granite jambs supporting a lintel beam. To the latter are attached chains holding a swinging board on which the goddess used to swing in the past. But it is said that the rulers of Chitradruga used to swing themselves high up in the air and witness the pūjâ of the goddess. Near the swing-frame is a wooden sidi pillar with a pivot on top for the cross-bar¹. It is even now used for the sidi festival which takes place every year in connection with the worship of Ēkanâthêśvari. A little to the west of the swing frame is situated a finely constructed little pond with stepped sides used formerly for the customary ḍakuḷi during the festival season. Near it, is the basement of a disappeared stone pavilion.

(¹) A complete sidi resembles the Meriah pillar of the Madras museum. Very probably the meriah ceremonial of the Gonds has the same origin as the sidi festival of Mysore and the neighbourhood.

A minor gateway leads near a rock on which stands the temple of Hiḍimbêśvara, one of the oldest temples on the hill. (Plate VII, 1.)

✓ Hiḍimbêśvara Temple. Beneath a large boulder surmounted by a stone śikhara is the sanctum containing a linga. A peculiarity in the plan of the temple is that it has two navaraṅgas one leading into the other and a side shrine attached to the inner and perhaps older navaraṅga. In common with the Phalgunêśvara temple of this period the Sukhanâsi is absent while a small porch with a raised seat and a rounded stone parapet on each side takes the place of the mukha-maṇṭapa. The pillars have octagonal or hexagonal shafts and cubical mouldings common to a large number of temples in the neighbourhood while some have the wheel shaped mouldings near the top. The only interesting image of the temple is that kept in the navaraṅga of "Vīrabhadra" with a sword in his right hand and standing on the pedestal of some long lost Sūrya with its seven horses. In the outer navaraṅga is a soap stone inscription¹ of Perumâle daṇḍayaka (1286 A.D.). To the west of the temple lying in a neglected condition on the ground are two other important inscriptions² which deserve to be kept inside the outer navaraṅga.

In front of the Hiḍimbêśvara temple on a lower level is a three-storied stone tower with pillared verandahs which appears to have been built in 1411 A.D. by Mallanna Oḍeyar, son of Dêvarâya I of Vijayanagar. At a little distance on the way to the Siddhêśvara temple is another similar tower (Plate VIII, 1). Both of these very probably were mahâdvâras leading to the temples from a large zig-zag pathway originally running between them. They are suggestive of the rathas of Pallava architecture and tradition points to them as the two cars in which Hiḍimba and Bhîmasat and fought each other. Between the two to the west is a stone swing-frame with a broken soap-stone vīragal. The extent of Hoysala influence on the early architecture of the Vijayanagara empire is noteworthy, since the Dravidian style becomes common at a later stage.

Passing another monolithic pillar and two stone swing-frames we proceed by the side of a long modern stone building occupied by the ✓ Siddhêśvara Temple. Murugi matt. Near by is the mahâdvâra of the Siddhêśvara temple, which, without its later brick and plaster additions is similar to the towers already described, though more ornate and having pillars some of which have round and sixteen sided shafts. Two inscriptions kept inside the temple state that the tower and the swing-frame were erected in the years 1355 and 1356 A.D.³ To the left of the tower is a small soap-stone shrine of Nandi whose rounded pilasters and capitals, ornamental lion faces, creeper designs, Kubjas and female attendants and the ornate form of Nandi suggest that it is a part of an older temple of the Hoysala or the Nolamba period. (Plate VIII, 2). In the quadrangle of the temple are a small water trough and a fire-pit near which the Nâyaka kings of Chitradurga were installed. At the back of the court is a porch leading to a navaranga from which doors give admission to a number of cells. (Plate VIII, 3). A sukhanasi containing images of Nandi and Pârvati leads on the east to the shrine of a natural linga famous as Siddhêśvara linga. In the south wall is a niche containing a relievo-group in stone in which two chiefs with daggers at their girdle and in ceremonial attire hold a linga each in one hand and an upright pike in the other. (Plate VIII, 4). This is one of the best specimens of Śûla-Bramha, a deity, worshipped with much ceremony in the neighbouring districts. A niche in the west wall contains a fine large image of Virabhadra (ht. c. 5') holding in his hands (commencing from the front back hand, clockwise) a sword, a skull-headed mace encircled by a hooded-snake, a bow entwined by similar snake, an oblong shield with two tassels and a sword. He wears a kirîta ornamented with skulls, serpent ear-rings, necklaces, garlands of flowers and skulls, beaded yajñôpavîta, girdle, short loincloth, anklets and toe-rings. Near his left foot Narasimha sits in vîrâsana with folded hands and near his right, Nandi treading on a human head, with the goat-headed Daksha-Bramha behind him. The prabhâvali engraved out of the same stone as the image is quite plain, the sculptor having probably left the work unfinished. Other images in the place are a fine small Gaṇapati, a seated Kâlî and a low-relief image on the east wall, seated in padmâsana with folded hands and wearing neither kirîta nor yajñôpavîta which is pointed out as a portrait of Jakaṇâchârya. There are three inscriptions in the temple.¹ Above the rock which overhangs the temple is a large open cave which has been carefully prepared to serve as a sitting room all the rain water being led out through rock-cut drains. The place has a charm of its own owing to its coolness and the breeze which brings the fragrance of the famous Champaka trees growing nearby.

Leaving the Siddhêśvara temple, we crawl up the faces of some rocks to the

The Palace. Tuppada Koṇa or Ghee-pond which appears to be after all a powder-magazine. A small stone gateway and a short walk by the side of some rocks containing engravings of fighting swordsmen brings us to the ruins of the palace and its granaries. Most of the buildings in this area except a stone room near the "ladies' bath" and a small Subrahmanyêśvara temple behind the palace, are built generally of sundried bricks, semicircular in section. In the midst of powder magazines and granaries stand the roofless walls (ht. c. 20') of several buildings which formed the abode of the Nâyakas. The magnitude of the structures can be imagined from the fact that one hall of more than 70' x 150' has plastered walls 20' high and 3' or 4' thick at the bottom, standing on a stone basement. The peculiarity of the Subrahmanya temple consists in its having only one chamber with a raised platform in the centre on which at present are a linga and two Nâga stones.

A winding thorny path about three furlongs in length leads us to the highest peak of the hill on which is the citadel known as Lâl-Batêri defended by a series of battlemented stone walls. A large pavilion known as Boppayyana-châvaḍi and three ponds for storing rain water exist to-day and there is right at the top another stone pavilion with ornamental sixteen-sided pillars, which was perhaps a temple. The last of the Nâyakas is said to have been captured here by the Mysore troops. (The bricks used here are $10.5'' \times 7.5'' \times 2''$). A fine flight of steps on the west leads down to the "echo-rock" wherefrom two huge boulders on two opposite peaks give fine echoes, which are clear enough for half a dozen syllables. A second faint echo is also heard reflected by the rocks behind Gôpâlakṛishṇa temple.

The steps lead down to a large temple of Gôpâlakṛishṇa. It is a structure in the Dravidian style with the usual garbhagriha and sukhanâsi, a six pillared navaranga and a large four pillared closed mukhamantapa. The chief peculiarity of the plan is a closed passage round the garbhagriha meant for circumambulation. The garbhagriha ($10' \times 8'$) has an image of Gôpâla-Kṛishṇa (ht. $3' 6''$.) which appears to be a very old one, mention of it being found in inscriptions of 1338 A.D.¹ (Plate VII, 2.)

The image shows many of the characteristics of Hoysala sculptures but is ruder and less elegant. The god stands cross-legged playing on a flute and his hair which is not encumbered by a kirîṭa is done up in a bun on the left side of the head. On either side of him are cows listening to his flute with female chauri-bearers below them. The prabhâvali has the images of the ten avatâras in the usual Hoysala form, Kṛishṇa being absent while Balarâma and Buddha are present. In the sukhanâsi is a seated image of Lakshmi with two hands in the abhaya and varada postures while the other two hold lotuses. The sukhanâsi doorway has a dvârapâla (ht. $4'$) on either side and Gajalakshmi on the lintel, this part of the temple being older than the mukhamantapa. In the navaranga are a number of images among which may be mentioned Gaṇêśa, Garuḍa, Brahma, and Vishvaksêna. The last has the front right hand in the tarjani pose while the others hold the chakra, śankha and gadâ. As is usual in Śrîvaiṣṇava temples, stone images of the following saints are also kept in the navaranga: Periyâlvâr, Tirumangai-âlvâr, Pêyâlvâr, Pûdattâlvâr, Poyhavâlvâr, Âlavandâr, Nâthamuni, Kulâśêkharâlvâr, Tonḍarâlvâr, Bhâshyakâra, Madhurakavi and Nammâlvâr. The navaranga has four fine pillars, each made of five smaller pillars at the bottom and the ceiling has a large shallow dome with Padma and pendant, and on the beam are relief-figures of Indra, Kṛishṇa and other deities. One beam and a corner stone are cracked and need supports, especially the latter.

Opposite to the temple is Gôpâlakṛishṇa-svâmi's pond with a Hoysala inscription on the eastern rock¹. Passing through a fort-gate we reach two ponds known as Akkatangiyara Hoṇḍa near which is a small temple of Viśvanâthêśvara with the sanctum under an overhanging rock. Higher up at a little distance is a high-walled enclosure popularly known as the mint. In a corner of the yard is a stone mantapa (10'×10') in the floor of which is an opening leading to a strong stone cellar more than 8' deep. In the latter coins are said to have been stored. A pathway towards the north-west leads us out of two fort-gates near the second of which between two rocks is a narrow, winding passage known as onake kiṇḍi. A soldier's wife, by name Ôbavva, is said to have defended it during a siege of the fortress slaying hundreds of sepoys with a wooden pestle before she fell. A small shrine near it is supposed to commemorate her heroism. Opposite to the shrine is a fine old Hanumân carved in relief on a boulder.

A little further down is the temple of Phalgunêśvara, a cave shrine facing westward, for which a mantapa was built in 1260 A.D.². (Plate VII, 3.) The inscription recording this event is preserved near the temple. As in the case of the Hiḍim-bêśvara temple the boulder over-hanging the garbhagriha is crowned with a stone śikhara, and the porch in front of the mantapa has rounded parapet walls and projecting stoneeaves. Unlike in the other temples, the pillars though of granite are well rounded. The isolated situation of this temple leads us to think that it possibly comes from the days when a Hoysala town flourished in the Chandravalli valley.

The most striking of the ancient monuments of the Chitradurga hill are the remarkable series of fortifications, which made the place well-nigh impregnable. The old Hindu walls of the Vijayanagar period were added to and improved by French engineers in the employ of the Nâyaka kings. Battlements and bastions were added, moats were dug up and hill batteries were set up provided with magazines and watch towers. The numerous caves afforded natural shelter for the hardy Bêgâr and Bêḍar soldiers from the latter of whom Hyder recruited his famous "Bêḍar" battallions.

It is proposed to describe the monuments of Huligondi in the Excavation supplement and the monuments in Chitradurga town in a later report.

SOME ANCIENT COINS OF THE DEKHAN: HOYSALA; VIJAYANAGAR; MYSORE.

NUMISMATICS.

I. HOYSALA COINS.¹

Sir Walter Elliot, in his famous work on the coins of Southern India,² and Rao Bahadur R. Narasimhacharya in the Mysore Archæological Reports,³ have published a number of coins and supplied valuable information on the issues of the Hoysala dynasty. An attempt will be made here to give such additional information as may have become available during recent years, while noting the coins already published.

Though the Hoysala kingdom was a province of the Châlukyan empire which became independent in the 12th century, Hoysala coins do not have much in common with the coins of the Châlukyas. The latter, of which a large number of varâhas have been known bearing the names of Jagadêkamalla and Trailôkyamalla, are definitely of the punch-marked variety bearing on their obverse 9 punch-marks among which are generally 5 lions. The reverse is blank and the varâhas weigh about 57 or 58 grains. The Hoysala coins, on the other hand, are double die-struck, larger and better made, and weigh about 62 to 63 grains. The only common feature between the two classes is the presence of the lion type, and it is possible that the Hoysala lion crest is in some way connected with the Châlukyan lion type. The weight of 63 grains at once suggests a connection with the Chôla coins whose standard weight was also about 63 grains. A little before the Hoysala dynasty rose to power the Châlukyas and the Chôlas had struggled for the control of the modern Mysore area ; and, the Chôla power which had declined from the greatness attained by it in the 11th century yet lingered in the south eastern Kannaḍa districts. Among the achievements of the early Hoysalas was the destruction of the Chôla power in the Kannaḍa country. In fact, it was from the Chôla governor that Vishṇuvardhana wrested Talkâḍ in 1116 A.D. It seems strange that this ruler who proclaimed that he was only a mahâmaṇḍalêśvara under the Châlukyan Empire should have adopted the Chôla weight standard of 63 grains for his coins. Probably this standard had become established during the century of Chôla rule in Mysore so strongly that a conquering enemy had to adopt it.

(2) Page 80 ff and Pl. III Nos. 90-92.

(3) 1917, P. 63; 1921, P. 32.

Another class of coins which resembles the issues of the Hoysalas more than those of the Chôlas or the Châlukyas is that of the Kalachurya dynasty. But as the accession of Bijjala took place after the death of Vishṇuvardhana Hoysala, the resemblance is due to the fact that the Kalachuryas imitated some of the traits of the Hoysala coins which were already well known.

The first Hoysala to whom coins can be definitely assigned is Vishṇuvardhana, two types of whose varâhas have been known.
Vishnuvardhana

Varâhas.—Type A—Two Lions.

Obverse.—In bordering linear circle, maned lion to right with left fore paw raised and face turned towards a pillar on which is mounted a discus. Above it is another similar smaller lion with sun to right and moon to left.

Reverse.—Border : linear circle. 3-line legend in fine old Kannaḍa characters with straight rules between the lines :

1. śrī Ta
2. la kâ ḍu
3. go ṇḍaḥ.

[Plate IX, 1.]

Talakâḍuḡṇḍa is the title taken by Vishṇuvardhana after his general Gangarâja took Talkâḍ. Of the lions on the obverse the upper one probably stands for the Hoysala Lion crest which is very similar in form to the lion appearing on the Châlukya coins. The larger and lower lion represents the deity whose vehicle the lion is, viz., Durgâ or Châmuṇḍâ. The full group is seen in the next type and a fine image of the goddess is preserved in the Kappe Chennigarâya temple at Bêlûr showing that her worship was popular in the time of Vishṇuvardhana. The custom of figuring the vehicle instead of the deity is observed in the later Mysore coins of Kṛishṇarâja III and in the present day Mysore coat of arms where the lion stands for Châmuṇḍâ.

Type B.—Châmuṇḍâ.

Gold ; Size. 6" ; weight 63 grains.

Obverse.—Linear border ; maned lion to right, parts of his body being represented by large and small disjointed pellets ; on his back sits the goddess Châmuṇḍâ wearing crown and holding conch and discus in two hands. Her other hands are not clearly seen. Discus to her left and conch to her right.

1. śrī No
2. ṇam-ba-vâ-ḍi
3. go ṇḍaḥ

[Plate IX, 2.]

After conquering Gangavâḍi, Vishṇuvardhana took Noḷambavâḍi and assumed the title Noḷambavâḍiḡṇḍa.

No coins have till now been definitely attributed to any Hoysala king other than Vishṇuvardhana. But a varâha with the legend 'Pratâpa Nârasimha' has been published by Hultzsch.¹ Owing to the occurrence of the title Pratâpa as on the Vijayanagar coins this specimen has been attributed to one of the Narasimhas who ruled Vijayanagar in the period of usurpations. But since another coin bearing the name Narasimha and having the Vijayanagar weight standard and other characteristics is known, serious doubt is thrown on the attribution of the present coin to Vijayanagar. The fact that the Vijayanagar varâhas weighed 52 grains while the coin in question weighs 63 grains settles the question and it is clear that it is a Hoysala coin. The presence of the Châmunḍâ type on the obverse exactly similar to type B above and the paleography and form of the legend on the reverse definitely prove that the coin was issued by a Hoysala possibly Narasimha I.

Type : Châmunḍâ.

Gold ; size. 55" ; weight 63 grains.

Obverse.—Châmunḍâ on lion similar to B.

Reverse.—Linear border ; 3 line old Kannaḍa legend with interlinear rules :

1. śrî Pra
2. tâ pa Nâ ra
3. sim gha.

The scholar who first attributed any haṇas to the Hoysalas was Rao Bahadur R. Narasimhâchârya. He found them among the coins in the possession of patel Chikkannagaḍa of Haḷêbîḍ, and published them with a short note.⁴ But many more Hoysala haṇas have been seen by scholars without being recognised, since several types of small gold and silver pieces were vaguely described under the name 'Vîrarâyi haṇa.'

Among the old haṇas or fanams found in large numbers in South India the most common appear to be the Vîrarâyi haṇas. They have been obtained in Coimbatore, North Canara, Kistna, Chingleput, Caddapah, Tanjore, Godavari, Madura, North Arcot, South Arcot, Malabar, Salem, Nellore and Coorg, and also found in Cochin where Buchanan thinks some of them were minted, and in Bangalore, Kolar and Chitaldrug. A specimen was obtained at Balapur on the bank of the Mahânadi in Central India.² About the authorship of these coins there has existed a vague uncertainty, Marsden attributing them³ to a Coorg Raja and Elliot accepting Buchanan's view that they belong to the west coast. The same view is upheld in the Mysore Archaeological report 1922, P. 32 where some specimens obtained from the Shimoga District are described and figured. Mr. R. Srinivâsarâghava Iyengar of the Madras Museum who has with great patience analysed the specimens in the Madras museum into 16 different varieties is also uncertain about their date and authorship¹. A close examination of the small gold and silver coins which go by the name of Vîrarâyi fanams shows that they can only have been issued by different people from different places.

But the most common kind is similar to those published by Elliot² and R. Narasimhâchârya³. It has on its obverse a figure formed by several curved lines with a large number of dots on one side, while on the reverse is a long figure with 4 rows of dots on one side described either as uncertain or as a crocodile. The correct description and attribution of this type is important in a study of South Indian fanams. The identity of the obverse device becomes clear only when we consider it along with the other Hoysala fanams such as those found at Halêbîd⁴. On the latter the obverse figure is definitely a maned lion moving to right exactly as on the Hoysala varâhas described above. It is represented in a highly conventionalised form by some dots and lines which to the casual observer look meaningless. The lion's eyes, prominent parts of his snout, his shoulders and paws are represented by dots while a curved line stands for his raised neck, back and arched tail. The crescent-like curve above the lion's back seen in the Halêbîd fanams becomes narrowed into the shape of the vîrarêkhâ or the parabola-like mark worn by Vaishnavas on their forehead. Once the obverse device is identified as the Hoysala lion, the figure on the reverse is easily understood. Coin No. 86 of Elliot's plate III has the lion on the obverse and a boar charging to right on the reverse. No. 189 of his plate IV has a degenerate lion on the one side and a much less degenerate boar on the other. It will thus be seen that the reverse figure is only a conventionalised boar whose elongated snout and curled up tail have led to its being taken for a crocodile. It cannot be a crocodile as on most of the specimens the animal has ears. Thus it is seen that the most common type of Vîrarâyi fanam is only a Hoysala coin with a boar on the reverse.

In support of this attribution the following points may be advanced. 1. The weight of the Vîrarâyi fanam now under consideration is usually 6.2 grains. As a fanam is a tenth part of the varâha the corresponding varâha coin ought to weigh about 62 grains⁵. Such a varâha was that of the Hoysalas. 2. As these coins are found in large numbers between the Kāvêrî and Krishnâ rivers and occur especially in the Mysore State and the Tamil country to its south-east, they could only belong to a large and powerful empire. Vijayanagar is impossible owing to differences in types and weight standards. The other possible empire is that of the Hoysalas.

3. Vîrarâyi fanams are said to be found in large numbers at Halêbîḍ and other well-known Hoysala centres. They have been collected in the Chandravalli excavations on the same level with and in close proximity to an image of Saḷa killing the tiger.

4. The name Vîrarâya occurs among the Hoysalas more than in other dynasties.

Who then was this Vîrarâya? The Chôḷa Vîrarâjêndra may be left out of consideration as the Chôḷa emblems are very different from the lion and the boar, and the Chôḷa coins have been known to be of a different fabric. Ballâḷa I may also be rejected as he is not famous as Vîraballâḷa and as the Vîrarâyi fanams are subsequent and degenerate forms of the earlier Hoysala fanams. The boar on the reverse is more probably a later revived form than a continuation of the Châlukyan boar. Thus the claims of Vîraballâḷa II and of Vîraballâḷa III have to come in for final consideration. The contrast between the original boar type, figured by Elliot¹ which is small and thick with a fine lion and a boar, and the degenerate common Vîrarâyi with broad flan and conventionalised devices suggest the view that the former was issued by Vîraballâḷa II when art was still in a flourishing condition, and the latter belongs to Vîraballâḷa III and his tempestuous days. The occurrence at Halêbîḍ of at least three other reverse types makes it possible that some three or four generations intervened between the earlier kind of boar type and the later broad variety. Thus the author of the common Vîrarâyi fanams appears to be Vîraballâḷa III who ruled south India below the Krishnâ for over half a century and was perhaps popularly known as Vîrarâya.

A large copper coin of this kind has also been known².

The collection of the Halêbîḍ patel has at least four other types which may be arranged in the order of increasing degeneration and studied :—

Other types.

1. Lion and Narasimha.

Gold; size '65"; weight 6·7 grs.

[Plate IX. 4.]

The coin of Narasimha I (described on page 24) does not have any figure of Narasimha upon it. As the present type is different in fabric and the obverse closely resembles the coin attributed to Vîraballâḷa II it may be assigned to Narasimha II.

(¹) Plate IX, 8; Also Elliot. C. S. I., Plate. III 86.

(²) Plate IX, 12.

2. Standing Archer.

Gold ; size. .27" ; weight 6.5 grs.

Reverse.—Man standing holding strung bow in his left hand with the shaft resting on his shoulder. In right field part of bordering circle. [Plate IX, 5. The figure is either Râma or Śiva as Kirâta, more probably the former. The coin may, with some probability, be assigned to Sômêśvara who may have been connected in some way with Râma as seen by the name of Râmanâtha which he gave to his younger son.

Gold ; size. .32" ; weight 6.3 grs.

[Plate IX, 6.

3.(b) Durgâ—Quarter haṇa.

Gold ; Size. .15" ; weight 1.1 grs.

Obverse.—Similar to obverse of No. 2. The curved line shows 3 pellets.

Reverse.—Dancing Durgâ.

[Plate IX, 7.

The reverse type is the same as that of No. 3a, the author being probably the same. The existence of a quarter haṇa of gold whose value to-day would be about two annas is noteworthy. Coins of similar denomination existed under the Gangas.

[Plate IX, 7.

4. Boar.

Gold ; Size. .32" to .37" ; weight 6.3 grs.

Obverse.—Lion to right, its neck, body and tail being represented by curved lines, while its face and forelegs are indicated by four and eight pellets respectively. Above, Vîrarêkhâ.

Reverse.—Boar to right with tail curled up. Ears may or may not be visible. The legs are represented each by three dots standing for the three joints.

[Plate IX, 8 to 11.

This is the most common type of Vîrarâyî haṇa. As shown above it may be attributed to Vîraballâḷa III. Copper and silver coins of similar fabric are also known. See E. C. S. I. Plate IV, No. 104.

[Plate IX, 12.

It is hoped to publish later a detailed examination of the other varieties known as Vîrarâyîhaṇas.

II. SOME PROVINCIAL COINS OF VIJAYANAGAR.

The remarkable uniformity and continuity of the coins of the Vijayanagar emperors show that a very strong controlling influence was exercised by the imperial government on the issue of coinage. But at the same time it is a well-known fact that the issue of local coins by governors and other authorities was often permitted. Provincial issues. The mention of the gadyâṇas issued in the reign of Harihara¹ from Mangalûru and Bâraṇanûru and the existence of copper coins of the elephant type with the legend *la—mana daṇâyakaru*² go to show that the provincial coins were of both gold and copper. Towards the last days of the empire especially the varieties of local coins appear to have been so numerous that Caesar Frederick writes in connection with his journey from Vijayanagar to Goa in 1567 : “When as we came into a new Governor’s country, as every day we did, although they were all tributarie to the king of Bezeneger, yet everyone of them stamped a several coin of copper, so that the money that we took this day would not serve the next³.” It would be interesting to find out what manner of coins the provincial coppers of Vijayanagar were. In this connection we may consider the nature and authorship of the coins commonly called the chequered reverse type.

Marsden, Elliot and many other writers have already noted the fact that coins with crossed lines on the reverse occur largely in and around the Mysore State ; and though some of them have been uncertain about their authorship, Marsden and Tufnell have attributed them to the Mysore State. A closer study of this series reveals its exceedingly interesting nature.

On detailed examination it is possible to arrange the reverse designs into six classes forming a gradual series⁴. (1) Those with the legible Nâgari legends : Pratâpa-Kṛishṇarâya, Pratâpa-Achyutarâya and Pratâpa-Sadâśivarâya with thick double lines between the lines, the vertical strokes of the Nâgari characters in the three lines being so placed that they appear like parts of straight lines. (2) The vertical lines are joined to each other forming a chequered pattern, while in the inter-spaces there are imitation Nâgari characters. (3) Two sets of vertical and horizontal lines cross each other and in the inter-spaces a meaningless but definitely formed L shaped design appears. (4) In similar spaces appear small curved lines regular but meaningless, and not connected with the horizontal or vertical lines. (5) In similar inter-spaces regular small circles appear. (6) Instead of double lines crossing each other two sets of equi-distant parallel lines cross at right angles with the inter-spaces either blank or ornamented by single pellets.

The natural successors of the last series appear to be coins with legends in Nâgari, Kannaḍa, etc., definitely naming some ruler. The latter legends like Śrī Rājā Siva Chhatrapati of Mahārāshṭra, Śrī Sadāsiva of Keladi, Kaṇṭhīrava Narasarāja of Mysore and Vīra Venkaṭa Rāva of Tanjore mostly belong to about the middle of the 17th century when the empire of Vijayanagar disappeared. An important clue to the significance of the chequered reverse device is obtained by the barbarous imitations of the Nâgari legends of the Vijayanagar emperors. A reasonable explanation is that even from the days of Kṛishṇarāja and Achyuta the local mints of the districts commenced to issue coins bearing the emperors' names. When the power of the empire began to decline and the local authorities grew more and more out of touch with the central power or unwilling to acknowledge its supremacy, the reverse device underwent a gradual degeneration until at last the chequered pattern stood meaningless. Though it is natural to think that the rapidity of degeneration differed in different mints, the sequence order of degeneration may possibly be something like the classification above made. Granting about a generation for each kind of device mentioned we can make a rough calculation and note that the chequered reverse type had become established before the middle of the seventeenth century. It is quite possible that it might have continued in use on copper coins here and there even in the earlier part of the eighteenth century as it appears to have done in Mysore, where, on the Kannaḍa numeral types, the chequered reverse appears in a variety of forms.

A close study reveals the very interesting fact that more than thirty different devices appear on the obverse¹. Arranged in the traditional order of Hindu Mythology they would stand thus :—(1) Gaṇēśa, (2) Half-swan Sarasvati, (3) Sarasvati in human form, (4) Lakshmi on lotus, (5) Goddess riding on elephant, (6) Seated Goddess—Gauri, (7) Matsyâvatâra—half human, (8) Matsyâvatâra—fish, (9) Tortoise, (10) Boar, (11) Lion looking forward, to left or to right, (12) Lion facing, (13) Lion seated, (14) Lion face, (15) Vâmana, (16) Paraśurâma (reverse device) (17) Sitâ-Râma, (18) Kôḍaṇḍa Râma, (19) Muralīdhara Kṛishṇa, (20) Buddha, (21) Kalki, (22) Gaṇḍabhêruṇḍa, (23) Discus, (24) Conch, (25) Bell, (26) Lotus, (27) Hanumân, (28) Garuḍa, (29) Bull, (30) Deer, (31) Tiger, (32) Peacock, (33) Sword, (34) Dagger with garland, (35) Dagger between conch and discus, (36) Trumpeting elephant, (37) Elephant with lowered trunk, (38) Consorts on horse-back.

Marsden and Tufnell have published a few of these and attributed them all to the Mysore State. This attribution appears to be incorrect, because : (1) the Mysore State did not have under the Hindu rulers the greatness necessary for the issue of these varied types ; (2) a large number of them come from parts of South India which were definitely outside the Mysore State and were within the old Vijayanagar empire ; (3) the Mysore State has its own distinctive coinage based on the model of the Elephant type, one of the provincial issues of Vijayanagar ; (4) the distinctive Vaishṇava character of the series agrees well with that of the Vijayanagar empire in its last days ; (5) the barbarous imitation of Nāgari legends would more naturally belong to a declining empire than to a small centralised and growing state like Mysore. Of course Mysore got its Elephant type from Vijayanagar just as other parts of South India got other devices.

EARLY COINS OF THE KINGDOM OF MYSORE.

The modern territories of Mysore were in the later days of Vijayanagar governed by numerous local rulers who were controlled by provincial Viceroys ruling from places like Śrīrangapaṭṭana and Muḷabāgal. When in 1610 Rāja Oḍeyar, chief of Mysore, wrested the viceroyalty of Śrīrangapaṭṭana and was confirmed in that post by the emperor Venkaṭa Rāya I, the Mysore State rose to a position of great importance. From the inscriptions we gather that until 1646 the Mysore chiefs definitely acknowledged the supremacy of Vijayanagar. During this period they do not appear to have minted any distinctive coins of their own. But it is possible that the elephant device, which became later definitely associated with Mysore, was being used for the coins issued from the Śrīrangapaṭṭana mint during this period.

KANṬHIRAVA NARASA RAJA.

Between 1646, when Kanṭhirava Narasārāja defeated the combined forces of the Emperor and the Keladi Nāyaka, and 1666 ¹ when Doḍḍa Dēva Raja declared himself an independent king, the political position of Mysore was changing from year to year. Some time after 1646 Kanṭhirava Narasārāja issued the first independent coins of the Mysore State. Naturally he followed in almost every detail the example of the imperial coins including the standard weight of 52 grains. The Bangalore Museum collection has an interesting half-varaha ² of this ruler.

Type I. Lakshmī-Narasimha.

(¹) Bherya plates, Ep. Car. Vol. IV. Yedatore 54.

(²) See also Elliot C. S. I. Plate III. Nos. 101 and 102.

Reverse.—Three-line Nâgarî legend.

1. Śrî Kaṃ (ṭhî)
2. (ra) va Na ra
3. (sa) râ ja

[Plate IX, 27, 28.]

It will be seen that in its weight, in the presence of a god on the obverse¹ and in the use of Nâgarî for the three-line legend on the reverse, the Vijayanagar model is closely followed. It looks appropriate also that, since Kṛishṇarâya's varâhas have Kṛishṇa and Venkaṭarâya's Venkaṭêśa, Narasarâja's coins should have Narasimha.

Kaṇṭhirayi Haṇa—Type: Narasimha.

Gold: size. 25"; weight 5·2 grains.

Obverse.—Four-armed Narasimha seated to front holding conch and discus.

Reverse.—Variety A: Three-line Nâgarî legend, with interlinear double rules, probably standing for

1. Śrî,
2. Kaṃ ṭhî
3. ra va

[Plate IX, 29.]

Variety B.—Three-line legend—uncertain with similar rules.

[Plate IX, 30.]

Next to the Vîrarâyi haṇa, the Kaṇṭhîrâyi haṇa is the most common gold coin in South India. The successors of Narasarâja and many of their neighbours appear to have issued these haṇas which served as inter-statal currency for nearly a century in South India. It is well-known that even as late as the early 19th century Dewan Pûrṇayya got Kaṇṭhîrâyi haṇas minted in large numbers. Pûrṇayya's issues are known as Giḍḍa or small Kaṇṭhîrâyi haṇas while the issues of Narasarâja are called Agala or broad Kaṇṭhîrâyi haṇas.

No distinctive copper coins of Narasarâja are known. But among the copper coins of the chequered reverse type, described under the Provincial coins of Vijayanagar² is a variety with a lion facing and seated on its haunches which may as well have been issued by Kaṇṭhîra va Narasarâja.

CHIKKA-DEVARAJA.

No coins are known which can be definitely attributed to the successors of Narasarâja until we come to the reign of Chikka-Dêvarâja. Elliot long ago published³ a coin regarding the authorship of which he was doubtful.

(¹) Lakshmî-Narasimha actually appears on the coins of Harihara I.

(²) See Page 29 of this report.

(³) Elliot C. S. I. No. 106. Plate III.

Gold ; Size. 4" ; weight 52·7 grains.

Obverse.—Under ornamental arch Baby Kṛishṇa dancing, wearing girdle of jingles and holding a lump of butter in his right hand, while the left is outstretched. Near his feet is a curved line with a three-pronged head which is either the petals of a lotus or the hoods of a cobra. In the latter case the image would be that of Kālingamardana and in the former, of Navanīta-nṛitta Kṛishṇa.

Reverse.—Three-line Nāgari legend with single intervening rules :

1. Śrī Chi
2. ka de va
3. rā ja

[Plate IX, 31.]

A half-varāha weighing 25·7 grains has been published by Elliot (No. 107) and another exists in the Bangalore Museum collection. It is exactly similar to the above varāha, but the legend appears to be slightly different. [Plate IX, 32.]

Chikkadēvarāja altered the old Mysore type both on the obverse and on the reverse ; but he kept up the old weight standard.

KANNADA NUMERAL TYPE.

Large numbers of coins are found near Mysore having a chequered pattern on the reverse with meaningless symbols in the inter-spaces and bearing on the obverse a bordering circle of dots in the centre of which is a Kannaḍa numeral. These numbers range generally from one to thirty one ¹ and there can be little doubt that they belong to some Mysore king. As all the varieties are of nearly the same weight and size, it is clear that the numbers do not indicate their value. The only possible explanation would perhaps be that the numbers stand for the regnal years of issue. Who then was the Mysore king who reigned for 31 years ? It has been suggested that the coins could be attributed to Doḍḍakrishṇarāja who reigned between 1713 to 1731. But it may be noted here that the Mysore king who reigned for 31 years and died in the 32nd year was Chikkadēvarāja who reigned from 1672 to 1704. It may also be noted that it was in the reign of Chikkadēvarāja that Moghul influence was very strong at Mysore leading to a political alliance between Chikkadēvarāja and Aurangzeb and the introduction into Mysore of the Moghul system of administration. It is possible that the famous prime minister of Mysore at this time, the Jain Viśālāksha Paṇḍita, might have introduced the system of minting the regnal years on the copper coins to commemorate the accession to the throne of his friend and pupil Chikkadêvarâja. However the attribution cannot be beyond doubt as no corroborative evidence has yet been available. On the other hand a fact which somewhat disturbs this conclusion is found in the existence of a smaller coin in the collection of this department with chequered reverse, bearing on the obverse the numeral 40.¹ Jackson² mentions types with the numerals 32 and 33. The other numbers after 31 are not to be seen anywhere now. We can only assume that the reckoning introduced by Chikkadêvarâja was possibly continued by his successors.

ELEPHANT TYPE.

By far the most numerous kind of copper coin found in and around the Mysore State is that with a chequered pattern on the reverse and the elephant on the obverse. The latter device is seen in a large number of varieties, the elephant moving to left or to right, the trunk and tail lifted up or lowered, and sometimes the animal's back being caparisoned. The occurrence of this type among the ruins of places like Muḷabâgal which was outside the Mysore area until the days of Hyder, suggests the view that the type was originally one of the Vijayanagar provincial types which might have been adopted by Mysore. That this was the prevailing type in old Mysore is borne out by the fact that the copper coins of Hyder and Tippu have the elephant type, which may have been inherited by them from the period of the Daḷavâyis. So it looks most probable that the chequered reverse type with an elephant on the obverse was the most common type of copper coin in the early Mysore State and was issued probably from the time of Narasarâja down to the regime of Hyder, i.e., between 1646 and 1761 with perhaps an interruption of about 31 or 41 years about the time of Chikkadêvarâj.

No other coins have been known which are definitely attributable to the Mysore State before the time of Hyder.

PART IV.

MANUSCRIPTS.

(1) DHANAVÂSTU.

An interesting palm leaf manuscript in a good state of preservation was received from Mr. K. S. Krishnappa, Head Draftsman, Railway Division, Hassan, and was found to contain a Kannaḍa work named Dhana-Vâstu or Treasure Sites. It has 167 well-written leaves and purports to describe the sites in South India where treasure is to be found. The manuscript is 16"×1 $\frac{3}{8}$ "×4" (with boards). The characters are modern Kannaḍa with a few peculiarities. The language is mostly Kannaḍa prose interspersed with Sanskrit stanzas full of errors, followed by explanatory notes. Astronomical and mathematical calculations occupy an important portion of the work. Viśvakarma the divine architect is said to have inspired the author.

The manuscript commences with a benedictory note to god Agni with a passing reference to the three forms: Dakṣiṇa, Gârhapatyā and Āhavanîya. Prayers are offered to Sandhyâ, Gâyatri, Śakti, Mahākālî and other female deities in the Yajurvedic form and the method adopted in the ritual is that of the goldsmith community who are also known as Maya Brâhmanas or Viśvakarmas.

The aim of the writer appears to be to record a number of sites supposed to contain large quantities of treasures which could be secured by any member of the community by offering rice, lemons and other things and by sacrificing a number of innocent victims such as buffaloes, goats, pigs and cocks. According to this manuscript, each site is guarded by a demon or some unseen power to whom the above offerings should be made by the treasure seekers.

Mention is made in the work of places like Maṇipura (Châmarâjanagar Taluk) Kikkêri, Beḷgoḷa also called Chôlarâjapura, Châmarâjapaṭṭana, Râmanâthapura, Beṭṭadapura, Arkalgûḍ, Chûta-pura or Mâgaḍi, Sâvandidurga, Piriypaṭna and other places in the Mysore State. Even the temple of Agastyêśvara (probably that at Tirumakûḍlu) is mentioned by the writer.

The places where such fabulous treasure troves are to be found are usually near temples, below forts (Durgas) and at the foot of trees like the ficus religiosa. The work is not of any literary value and the language is full of errors. The information given is unreliable. The work is interesting only as a recorded example of the strange ideas current among the rural folk regarding the treasures buried underground.

(2) PARADÂRA SÔDARA RÂMANA KATHE.

There is a general impression that there are fewer historical works in Kannaḍa than in some of its sister languages; but it must be confessed that sufficient effort has not been made for the collection of historical material from Kannaḍa works.

Sources of history in Kannaḍa.

More than six years ago, Mr. M. H. Rama Śarma of Bangalore, who was searching for materials on Vijayanagar history called the attention of the present Director of Archæology to the existence in the Oriental Library at Mysore of four palm leaf manuscripts which contained the heroic story of Râmanâtha, a Karnâṭaka prince of the 14th century, who fought the invading armies of Delhi and fell in the defence of his country. Two of the manuscripts are copies of a Kannaḍa poetical work by Nanjuṇḍa, while the other two are copies of a smaller work by Ganga. Mr. Rama Śarma has since then made a detailed study of the subject and his valuable and original discoveries will be published elsewhere. With due acknowledgments to that scholar for many identifications and interpretations, an attempt is here made to give a summary of the story as gathered from one of the manuscripts of Nanjuṇḍa's work: Paradâra Sôdara Râmana Kathe.

The manuscript now used is number cd 12 ka in the manuscript catalogue of the Library. The first leaf is missing and the story, as we have it here, does not run on quite to the end. The famous deeds of valour done by Kumâra Râmanâtha, son of King Kampila of Kunmaṭa, are narrated in the present manuscript in ten âśvâsas which are divided into 37 chapters and contain in all about 4,487 stanzas. There are 226 leaves each measuring 1' by 2". (Plate X, 2.)

The condition of the manuscript is very good as may be judged by the neatly preserved leaves and the easily readable letters. Each line on each leaf is numbered as the leaf itself. The lines run regularly, and the characters are well-formed. This manuscript, which is certainly a copy of an earlier one, may probably belong to the middle of the eighteenth century.

At the end of every Âśvâsa of the poem, the author Nanjuṇḍa, gives the names of his own grand-father, father and two paternal uncles of whom one was older and the other younger than his father. Though there is not much indication even in the manuscript as to the date of the poet, these names and the titles attached to them together with certain indirect evidences, go a great way in determining the period when the poet lived.

The Author.

The name of his grand-father was Vijaya¹, that of his father, Mâdhava², and that of his younger paternal uncle Vijaya³. The last named is said to have died in battle in the presence of his master Nanjarâya or Nanjarâja, who ruled Changanâḍ between 1502 and 1533.⁴ On page 5a of the manuscript⁵ the poet says :—

ಚಂಗನಾಡಾಳ್ ನಾಲ್ವತ್ತು ನಾಯಕಗಜ |
 ಸಿಂಗನೇಪ ಮಾಧವನಾ ||
 ಅಂಗೋದ್ಭವನಂಜುಂಡನಾನಿದನುಮ |
 ನಂಗೋ ಪೇಳ್ವ ರಸಿಕರ ||
 ಯದುಕುರಾಮಾತ್ಮಕೆಂದೆಂಬ ಕುರಾಗತ |
 ವಿದಿತಬರಿದನಾಂತೆನೆವಾ ||
 ಚದುರಮಾಧವನಾತ್ಮಜ ನಂಜುಂಡನಾ |
 ನೊದವಿ ಪೇಳಿದನೀಕ್ರೃತಿಯಾ ||

It is thus certain that the poet was connected with Changanâḍ and was a descendant of a family of ministers. On the strength of the phrases and attributes used by the poet, Mr. R. Narasimhachar⁶ opines that his father Mâdhava must have been a brother of Mangarasa, who was the author of Jayanripakâvya, and other works and lived in 1508⁷. The year 1525 has been given by Mr. R. Narasimhachar as the probable date of the work. As Nanjunḍa is said to have been killed in battle by a general of Râja Oḍeyar of Mysore (1578-1617)⁸ the work was more probably produced about the year 1570.

In spite of the fact that more than two centuries elapsed between the death of Kumâra Râma and the composition of the work, and that poetic fancy plays a free part in the descriptions, the poem is remarkably valuable as a historical work. The facts mentioned in it about the political condition of the Dakhan in the early part of the fourteenth century are corroborated to a surprising extent by the evidence of Nuniz and Ferishta. The main events relating to the kingdom of Kampilarâya, its relations with the Hoysalas and the Kâkatîyas, and its fall before the Moslems, (c. 1327), may be accepted as definite historical facts, which the poet collected either from the strong local tradition existing near Ānegondi, or, more probably, from some contemporary work, now lost. The information given by Nanjunḍa is historically very important as revealing the existence of a till now unknown fourteenth century kingdom from whose ashes was probably raised up the Vijayanagara empire by Harihara and Bukka, who are stated by Nanjunḍa to have been officers in Kampila's treasury.

OUTLINE OF THE STORY.

Between the oceans, the gigantic waves whereof beat against the coasts that kept them back and to the south of the sacred and divine mount of Meru¹ lay the Karnāṭa country, rich, splendid and glorious,² with innumerable villages, cities, districts, fortresses³ extending from the Kāvêri to the Godāvâri⁴ and containing, by the side of the beautiful Tungabhadra⁵ and a splendid lake,⁶ the famous Pampâkshêtra or Pampâpuri⁷ wherein resided the linga of Virûpâksha. South of this place lay a very huge, fierce and mountainous forest called Hosamale⁸ in the heart of which was situated the strong durga or fortress of Kummaṭa, a historical Eldorado,⁹ populous, prosperous and very rich, with streets and divisions well arranged.

picturesque and imposing by the stables for elephants and horses, theatres, museums¹ etc. Hariharadêvi² was his crowned queen. Baichappa³ was his excellent minister and yuvarâja Bhairava⁴ his son. Ballâla the Hoysala king and Vîrarudra the Kâkatîya king of Orugal were afraid of king Kampila's prowess, which was such that the territories of even the sultan of Delhi and Gajapati-râya could be very easily captured if only Kampa minded⁵. The birth of Kumâra Râmanâtha further strengthened his position against the Sultan of Delhi and the neighbouring kingdoms of Vîrarudra and Ballâla⁶ and fully justified his birudas mûvaru-râyara-gaṇḍa, mîsara-gaṇḍa, gajapati-gaja-simha, narapati-nara-vêtâḷa and the like. No wonder then that Râmanâtha's two sisters, Mâramma and Singamma should feel proud of their valorous and powerful brother who, when he grew up to manhood, married five ladies⁷ and was created the yuvarâja.⁸ His one ambition was to curb and check the vandalism¹ of the Turukas who were a menace to the peace and religion of the country. Râma who had a giant's strength knew how to use it and was thus envied by the neighbouring kings. His horsemanship² and bravery had spread his fame everywhere in the country.

The relation between the kingdoms of Kampila and Ballâla was not at all friendly. The subjects of Kampila had generally the upper hand over those of the Hoysala and often had roamed about in the dominions of Ballâla wresting from the rich³ their riches and raiding the towns and forts⁴.

Once, when Râma sent his messengers to Hulihêru, a place in Ballâla's dominions⁵, the chief of that place dealt severely with them and drove them out. Kampila, on learning what had been done, sent his forces to the place in great fury without any loss of time⁶. The fortifications were captured and Ballâla's men were completely defeated. Ballâla could not contain himself when he heard of the disaster. Gathering a large army from Kongu, Kodagu, Maleyâla and Tivuḷa countries⁷ he crossed the valley of Bâgûr⁸ to crush Kampila.

But Kampila was not nuready for him. Under his able generals Akkasâleya Chikka, Kâlânjiya Kampa, Kolliya Nâga, Haḍapada Balluga, Okkaliga Nâgaṇṇa, Bhaṇḍâri Sômaṇṇa, and others, who were all warriors of proved valour and fame, he also sent an army asking his son Râma to lead the host against Ballâḷa. Soon this army marched beyond Ânegondi and the valley of Bisilahalli¹. In the battle that ensued, Râma claimed victory². Just at this time tactful ministers like Sômadanḍâdhipa and Baichadanâyaka intervened and brought about reconciliation between the two kings by making them realise the importance of alliance between the Hindu kings against the Mussalman foes.³

The immediate effect of Râma's success against Ballâḷa was his rise in the estimation of his father Kampila, who then placed on his shoulders the burden of the management of state affairs.⁴

The king of Ōrugallu was now Vîrarudra of the Kâkatîya dynasty. Jealous as he was of the fame of Râma, he easily took offence at his especial birudas, "Telugara-gaṇḍa, Mûvaru-râyara-gaṇḍa, and Cheluvara-gaṇḍa," and marched against Kampila's kingdom accompanied by all the kings of the country lying about the Gôdâvari. But Kampila and Râma were not idle. A severe battle was fought in which the Kâkatîya king was utterly defeated by Râma who then entered the capital city of Hosamaledurga with his father in great splendour and joy.

Delhi was at this time a great city.¹ The Sultan reigned over a very vast empire² and his power was invincible.³ He had many officers under him and his wealth was immense⁴. Nêmi-khân was his very powerful general who spread awe and fear for the Sultan far and wide in India by defeating and capturing Râma-dêvarâya of Dêvagiri, and the kings of Madura, Barpara and other kingdoms. All the kings in India paid tribute to the Sultan and everywhere Nêmi-khân made his power felt⁵.

The Sultan had a very beautiful daughter of marriageable age. Since Râma's fame was not unheard of even in Delhi, some of the officers of the Sultan who were travelling in search of a bridegroom for her, did not fail to visit Kummaṭa. On seeing Râma they decided that they should search no more and got his portrait drawn up by a clever artist, which they took with them to Delhi. On seeing it, the Sultan's daughter fell deeply in love with Râma and life itself became unbearable to her without him. The Sultan, however, promised that he would get Râma to marry her and immediately wrote to Kampila proposing marriage and promising Bidure, Sâgar, Nimbapur, Jambukhaṇḍi and Raichur as dowry¹.

But Kampila, as may be expected, gracefully declined. The Sultan was very much grieved and irritated, and he decided upon treating him as he deserved and securing Râmanatha for his daughter at the same time. Nêmi-khân was then sent with a huge army for sacking the Kuntala country after destroying Ôrugala. Vîra-rudra was easily captured and sent to Delhi where the Sultan imprisoned him for life.

The king of Mungulidêsa was a tributary to the Sultan. When the time arrived to pay his tribute, he sent, among other things of interest, a strong and wonderful bow to the Sultan with a request (which was in reality a challenge) for information if there were any among his men who had the ability to use it. In the public hall of audience, Nêmi-khân, by order of the Sultan, had it shown to all the Khânkhâns (nobles). But they failed. When the Sultan became very much disturbed on this account, Bâdura rose up and easily accomplished the feat to the great admiration of all. The Khânkhâns and even the Sultan himself were annoyed at this display of tremendous strength and ability by Bâdura. They conspired together and though the Sultan appreciated him in public by appointing him as a Malluk, plots were secretly hatched against Bâdura lest he should usurp the kingdom of Delhi some day.

Bâdura was, however, as clever as he was strong. Coming to know of the Sultan's machinations against him, he left Delhi very early the next morning with the pretext of seeing the territory recently given to him by the Sultan. The Sultan, being greatly enraged at this sudden flight of Bâdura, despatched after him a lakh of horses under Nêmi. By the time Nêmi marched 7 or 8 leagues and was in sight of Bâdura, the latter had crossed the Heddore (Krishnâ) killing all the Khâns he knew. When Kampila came to know of this he welcomed him, as advised by his son, and promised protection in spite of the justifiable protest of some of his ministers. To Râma duty was greater than policy; he therefore did not mind the consequences and entertained Bâdura.²

Nêmi-khân lost no time in reporting the matter to the Sultan personally. The siege of Kummata and the capture of Râma were ordered forthwith. Kampila, however, expected what would happen and thus prepared himself to meet the situation. All the important fortresses like Mudigallu, etc., were strengthened and fortified. His tactful minister showed great courage and wisdom in all his arrangements and instructions to the warriors, Kabbila Nâga, Bukkanṇa, Balugayya Timmanṇa and others with whose help it was possible to reduce fortresses like Toregallu, Bâdâvi, Kopaṇa, etc. Râma's elder brother displayed great valour in driving back the enemy at first and Râma himself caused much loss of life to the enemy. Nêmi-khân, however, did not lose heart and was biding time to capture Râma. No sooner did Râma appear on another plot of ground than Nêmi and the other Mallukas surrounded him from all directions and in increasing numbers. The battle that followed was very terrible. But Râma was too powerful and a crushing defeat was inflicted upon Nêmi, who was very much humbled when he went back to Delhi.

Spring having come and with it, the festival of pikes, king Kampila, as usual, began to celebrate it with all pomp. The whole city was

The Sula Festival. decorated splendidly and everywhere there was display of gorgeousness and gaiety, pomp and splendour. King Kampila's youngest and favourite wife, Ratnâji, went up the highest storey of the palace with her maid Sangi to see the fun going on and observe the princes who had come from different places for the occasion. As Râtnâji pointed them out one by one, Sangi explained to her the identity of each. Among the chiefs and princes thus identified, we may mention the following: Râma of Râyadurga, Sangamâdêva of Udayagiri, Pamparâja of Penugonḍa, Timmarâja of Kopaṇa, Gangarâja of Gaṇḍîkôṭa, Narahari Kamparâya of Âdavâni, Kachiah of Gutti, Jayajakkiya Bomma of Toregallu, Anṇa Bhairavadêva, Kâṭaṇṇa, Bhâva Sangama, Mâyidêva and Sâyidêva (of the king's body-guard), Bhaṇḍârada Harihara¹ and Bhaṇḍârada Bukkanṇa².

While the maid was thus pointing out these princes to Ratnâji, Râmanâtha appeared on the scene³. Ratnâji fell in love with him on the spot so intensely that even the sun could not bear to see the fieriness of her passion and evening had to come on earlier than usual. The whole night she was restless and pining for love of Râma. Her maid Sangâyi gave her words of advice and promised her help when the opportunity came.

That opportunity she was biding for was not far off; Kampila, sometime after, went to the forests for hunting. Râma, who preferred swimming to hunting, stayed behind and went to the Tungbhadra where he and his friends spent the whole day in swimming. Next day he desired to play ball and went up to his mother to request of her the pearl-ball of his grandfather Mummaḍi Singa that was in her custody. Hariharadêvi tried first to prevent him from ball-playing at such a time when there were many affairs of state requiring his careful and personal attention and when his very person was in danger. At last she changed her mind and gave him the ball with her blessing.

The laughter and noise made by the party during the play did not escape the keen ears of Ratnâji who enquired of her maid what was the matter and whence came the sound. At the mention of Râma as being one of the players, she went to the upper storey to have a sight of him. Some time after, the ball fell where she stood during the course of the game. Now was her chance ; she would not give the ball to Kâṭaṇṇa who was sent by Râma to fetch it. She said she wanted to see Râma and asked Kâṭaṇṇa to send him. Râma complied and on entering her apartment bowed to his step mother. Immediately Ratnâji betrayed her passion and made many overtures. Surprised and disgusted, Râma tried to go away from her presence. Ratnâji would not allow him and all his attempts at advising her failed. Finally, he had to use force and get away from her.

Thus disappointed, Ratnâji was overcome with grief and rage, and decided upon having Râma killed soon after the king's return¹. She put on a very sorrowful and disfigured appearance and when the king came, she misrepresented matters to him and accused Râma of lasciviousness and assault² and of having slighted even the authority of the king boasting much of himself and his conquests against Ballâḷa, Vîrarudra and the Sultan of Delhi³. The severity of this accusation deprived the king of all his patience. The minister was at once summoned to carry out his decision of getting Râma beheaded without delay. *

But the ministers, particularly Baichappa, did not so readily believe in Râma's guilt. They knew that it was Ratnâji who sent for Râma and that she herself was guilty. They also knew how indispensable Râma was for the safe keeping of the durga. ¹ They therefore tried their influence with the king. But the threat of Ratnâji that she would kill herself if Râma was not executed, made it impossible for the king to change his mind. Baichappa, however, was not blind to the situation. He met Râma secretly and came to know the whole truth. Telling Râma how important and valuable his life was to the cause of their country against the Sultan and his forces, ² he concealed Râmanâtha with his wives and companions in an underground cell and showed Kampila the heads of substitutes instead, giving out the following names of persons who were said to have been executed :—Râma, Kâṭaṇṇa, Dêvi Seṭṭiya Linga, Sâyideva, Haḍapada Balluga, Singa, Kâlâṃjiya Kampa, Chikka, Râyagiṇḍiya Lakka, Mâyidêva and Kolliya Nâga. Kampila felt now very sorry and accused the minister of having been hasty in carrying out his orders. ³ Hariharadêvi went nearly mad with grief. ⁴ The whole city lamented the reported death of Râma.

The sad news spread throughout India. The Sultan thought it was now easy for him to reduce Kummaṭa, and ordered Nêmi to march Second War of Delhi. against it. ⁵ Accordingly Nêmi, at the head of an immense army ⁶ marched from Delhi at a tremendous speed and soon arrived at the Karnâṭa boundary striking terror into the hearts of Kampila's subjects who at once reported to their king this impending danger.¹ Kampila was bewildered: he felt now the loss of Râma who was the only one that could dare oppose Nêmi and save the city from certain ruin. Alas! It was no use his telling the minister to make the necessary arrangements to meet the foe. The grief on account of Râma's absence at this critical time ate up his heart and he was no more himself.

Anṇa Bhairava and Bâdura Khâna consoled him with words of courage and promises of driving back the enemy. Just now Baichappa confidently spoke to the king of a certain famous warrior who could very easily destroy Nêmi's army². Surprised at this sudden assistance from somewhere, the king sought to know more about this person. In reply Baichappa stated that he was a scion of the family of Râmadêva of Dêvagiri and son of Kampa, a descendant of the Bêḍa Śabara who was originally a Kshatriya but was excommunicated on account of his marriage with a girl of inferior caste. This excommunicated prince was a great warrior and had proved his valour when the Sultan invaded and destroyed Dêvagiri³. His son, now a refugee in Kampila's dominions, was also very valiant and would very willingly help the king. Baichappa then narrated his story which was similar to the true story of Râma and Kampila was very much moved by it. And when he wanted to see the new comer Baichappa asked him to wait until 3 days the war were over⁴. The king grew restless and was every moment thinking of his son Râma to whom he now felt he had done great injustice⁵.

(The manuscript ends here abruptly. Further information gathered from other manuscripts will be published in the next report. Râma was killed in battle while defending Kummaṭadurga.)

(3) JAYAREKHA.

This Jayarêkhâ is a long roll of ancient paper in the possession of Rangegaḍa of the village Tâygoṇḍanhalli near the village Tungôṭi in the Madhugiri Taluk, Tumkur District. (Plate X, 1.) It is written in modern Kannaḍa characters nearly one hundred years old, and purports to describe how the village Tungôṭi near Maddagiri was founded by some followers of the chiefs of Maddagiri. The narrative given therein may be summarised as follows:—

1. In the Śaka year 1425 Rudhirôḍgâri, i.e., A.D. 1503, two brothers named Sakregauḍa and Mâregauḍa migrated from their native place Sakhare⁶ and wandering through forest and hill, went to Penugonḍa to see King Achyutarâya. The king granted them some lands on condition that they would bring them under cultivation, build a village thereon and settle in it.

2. Six years later, in the year Vibhava A.D. 1508 on the 7th lunar day of the bright half of Vaiśākha they began laying the foundation of the village Tungôṭi where they had been granted lands and in time the village was built and a number of people settled therein. Meanwhile houses were built both for the gaṇḍa brothers and the other inhabitants.

3. Six years later, on the 10th lunar day of the bright half of the month of Mâgha in the year Bhâva (1514) the gaṇḍa brothers went on a pilgrimage to Tirupati where they celebrated the lunar new year's day. From there they brought an image of the god Kṛishṇa (Rangadhâma) and set it up in a temple built newly in their village.

4. They next paid a visit to the King at Penugonḍa and with his permission built a village Vîragonḍanahallî near Tungôṭi in the year Īśvara (A.D. 1517). At first there was merely a cattle-pen in the place under the control of a man named Vîraṇṇagaṇḍa. Later a fort was built and several houses. They also brought from their native village Sakhare holy rafters of wood (Belugaḷu) and set them up in their houses in the village for worship. Two sons were born to Sakharegaṇḍa, named Turubina Mâregaṇḍa and Chêḷuguru Mâregaṇḍa. His younger brother Mâregaṇḍa got a son named Rangegaṇḍa and all these lived in peace as rulers of the new settlements.

5. At this time Vîrappagaṇḍa and his brothers migrated from a place called Shahrû Bidare and established a kingdom in the village Gubbi Hosahallî. One of the brothers built the village Mummaḍipaṭṭana in the year Śukla in the month Mâgha (1510 A.D.) and erected the temple of Râma therein. These were the ancestors of the famous pâlegârs of Maddagiri. The Gaṇḍas of Tungôṭi paid tribute to them and ruled as their dependants.

6. In the year Bhâva, i.e., 1514 A.D. the Gaṇḍas invited the Chief from Mummaḍipaṭṭana and his minister Timmarasayya to Tungôṭi and conducted the procession of God Rangadhâma in the village Vîragonḍanahallî with great pomp.

7. Turubina Mâregaṇḍa had two sons, Vîraṇṇagaṇḍa and Tâyaṇṇa; and Chêḷuguru Mâregaṇḍa got a son named Chikkegaṇḍa. These built the village Tâyaṇṇanahallî; of these Chikkegaṇḍa lived in Tungôṭi with four servants of the Bêḍa caste called Ranga, Chikka Ranga, Muddaiya and Bôra. Tâyaṇṇa settled in Tâyaṇṇanahallî, now a village near Tungôṭi.

8. The Maddagiri Chief Vîrappa gaṇḍa and his brothers paid a visit to Tungôṭi and were highly honoured by Turubina Mâregaṇḍa and Chêḷuguru Mâregaṇḍa who promised them allegiance. After the death of the Chief Vîrappagaṇḍa, his son Doḍḍegaṇḍa extended Mummaḍipaṭṭana clearing the forest around it and building a fort. He also erected in that village a temple of Nonabhêśvara. After the death of the chief Doddegauḍa, his son Mummaḍi Chikkappagaḍa succeeded him. He once saw a hound pursued by a hare in the forest to the west of Mummaḍi-paṭṭaṇa and taking this as a good omen he built a town there called Bijavara after the goddess Bijavaramahādēvi. A temple of Vīrabhadra and a tank and a fort were built in that town and grants were made to Brahmans and others. The chief had as his guru Tōṇṭada Siddhalingēśvarasvāmi, a Lingāyat.

9. In the meanwhile Māregauḍa, grandson of Turubina Māregauḍa of Tungōṭi, applied to the chief, Mummaḍi Chikkappagaḍa, for permission to appoint the various officials for the village Tungōṭi and for celebrating the festival to propitiate the village goddess. The permission was granted and the chief himself attended the festival.

10. After this a peculiar incident occurred in the village Tungōṭi in Śrīmukha, Śaka 1435¹. A merchant named Venkaṭa Seṭṭi came with his pack-bullocks near the village Tungōṭi and as it was already approaching sunset camped in the village seeking the protection of the village officials for his goods. It was usual with the merchant to take only one meal on that day and at night he bathed and set up an oven on a natural rock to cook his food. But as soon as the food prepared was served on the leaf plate it became full of worms. The merchant wondered at it and reported the matter to the people of the village. In the meanwhile it was also found that his bullocks refused to eat grass and lay dying. Complaint was lodged with the village accountant and headman and after conducting some enquiries, they suspected the village smith Doḍḍa Rangappa who was versed in several branches of magic; and they wanted that he should be put to death by being rolled down a precipice for the offence. With that object the chief villagers and the merchants went to Bijavara and reported the matter to the Chief Mummaḍi Chikkappa Gauḍa. The Chief conducted an enquiry and decreed that unless everything was set right the accused should be put to death the next day. But the god Rangadhāma appeared in a dream before the chief during the night and told him that he had come from Sakrepaṭṇa and appeared as a natural rock, and that since the merchant had set fire on his head all this had happened. The god directed that a temple should be built up around him and worship conducted by the smith Doḍḍarangappa's son Hanumantappa. If this was done, the god promised that the bullocks would come back to life and the merchant would prosper. The next day, the Chief sent for the merchant and told him of the dream. The merchant accordingly took a vow that he would build the temple and set apart 640 varahas for the purpose and came with the chief to Tungōṭi. The bullocks soon recovered and the merchant built a shrine for the god in the month of Māgha of the year Yuva (A.D. 1575). Valuable presents were made to the Chief and the village officials by the merchant, and the villagers lived in peace thereafter.

(¹) This seems to be a mistake for Śaka 1495 as two generations had passed since the village Tungōṭi was founded in 1513 A.D. Hence the date may be taken as Śaka 1495 Māgha or A.D. 1574.

NOTES.

DESCRIPTION.

To the west of the fortified hill of Chitaldrug in the Mysore State is the valley of Hulegoni which, according to local tradition, is the site of an ancient town called Chandravalli or Chandrâvali. To the south of this valley are two hills and between them runs a defile which is about a hundred feet in width at its narrowest part. On the western side of the defile at a height of about thirty feet from its bottom are a number of boulders large and small among which is an ancient temple dedicated to Bhairavêśvara. Near the entrance to this temple is a large boulder of gneiss with a vertical wall-like side turned towards the north-east from which direction people have to enter the defile. The flat face is about 20 feet high and 15 feet wide and ideally situated for inscribing.

On the lower part of this face is an inscription in large cave characters which is so far worn out that its existence was unknown to the people of the neighbourhood. Epigraphical surveyors who in the past worked in the neighbourhood had either not known of its existence or had thought its decipherment so impossible that no mention of the record was made in their reports.

CHANDRAVALLI ROCK INSCRIPTION. OF MAYURASARMAN. (p. 50—No. 1).

The inscription has three distinct lines of characters most of which are clear enough to be definitely read. Between the first and second lines are the sun and moon carved in outline and there is no other figure on the face of the boulder. At first sight it looks as if there are about six more lines of Brâhmi characters above the present inscription and even the outlines of some characters appear to be visible. On a closer examination most of these lines might be attributed to the weathering of the rock and present a strong contrast to the inscribed letters below. The inscription is 6'—6'' horizontally and 3'—1'' vertically. The characters are large and well incised, their bodies being about 5'' square and tailed characters like ka measuring between 10'' and 14'' in length. The first line starts with large finely formed clear characters which become slightly smaller in the third line especially towards its ends.

CONNECTED RECORDS.

Some important records of the period which have to be studied on the present occasion are the following:—

- (1) The Banavâsi inscription of Vinhukaḍa Chuṭukulânanda Sâtakamṇi. (Ind. Ant. XIV, p. 33.)
- (2) The Maḷvaḷḷi pillar inscription, part I, of Vinhukaḍa Chuṭukulânanda Sâtakamṇi. (Ep. Car. VII, Shikarpur, 263.)
- (3) The Myâkadoni inscription of the 8th year of Puḷumâvi. (Ep. Ind. XIV, p. 153.)
- (4) The Mayidavolu plates of Śivaskandavarman Pallava dated the 10th year of his father Bappadêva. (Ep. Ind. VI, p. 84.)
- (5) The Hirehaḍagaḷḷi plates of Śivaskandavarman Pallava dated the 8th year of his own reign. (Ep. Ind. I, p. 2.)
- (6) The Maḷavaḷḷi pillar inscription, part II, of the 4th year of an unknown Kadamba king. (Ep. Car. VII, Shikarpur, p. 264.)
- (7) The Guṇṭâr plates of Chârudêvi dated an uncertain year in the reign of Vijayaskândavarman Pallava. (Ind. Ant., IX, p. 100, and Ep. Ind. VIII, p. 143.)
- (8) The Tâlagunda pillar inscription of Yuvarâja Śântivarman set up during the reign of his father Kâkusthavarman Kadamba. (Ep. Ind. VIII, p. 24.)

A comparative study of the above named inscriptions shows the correct paleographical and historical position of the new inscription of Mayûraśarman.

PALEOGRAPHY.

The characters in which the inscription is written belong to the class of later southern Brâhmi, known as the Cave characters of the variety seen in the later Śâtavâhana inscriptions. In point of similarity they come nearest to the Myâkadôni inscription of Puḷumâvi, which the Chandravallî inscription resembles in many ways. The following general characteristics may be noted :—The serif is well formed though short and is at the same time different from the box-head of the Tâlagunda characters. The vertical line of the tailed characters is usually long and occasionally slightly wavy at the root of the tail while the lower part is well curved up to the left with the extreme end turned slightly inwards to form a very shallow loop. Where the characters have been well written as in the first and second lines, the wings of ka together form a fine arch with the ends bent downwards. The lower end of ta is well curved inwards in the second line. Sa appears in the third line thrice and betrays a variation which suggests that in the first two lines there is an attempt to imitate a slightly earlier form, while the third line with its well looped first ya contains the real contemporary forms. The arch below the serif in the second sa of the third line, the suggestion of an inward curve at the bottom of da, the downward bend of the medial â in bî in the first line and in sthâ in the third line and the looped ya of the third line are sufficient to show that later tendencies were already visible. Paleographically, the first two lines may belong to about 200 A.D. while some of the characters in the third line may be half a century later. Of the inscriptions mentioned above, the earliest appears to be the Banavâsi inscription, the second one, the Maḷavallî inscription Part I, and the third the Myâkadôni inscription. Paleographically the Chandravallî inscription follows the Myâkadoni one closely and is itself followed by the Maḷavallî inscription Part II. Of the other records it is well known that the chronological order is (1) The Mâyidavolu plates, (2) The Hirehaḍagallî plates, (3) The Guṇṭûr plates and (4) The Tâlagunda inscription. Making allowance for the fact that copperplates usually contain more cursive characters and that stone inscriptions retain the more archaic forms, we find that the Mayidavolu, Hirehaḍagallî and Guṇṭûr plates may not be far removed in time from the Chandravallî inscription. The Guṇṭûr plates however show irregular and cursive forms of a more advanced character. The Tâlagunda inscription has box-headed characters of a definitely later form. The length of a hundred years could not account for the difference between it and Mayûraśarman's record and allowance has to be made for considerable foreign influence. On paleographical grounds the present inscription is very similar to the Myâkadoni inscription and thus belongs to almost the same time as the latter.

LANGUAGE AND ORTHOGRAPHY.

The inscription is a simple direct statement of facts without any introduction or epilogue. Even the word 'Siddham' found in the Myâkaḍḍoni and Maḷavalli inscriptions is not present here.

The language is definitely Prākṛit as can be seen from words like śammanā and viṇimmiam. But the tendency to Sanskritise is clearly seen. Thus the inscription appears to belong to the last days during which Prākṛit still held its place as the state language in South India. Some peculiarities of the language and orthography may however be noted. In the word Kadambāṇam the last letter has such a long and curved serif that its nearest reading would be nôm. This form is grammatically incorrect. The left hand portion of the serif is too long and curved to allow of the reading nām. The second word appears as Mayûra and not as Maûra. The third is śamma and not samma. The fourth word retains the pure Prakrit form viṇimmiam.

In the second line the first word reads taṭākam and not taḍākam. But it may be noted that the medial vowel is really more like i than like â so that correctly the word ought to read taṭikam. The second letter of the second word and the first of the third are so near to each other that they look like one character. As they are written by the side of each other and have not been altered according to sandhi rules, it is clear that they do not form one ligature. For the sake of a suitable reading it has been here thought that the scribe put two characters bha and tre too near by mistake. The second letter of the third word has a double hook at the lower end, the second hook being the medial û.

In the third line the first letter yâ has really a hook on each side of its lower end, and it has a more advanced form than ya in the first and third lines. The medial i of ti has a reversed curve. Including the last two letters of the previous line the word could be read as Pariyâtika, or Pâriyâtrika, perhaps the country near the mountain Pâriyâtra. Even if the first letter is read as cha, the name Parichâtrika would refer to the same country. In the Nâsik inscription of queen Bâlaśrî also, this very word has been given two alternative readings, the reading with cha being the more acceptable (vide Rapson: Andhra coins, pp XXXIII).¹ The first word has here been read as yâtika the existence of the curve to the right being recognised. In the second word the existence of the interlined letter na is not certain. In the third word the third letter has a loop which appears to be slightly open at the top and has a short extra line springing from the bottom of the curve. It has been here read as nda though it could be read also as nu, nru, or ndhu. The third letter of puṇâṭa has the suspicion of an upward curve at the centre of its bottom. The last three letters of the third line have lost their lower halves owing to a part of the rock breaking away. Of the last letter only the top part is visible and its position is a little too much to the right, out of the line with the letters above. Among the orthographical peculiarities may be pointed out the following:—

(1) Ep. Ind. VIII, p. 60.

1st line (1) nôm instead of nam in Kadambânâ.

2nd line (2) ti instead of ta in taṭākam.

(3) tre instead of traī in Traikûta

3rd line (4) sa instead of śa in śaka.

(5) sayinda instead of saindra in saindraka.

(6) Moka instead of Maukha in Maukhari.

AUTHORSHIP.

The only inscription known till now which anybody has attempted to ascribe to Mayûraśarman is the Maḷavalli pillar inscription, part II. It has been supposed that the Kadamba mentioned in the inscription is the first of the dynasty, viz., Mayûraśarman¹. In the Chandravalli inscription, however, Mayûraśarman is definitely named as getting a reservoir constructed. No son, vassal or officer has been mentioned as in the Myâkadoni and Tâlagunda inscriptions. Thus the present record appears to have been set up under the direct orders of Mayûraśarman.

PURPOSE OF THE INSCRIPTION.

Like the Myâkadoni inscription of Puḷumâvi and the Tâlagunda inscription of Śântivarman, the present inscription is primarily meant to be a record of the construction of a reservoir of water by Mayûraśarman of the Kadambas. The defile in which the inscription boulder is situated is very conveniently located for the construction of a dam. The latter could impound the rain water poured by both the monsoons on the hills to the south of Chitaldrug. Excavations to the north of this place have shown that exactly in the direction towards which the inscription faces, there was in the Śâtavâhana times, a flourishing town in which have been collected large numbers of lead coins bearing the names of Gôtamîputra, Puḷumâvi and other later Śâtavâhana rulers. Mayûraśarman only follows the example of Puḷumâvi in recording his meritorious deed. Secondly, the inscription is meant to record the victories of the Kadamba hero over his neighbours of the Traikûṭa, Abhîra, Pallava, Pâriyâtrika, Śakasthâna, Sêndraka, Punâṭa and Maukhari kingdoms.

GEOGRAPHY.

The inscription has a unique interest as it gives us the names of eight contemporary kingdoms and is in this respect as valuable as the famous Nâsik inscription of the Śâtavâhana queen Gôtamî Bâlasri. Most of the names are well known in the early history of the Dakhan. (Plate XII. 1)

(1) J. Dubreuil: Ancient Hist. of the Deccan, p. 99.

(1) Trekuta or Traikuta is the kingdom which extended from the vicinity of Bombay to near Surat including south Gujarat and the northern part of the Mahratta country. Traikûṭaka inscriptions have been found at Kanhêri, north of Bombay, and at Pârdi, 50 miles south of Surat. The Traikûṭaka era began perhaps about 249 A.D.¹

(2) Abhira was a country to the south of Traikûṭa and inscriptions of the Abhîra dynasty have been found at Nâsik. The Traikûṭa era mentioned above is considered to be the same as the Abhîra era founded in 249 A.D. Before that date, however, two Abhîra kings at least, namely, Îśvarasêna of the Nâsik inscription and Îśvaradatta appear to have existed. As there has been some doubt whether the Abhîra and the Traikûṭa dynasties were not identical, the mention of the two kingdoms separately in the present inscription is note-worthy.

(3) Pallava.—The connection of the Pallavas with the rise of Mayûraśarman has been described in the Tâlagunda inscription of Śântivarman². The Pallava country at this time stretched over the eastern part of the Dakhan including the Kânci and Amarâvati areas.

(4) Pariyatika or Pariyatrika is the country near the mountain Pâriyâtra mentioned in the Nâsik inscription of Bâlaśrî and described as one of the seven Kulâ-chalas or great mountains in Sanskrit tradition.³ This mountain has been usually identified with the western part of the Vindhya range, west of Bhopal but on the evidence of Yuan-chwang, we are led to think that Pâriyâtra or Poliyetalo was a prosperous country situated 500 leagues west of Mathura and 800 leagues south-west of Śatadru. For this reason, Watters has identified it with Bairat to the north-east of Ajmir and the Aravalli hills.⁴ The only conclusion we can come to is that the Pâriyâtra country extended from the western Vindhyas to the west of Mathura including the Aravalli hills and it was thus to the north of the Traikûṭaka country.

(5) Sakasthana has been commonly taken as synonymous with Seistan in south Beluchistan. But it is known that the Śakas were in occupation of Gujarat and west Mâlva until they were conquered by the Gupta emperor, Chandragupta II Vikramâditya about A.D. 400. Here the word Sakasthâna may be considered to refer to this country, a part of which perhaps separated the Traikûṭa and Pâriyâtra areas.

(6) Sayindaka has been here taken as equivalent to Sêndraka and not Sindhuka. Sêndraka has been usually identified with the Nâgaṛkaṇḍa country to which parts of the Shimoga district of the Mysore State are considered to have belonged.¹ Sêndraka names occur in Gujarat, in Mysore and elsewhere in the early Chalukyan period showing that the Sêndrakas held power as feudatories in the northern part of the Châlukyan empire also. The fact that most of the Sêndraka inscriptions come from the western parts of the Mysore State and of the Bombay Karnâṭaka² leads to the conclusion that the dynasty was in its earlier days probably occupying the southern portion of the Konkan, their country extending from the north of Punâḍa to the south of Abhîra.

(7) Punata or Punnad is the country to the south of Mysore whose capital was Kîrtipura or Kittûr in the Mysore district³.

(8) Maukari or Maukhari is the country near the town of Gayâ⁴ in south Behar whose territory might at this time have extended farther south. its western neighbour being probably Pâriyâtra and the southern neighbour, the Pallava empire.

DATE.

The determination of the date of the Chandravallî inscription is of very great importance as it would fix the date of Mayûrasarman and of the foundation of the Kadamba dynasty. The inscription is here assigned to circa 258 A.D. for the following reasons :—

(1) We have seen that paleographically it closely follows the Myâkadoni inscription. Dr. Sukhtankar has assigned the latter to the reign of the Puḷumâvi II (135 to 163 A.D.) on the ground that Puḷumâvi III and Puḷumâvi IV reigned only for about 7 years while the inscription belongs to the 8th regnal year⁵. But it is a very common experience in south Indian usage that the expired year is often mentioned instead of the current, and the Purânic account probably gives the completed years. It is possible that Puḷumâvi IV might have reigned for seven complete years and died in the eighth regnal year a short time after the Myâkadoni inscription was put up. Further, it is improbable that the Myâkadoni inscription is nearly a century and a half earlier than the very similar Chandravallî inscription. As the middle of the 2nd century would be too early a date for Mayûraśarman, the Myâkadôni record may more reasonably be ascribed to Puḷumâvi IV who reigned from c. 218 to c. 225-226 A. D. In any case it is clear that the characters of the Chandravallî inscription could not be later than the middle of the 3rd century A.D. The fact that the early Pallava copperplates show more cursive and advanced forms used not far away in the Bellary district in the middle of that century would lead to the conclusion that the characters in the Chandravalli inscription, which retain more archaic forms, cannot belong to a much later period.

(⁴) Fleet. Gupta Ins. p. 16.

(2) Further the use of Prākṛit in the inscription and the simple language employ would indicate that the record belongs to the 3rd century A. D. and is not later, as Sanskrit comes into general use in the 4th century A.D. In the Guṇṭūr plates Sanskrit already takes its place along with Prākṛit. If Mayūra had belonged to the 4th century it is difficult to explain why he, who is described as a Brahman learned in the Vedas, should have preferred Prākṛit to Sanskrit. In his day Prākṛit was too strong yet to be replaced by Sanskrit and that was in the third century A.D.

(3) The kingdoms mentioned in the inscription must have been contemporaneous with it and indicate the time to which the inscription belongs. In the Abhīra kingdom, though Īśvarasēna and Īśvaradatta appear to have reigned in the first half of the 3rd century, probably after the withdrawal of the Śātavāhana empire from the Nāsik area, the year 249 A.D. which commences a new era is considered to mark the consolidation of the kingdom and its rise to the position of a strong power¹. The Traikūṭakas used the same era and it is uncertain whether they were in existence before that date. The Pallavas, the Sēndrakas and the Punāṭas had already built up their kingdoms over the ruins of the Śātavāhana empire. This could not have been before the middle of the 3rd century A.D. The Śakas, the Pāriyātrikas and especially the Maukharis were still independent dynasties which had not yet been overwhelmed by the Guptas. The Maukharis could not have been an independent power after 319 A.D. and possibly they lost their freedom much earlier; if the view is accepted that Chandragupta I inherited a considerable part of Behar from his ancestors, it is possible that the Maukharis were subjugated either by Mahārāja Gupta (c. 275-300 A.D.) or at least by his son Mahārājādhiraja Ghaṭōtkacha (300-320 A.D.) In any case Mayūraśarman came into contact with them in the third century A.D. (c. 275) when they were yet great enough to have a boundary coterminous with the Kadamba empire.

(4) No less than the countries mentioned, the omissions are significant. Mayūraśarman could not have helped mentioning the names of the Śātavāhana, the Gupta, the Ganga and the Vākāṭaka empires if he had been their contemporary. Evidently by his time the Śātavāhana empire had completely disappeared and the other three powers had not yet been established. Thus the omissions suggest the second half of the 3rd century and the first quarter of the fourth as suitable for Mayūraśarman.

(5) The early chronology of the Pallavas has now been approximately settled and the following dates generally accepted.² Bappadēva—second quarter of the 3rd century; Śivaskandavarman—third quarter, Buddavarman—fourth quarter. The fact that grants of the first two of these rulers are obtained in the Bellary District and that Śivaskandavarman was in possession of Sâtâhani raṭṭha, i.e., the neighbourhood of the Bellary District,¹ leads to the conclusion that Mayûraśarman's occupation of the Śrîparvata—Chitaldrug area and possibly his whole military career is subsequent to the 8th year of Śivaskandavarman, the latter falling at least 10 plus 8 years after 226 A. D., probably between 244 and 250 A. D. It is possible that Mayûraśarman's rise took place either during the time of this ruler or immediately after, somewhere between 250 A.D. and 260 A.D.

(6) Many writers have thought that the year 80, the date of the Halsi plates of Kâkusthavarman, refer to an era reckoned from the commencement of Mayûraśarman's reign. But as Kâkusthavarman when he was king had given a daughter in marriage to the imperial Gupta dynasty and since Samudragupta's southern expedition c. 340 A.D. was probably the earliest occasion for such an alliance, the marriage may have taken place somewhere about 350 A.D., that king or prince Chandragupta II being the bridegroom. Kâkusthavarman might have come to the throne a few years earlier; and a few years before his coronation he might have issued the Halsi plates: c. 340 A.D. Thus the first year of Mayûraśarman's reign would fall 80 years before that date i.e., somewhere about 260 A.D.

(7) The suggested date would be suitable as there would be a distance of only about 40 years between the Myâkadoni inscription (of Puḷumâvi IV) and the Chandravalli inscription, which resemble each other so very closely. The date would be satisfactory from all points of view. The Chandravalli inscription might have been set up immediately after the conquests of Mayûraśarman and possibly just before his coronation as no royal titles are claimed by him, while Puḷumâvi and the Pallava rulers of the period assume royal titles. Thus the date of the inscription is determined as c. 258 A.D. while the coronation of Mayûraśarman might have taken place very soon after.

HISTORY.

The new inscription promises to be one of the most important records yet discovered for the history of south India during the notoriously dark 3rd century A. D. From the Tâlagunda inscription we already know how Mayûraśarman warred against the Pallavas and established himself as a ruler in an inaccessible forest stretching to the gates of Śrîparvata. Further he levied tribute from the great Bâna and making peace with the Pallavas received a terriorty stretching from the western ocean to the Prêhâra on the east.² About the other neighbours of Mayûraśarman

(¹) Ep. Ind. I, p. 6, line 27.

no information was available till now. From the Chandravalli inscription are now revealed the extent of his conquests and the names of his neighbours whom he claims to have defeated. A vast extent of territory appears to have come under his sway. To the south was the Punnâd kingdom; to the west from south to north, in order, were the Sêndrakas between South Canara and Goa, the Âbhîras in the Bombay Konkan, the Traikûṭas to the north of Bombay and the Śakas between Surat and the Vindhya. The Vindhya and the Goṇḍavana forest belt probably mark the northern limits of his empire separating it from the Pâriyâtrikas and the Maukharis (of Behar) respectively. To his east he had of course the Pallava empire, separated from his by 'Prehara.' Fleet has suggested that the latter might be the Tungabhadra river. As the Tungabhadra runs mostly from east to west and as Śrîparvata was also a boundary of the Kadamba territory, 'Prêhâra' is more probably some part of the eastern ghats near Śrîsailam or the Pâlâr river. The Brihad Bâṇas whose kingdom extended over the southernmost Telugu districts lying to the west of the eastern ghats, were too weak and subservient to the Kadambas to deserve separate mention. Thus the Chandravalli inscription reveals to us the astonishing extent of Mayûraśarman's empire. Evidently the heritage of the Śâtavâhanas in the Dakhan plateau fell to the share of Mayûraśarman. Some time after he assumed the title of 'Râja' he may have got the Maṭṭavalli record, part II, inscribed as he then calls himself king and makes a respectful reference to the Śâtavâhana dynasty which went before him and the successor of which he perhaps claimed to be. The words 'Kadambânâm rajâ' probably refer to him as he was the first and only Kadamba known at that time and there was no need to name him.¹

As some of the later inscriptions of the Kadambas give the name Mayûravarma, there was room for a little doubt about his original caste. The present inscription distinctly reads śarman thus confirming the statement of the Tâlagunda inscription that he was a Brâhman. The interesting story of this Brahman dynasty which becomes Kshatriya and intermarries with the imperial Guptas is too well known to be repeated here. This fact of the change of caste in the ruling families of India which is observed in several other instances, is however highly important for the social history of India.

Most of the other powers mentioned in the inscription were also those which rose to importance on the decay of the Śâtavâhana empire. As already mentioned, the Âbhîras, Îśvarasêna and Îśvaradatta appear to have ruled in the first half of the 3rd century, the final consolidation of the kingdom being marked by the establishment of the Abhîra era in 249 A.D.²

Though the Traikûṭas used perhaps the same era as the Abhîras, the Chandravallî inscription makes it clear that the two dynasties were independent of each other at the time of Mayûraśarman.

That Pâriyâtra not only signified a mountain as mentioned in Balaśrî's Nâsik inscription and the Mandasôr inscription but also a distinct kingdom, is evident from the fact that Yuan-Chwang mentions it as a distinct country with a Vaisya king¹. Mayûraśarman's inscription informs us that the country was already a distinct kingdom in the middle of the 3rd century A.D.

Of the ancient dynasty of Maukhari we have evidence both in the Maurya period and in the Gupta period. To come into conflict with a Dakhan power, perhaps in the central Indian forests, it must have had a territory of considerable extent and importance and that sometime before the date of Gupta (275-300) the progenitor of the great dynasty of that name.

About the Pallavas no additional information is available but it is interesting to note that Punnâḍ which is mentioned by Ptolemy² was an independent power in the middle of the 3rd century A.D. Probably it held that position until it was conquered by the Gangas who rose to importance in the 4th century.

From the above note it will be seen that the Chandravallî inscription of Mayûraśarman is an exceedingly important record which throws welcome light on the condition of the Dakhan in the till now dark 3rd century A.D.

Note.

The inscription stone is broken off on the right side and several letters have disappeared. The record is dated S' 1599 or A.D. 1677 and its object seems to be to register the grant of some land in Bematur-nâḍ (Chitaldroog District) made by a person named Nâga-gâuṇḍa for assisting those who distinguished themselves in boxing competitions (muṭi-gālagava) in the above district. The donor Nâga-gâuṇḍa is stated to be a dependant of the chief gauḍa of the nâḍ (nâḍa-prabhu-gâvunḍa) named Sâyarâvuta, and to have been given some land rent-free, a portion of this having been specially favoured to him as a garaḍi-umbali (rent-free land for maintaining a gymnasium). A part of this land was now given away by him in connection with boxing. The usual imprecation against those who violate grants is found at the end of the epigraph. No king is named in the record.

Note.

The image is that of a lady devotee standing to front, with the hands reverentially joined and an umbrella over her head supported by the sun to right and moon to left. Below the sun, on her right are a Linga and a bull. The lady wears on her head a nâgâbharana, or ornament at the crest of which is a seven-hooded cobra. She was probably a queen of the Nâyakas. She might have originally come from Kôḷa or Kôḷâḷu. (See No. 5 below.)

Note.

This is a copperplate inscription recording the appointment by the Chitaldrug chief Kâmagêti Medakerinâyaka of an individual named Lôvidâsa, of the Kunchitiga community, to discharge the duties of dâsvâlîga, which included guarding the temple and god, blowing the conch and sounding the gong during the time of worship, putting on caste marks on the foreheads of devotees and stamping them with the red-hot seals of the god, etc., in the temple of Gôpâlasvâmi of the village Pombolal.

It is stated that when the chief visited the car-festival of the god, the temple priest named Rangapati-âchârya represented that there was no one to attend to the duties of the said office and hence the appointment was made by the king. Lôvidâsa was the son of Timmadâsa who was the son of Pârikalladâsa of Halehalli descended from Tirumalaiya.

As remuneration for carrying on the said work, Lôvidâsa is recorded to have received a plot of land situated in front of Kêsarikaṭṭe, of the sowing capacity of 8 seers and also the right to receive some small contribution when corn was harvested and measured in the village; and was also given a small house-site rent-free in front of the temple. The grant was engraved on copper and the accountant, the patel and the watchman of the village named respectively Halli Timmapa, Jaugayya and Chinna were ordered to carry out the terms of the grant.

The usual imprecatory verses are found at the end of the record.

The temple of Gôpâlasvâmi referred to in this grant seems to be the temple of Gôpâlakrishṇa in Holalkere town in the Chitaldrug District. (See E. C. XI Holalkere 7.) The date of the grant is stated to be Monday, the 5th lunar day of the bright half of Śrâvaṇa, in the year Pramâdîcha, Śaka 1595, which corresponds to 7th July, A.D. 1673.

Note.

This inscription is not dated and records a command or instruction to the officials who served in the Kêśava temple, Bêlûr, that they should never fail to attend to their appointed work even for a single day. The record begins with a stanza which may be translated as follows :—

“It is better that a man should live even for the space of a muhûrta acting righteously than that he should live for a kalpa in a manner repugnant both to this world and the world beyond.” The record next lays down that every one of the servants of the temple in Kêśavapura (Bêlûr) who might be entitled to a pay of one haṇa or to the receipt of a dole of food and every temple servant living in the villages Beṇṇeyûr and Mugulî who might be enjoying a plot of land of 100 kambas, whether male or female, shall render their services daily to the god Kêśava except on the days when they go out of station on urgent business or when they are ill. Those who do not render such duties are threatened that they will be guilty of slaying by their own hand their ancestors for 21 generations. The record ends with a stanza which means that the Vêdas, and the śâstras based thereon are the highest source of knowledge and Vishṇu (Kêśava) is the highest god. No date is contained in the record but the characters seem to be of the early Hoysala period of about the 13th century A.D.

The villages Beṇṇeyûr and Mugulî (called also Hiriya Mugulî) referred to in this record are included in the list of the villages granted by king Vishṇuvardhana for the Kêśava temple at Bêlûr. (Ep. Car. V. Belur 71). They are identical with the villages Bennûr (also spelt as Bannûr and Binnûr in maps and village lists) and Hire Magaḷur to the north of Bêlûr, near Chikmagalûr, the headquarters of Chikmagalûr Taluk.

TRANSLATION.

Be it well. Adoration to Śambhu who is beautiful with the yak-tail fan, the moon kissing his lofty head and who is the main pillar for the building of the city of the three worlds. May the ever-merciful God, Kêśava, whose chest is adorned with the garland of young tulasi leaves, favour you with the glances of his eyes which are like the red lotus in brightness, full of compassion and engaged in looking after the welfare of the whole Universe. May the four arms of Hari, which are dark like the clouds and hardened by the striking of the string of his bow named Śârnga and which form the four pillars of the pavilion of the three worlds, protect you. Hail. On the eleventh day of the bright half of Śrâvâṇa in the year Śukla, the year 1491 of the Śâlivâhana era having elapsed; while the overlord and king of kings, the pre-eminent crest-jewel of the royal race, the only lord of the Eastern, Western, Southern and Northern oceans, a Boar to the Earth and the feared of those earthly ones who wear (boast of their valour signified by) their moustaches, the Śâlûva of the dagger, Śrî Vîra Pratâpa Vijaya Sadâśivâdêva mahârâya, was reigning in peace and happiness; Venkaṭamma, named after Venkaṭâdri Nâyaka, and son of Pâpatimma Nâyaka, the bearer of the betel bag of the illustrious Venkaṭâdri Nâyaka, son of Yeṣa Kriṣṇapa Nâyaka of Kâśyapa gôtra,—who was the bearer of the betel bag of the illustrious Vîra-Sadâśivarâya, a Bhîma in battle, born-lord of Maṇinâgapura, Sindhu-Gôvinda, champion over adulterers, capturer of the seven elements of sovereignty of Barida, and destroyer of the army of the Turukas—thus tendered this charitable endowment at the sacred feet of God Chennigarâya, of Vêlâpura the modern Vaikunṭha, who was the Family Deity of the king of kings, the Lord of the Fourteen Worlds, Dispeller of the fears of His devotees, Bearer of the Conch Pâñchajanya and also of the Earth, Granter of all the desires of gods and sages, Lord of all the millions of worlds, Lotus-eyed, Father of the Lotus-born, Patron of Nârada and other sages, Master over Garuḍa of Vêdagiri, Destroyer of the wicked and protector of the righteous.

For the spiritual benefit of Kriṣṇapa Nâyaka and the merit of Venkaṭapa Nâyaka, provision is made for the daily food offerings in the after-noon to the god, of 10 plates of 80 paḍis of rice, each measuring 8 paḍis amounting to $\frac{1}{2}$ maund of rice, or $\frac{1}{4}$ khaṇḍuga of paddy; for one month..... $7\frac{1}{2}$ khaṇḍugas of paddy; for 12 months or one year 90 khaṇḍugas of paddy costing 100 gadyâṇas. (In addition to this) 12 gadyâṇas (for a purpose not clearly made out), 2 gadyâṇas (each year) to Bhaṭârâdhya, (and) 2 gadyâṇas to Vêdântis (were to be given); (in all) 116 gadyâṇas.

(For this), in order that merit might accrue to Venkaṭâdri Nâyaka and his own father Pâpatimma Nâyaka, was tendered (by Venkaṭamma) along with offering of gold and water, the village Daṇâyakanahallî which had been granted as umbalî to his father Pâpatimanâyaka by Venkaṭâdri Nâyaka, situated in Jevaṇigenâḍ and Vastâre-Sîme, after re-naming the village as Pâpatimmâpura. Boundaries of the village on (its) four sides : west of Koratigere, east of the river Yegachi, north of Chikkabêdagere and Harubihalli and south of Kannâyakanahalli. This deed of gift confers possession over the eight-fold enjoyments (enumerated as Nidhi, Nikshêpa, Jala, Pâshâna, Akshîni, Âgâmi, Siddha and Sâdhya) that might be within these four boundaries to the Holy Feet of God. Settlement of expenditure regarding the 10 plates (of rice) referred to in this epigraph : to those mahâjanas employed in the service of Chennigarâya, plates to be given in proportion to their former rights at the rate of one plate for (details not clear). They will distribute (among themselves) according to this rate. Whoever violates this (condition of the) charity will incur the sin of slaying at Vâranâsi their mothers, fathers, preceptors and brothers.

Between the act of making a gift and that of maintaining one already made, maintenance is more meritorious than gift. By making a gift one goes to Svarga while by the maintenance of a gift one attains to the heavenly region from which there is no fall. It is doubly as meritorious to protect others' charitable deeds as to make a gift oneself. By confiscating the gifts made by others, one's own gifts are rendered void of merit. Whosoever takes away land given by himself or by others will be born as a worm in ordure for sixty thousand years.

Note.

Writing.—The characters might well be of the second half of the 16th century. Several letters at the end of the lines 13, 30, 32, 40 are lost as the slab is broken at the place. So also some letters at the beginning of lines 27 and 28. Some letters in the middle of lines 13, 33 and 42 are not clear. The orthography is generally correct, but dri is written as dru (line 3), kri as kru (line 4.)

Language.—Three stanzas at the beginning which are invocatory verses addressed to god Śiva, and to Kêśava, and to the latter's four arms, and two imprecatory stanzas at the end are in Sanskrit; the rest is in Kannada prose.

History.—The inscription is of the reign of the Vijayanagar king Sadâśivarâya who is given the usual titles, but was issued by a dependant of the Bêlûr chief Venkaṭâdrinâyaka, son of Era Kṛishṇapanâyaka who is represented as the bearer of the betel bag or pouch to the king. For this Venkaṭâdrinâyaka we have the dates 1566, 1568, 1575, 1577, 1578, 1580, 1583 (E. C. V. Belur 1, 7, 12, 212 and Hassan 165, 172, 176). He is also called Venkaṭappanâyaka in inscriptions of 1568 (E. C. VI Chikmagalur 124) and 1587 (Chikmagalur 79). The titles of the Bêlûr chiefs in the present record are also found in other grants of those kings. The meaning of some of these is not clear. The title Dhavalânka-Bhîma has been translated as Bhîma from his white flag (E. C. V. translations, p. 85) but this meaning is not free from doubt. Similarly the true significance of the epithets Maṇināgapuravarādhīśvara and Sidṇhu-Gōvinda is not clear. Barida-saptāṅga-haraṇa and turukadalavibhāḍa seem to indicate the valour shown by Bêlur chiefs in fighting for their lords, the kings of Vijayanagar against Muhammadan armies, Barida being the Barid-shāhi kings of Bīḍar.

The donor of the grant is Venkaṭamma named after his patron Venkaṭādrināyaka and was a son of Pāpa Timmayanāyaka who held the office of the bearer of the betel bag to the Bêlur chief.

Object of the grant.—The inscription registers the gift of a village Daṇāyakanahalli by the donor for services in the Kêśava temple at Bêlur, the god being called Chennigarāya (the Beautiful Lord) and the place being called Modern Vaikuṇṭha (paradise) on earth. The epithets applied to the god Kêśava and the stanzas in his praise are found also in two other inscriptions of Belur (E. C. V. Belur 78 and 1). The village is stated to have been received by the donor's father as rent-free endowment from his patron Venkaṭādrināyaka, chief of Bêlur. The income of the village calculated at 116 gadyāṇas was to be spent as follows : 100 gadyāṇas for the daily mid-day offerings of rice as food to god, at the rate of 10 plates or 80 paḍis (half seers) per day, the total quantity of paddy required for the purpose being 90 khaṇḍugas per year valued at 100 gadyāṇas ; 2 gadyāṇas for bhaṭārādhyas (archaks or priests performing the worship of the image), 2 gadyāṇas for vêlāntis (those who recite or teach the upanishads) and 12 gadyāṇas for some object not known as the portion relating to it is broken off. Details are also given regarding the expenditure of the ten plates of rice offered to god daily. This was to be distributed among the temple servants and the mahājanas or Brahman citizens in some proportion following the old custom in vogue at the time. The details here too are lost. The grant of the village was made as a perpetual and irrevocable gift, with all the usual rights and powers. The village was also to be called by a new name Pāpatimmapura after the donor's father Pāpa Timmanāyaka.

Geographical details in the grant.—Of the places mentioned in the grant, the village given away, viz., Daṇāyakanahalli is still called by the same name and is found about 3 miles to the north of Bêlur. Near this village and to its west flows the river Yagachî. Chik Bêḍgere is about 2 miles to the south of Daṇāyakanahalli and north of Bêlur. Koraṭigere or Koraṭikere is to the north-east of Daṇāyakanahalli, about 2 miles off and Kannāyakanahalli is situated at a distance of 1 mile to the north of Daṇāyakanahalli. Harubihalli is not found now.

Vastāre-sime, the province in which the village granted is stated to be situated was the country of Vastāre, a village at present in the Chikmagalur Taluk. Jevanigenâḍ, a district forming part of Vastāre-sime may probably be the same as Dêvaligenâḍ referred to in several inscriptions in the vicinity of Chikmagalur (E. C. VI Chikmagalur 1, 4, 22, 36).

Other Particulars.—Neither the name of the composer nor that of the engraver of the inscription is found in the record.

Date.—The date is given in lines 6 and 7, as the 11th lunar day of the bright half of Śrāvaṇa in the year Śukla, Ś. 1491. This corresponds to 24th July 1569 A.D. on which day the Ēkādaśī tithi ended at 6 ghaṭikas after sun-rise according to the Indian Ephemeris of Svami Kannu Pille. As no week-day is named the date cannot be verified. It is also to be noted that the date is rather very late for the reign of Sadāśiva though inscriptions of the same king dated in 1569 and 1570 are not unknown (see No. 15 of Madras Epigraphist's collection for 1910 and No. 40 for 1922, also p. 244 of Heras's Aravidu Dynasty of Vijayanagar).

Note.

This is a vîragal inscription several letters of which have become effaced. After giving the usual stanza in praise of Śambhu it seems to record the heroism of a warrior named Chinṇiga in defending the honour of the women of the village Tagare when it was attacked by the watchman of the village Kauri. Both the villages Kauri and Tagare are situated near Bêlûr. The date of the record is given as 1st lunar day of the bright half of Chaitra in the year Durmati, Ś. 1006. But Ś. 1006 corresponds to Raktâkshi and the nearest Durmati is Ś. 1003. Evidently the engraver wrote "dâ" in line 4 by mistake for "da mû". The date would then correspond to March 14, A.D. 1081.

Note.

This inscription also belongs to the reign of the Bêlûr chief Venkaṭâdri Nâyaka and of his subordinate Pâpa Timmayanâyaka who is here called the agent for the affairs of the above chief.

The record seems to register the grant of some land to a gauda of the village Kaure named Râmapagauda (also called Râjapagauda in line 9 probably by a mistake of the engraver), son of Kâṭanâyaka of Kârabâgil village. The land is stated to have been at first granted for the maintenance of troops but was now given rent-free into the hands of Râmapagauda for the village Kaure as hul-koḍagi and ûra-koḍagi, which probably means that it was to be enjoyed by the whole body of villagers rent-free on condition that they supplied fodder (for the army).

The inscription is dated the 1st lunar day of the bright half of Chaitra in the year Kâlayukta. No date in Śaka era is given. The letters seem to be of 16th century and Kâlayukta of the grant may stand for S' 1480 or A.D. 1558. The date however is not verifiable.

The grant is stated to have been composed by the village accountant Chikkarasaiya.

Translation.

Be it well. While the Śaka year 984 Subhakrit was current.....

The son of the matchless Voysaḷa named Nṛipakâma was the excellent Vineyâditya Poysaḷa who ruled Gangavâḍi for long. While reigning in Dôrasamudra in the enjoyment of increasing wealth and prosperity, in peace and wisdom ; filled with compassion for living creatures, that valiant king, a great destroyer of enemies' troops and an abode of matchless glory set up this sluice to last as long as the moon, sun and stars endure.

A Rakkasa-Poysaḷa (an ogre of a Poysaḷa) in his terrible determination, a sun to the lotus the Yâdava race, a Mândhâta among kings, he set up this mēlakka (sluice?) to this tank.

He granted bittuvaṭṭa for mēlakka.

Note.

This inscription is of the reign of Nṛipa Kâma Poysaḷa's son Vinayâditya of the Hoysaḷa dynasty. It is dated S' 984 Subhakrit or A.D.1062. Vinayâditya is described as the ruler of Gangavâḍi and it is interesting to note that Dôrasamudra is described as the capital as early as his time. He is styled Rakkasa-Voysaḷa for his determination, a fact which is also referred to in Halebāgoḷa inscription dated S' 1015 (Ep. Car. V.

Channarayapatna 148). The object of the present epigraph is to record his construction of a sluice for the tank at Dôrasamudra and the grant of bittuwaṭṭa (a tax collected on the produce of the irrigated lands) for its maintenance.

The inscription registers some grant made for services in the temple of Baṇṭêśvara by Bhaṇḍâri Nâraṇadêva and Mallijîya. The god Baṇṭêśvara is referred to in an inscription of the same village dated 1117 A.D. (Ep. Car. V. Belur 117.)

Translation.

May the god Viratîrthêśa, worshipped by celestials, demons and serpents, and the conqueror of Cupid, protect the hosts of righteous Jainas (Bhavya-jana, people worthy of salvation).

There shines the illustrious and world-famous Mûla-sangha in which is found Koṇḍakunda lineage.

The chief of Dêśiyagaṇa which belongs to it was the illustrious saint named Bâhubali, well-versed in Siddhânta (Jaina religious system) and a younger brother (a junior co-disciple) of the illustrious Viraṇandi-siddhânta-chakravarti. Victorious is the virtuous ascetic Bâhubali-siddhântîśvara, possessed of the knowledge of the two kinds ¹ of naya taught by the All-knowing (Jina), a water-cloud to the powerful wild-fire that is the God of Love, a talisman to righteousness. well-versed in the 18 sat-padārthas and in the six dravyas ² and praised by the whole world. His principal disciple was Sakalêndu-yôgi, a master of the science of Śabdaśāstra. devoted to the happiness of the soul, an expert in the knowledge of syâdvâda, and a moon to the lotus, Cupid.

The character of the chief of sages, Arhaṇandi is very strange as he has a sweetheart in Vâṇi (Goddess of learning) and he is beloved by her (though an ascetic). How can men like myself praise the high perfection of learning of the great ascetic Sakalêndu whose preceptor in the śāstras is the traividya Arhaṇandimuni, whose mind is ever active in debates, fallacies, śabdâgama (science of words) and paramâgama (science of soul).

Thus shines the lord of ascetics, Sakalêndu possessed of 26 riddhis ³ (supernatural powers), versed in the seven tatvas,⁴ endowed with high character, glorious among the assemblage of Jaina ascetics, famous for his twelve kinds of austerities beginning with prâyaścitta and having thirty-two kinds of righteous bhâvanas (thoughts). After some time elapsed like this, the sage Sakalachandra wandered through villages, cities and hamlets causing the lilies, the righteous Jainas (Bhavya) to expand, and in the end reached the Chaityagriha (monastery) in the village Bîlichâ in the good Pâṇḍyadêśa. Here he saw that his end was drawing near and so following the rite of abstaining from food for three days he reached heaven.

In the Śaka year counted by the number seven, arrow, moon and moon (1157), in the year named Manmatha, on the 3rd lunar day of the bright half of Phâlguna, on Monday the illustrious Sakalêndu-dêva expired. Salutation to Arhats.

All the Jaina citizens (bhavya-nagarangal) of the illustrious capital Dôrasamudra, erected this monument in memory of the departed sage, Sakalachandra-bhaṭṭârakadêvar whose dîkshâguru (the teacher who initiated him in sanyâsa) was Bâhubali-siddhântidêvar, sadharma (colleague) of Vîraṇandi-siddhânta-chakravarti and whose śruta-guru (teacher who instructed him in the śāstras) was the illustrious Arhaṇandi traividya-dêvar. Good Fortune. Well-being.

Note.

This is a record of the death of a Jaina guru named Sakalachandramuni belonging to Mûlasangha, Koṇḍakundânvaya, Dêśiyagaṇa and a disciple of Bâhubali-siddhânti-who was a younger co-disciple of Viraṇandi. Sakalachandra is also stated to be a pupil of Arhanandi-muni. The date of his death is recorded to be Monday 3rd lunar day of Phālguna in the year Manmatha S' 1157 (equivalent to Monday, February 11, A.D. 1236) and the place of death, a basti in Biḷichâ in Pāṇḍya-dêśa. He fasted for three days when he knew that his end was near. In his memory the bhavya-nagarangal (Jaina citizens) of the capital city Dôrasamudra are stated to have set up the present monument. Biḷichâ seems to have been the principal village of the district Biḷichî seventy referred to as a part of Nolambavâḍi province in an inscription of 1125 A.D. of Tribhuvanamallapāṇḍya in the village Nalkudure in Channagiri Taluk. (Ep. Car. VII Channagiri 61.) There is a village of the name Kaṇave Biḷachi in Bâsavâpaṭṇa Hobali of the same Taluk which is probably identical with Biḷichâ-grâma referred to in the present record.¹

This is a vîragal inscription of the reign of the Hoysala king Viraganga Hoysaṇa-dêvaru or Vishṇuvardhana and records the exploits of a warrior named Varuḍe Châyayanâyaka who was commanded by the king to fight against a warrior named Mudda who had laid siege to the fort of Tâgarti and was molesting the women therein. No date is given. The characters seem to be of the 12th century. The titles of the Hoysala king in the record are mahâmaṇḍalêśvara, tribhuvanamalla, and capturer of Talekâḍu and no imperial titles like râjâdhirâja are given in the record. It is a further indication that this belongs to the early Hoysala kings. Tâgarti referred to in the record is identical with a village of the same name in Sagar Taluk, Shimoga District.

It is dated Sunday 10th lunar day of the dark half of Mârgaśira in the year Sârvari. No date in Śaka era is given. The letters seem to belong to the end of 12th century A. D. and Viraballâḷa referred to may be identical with Virabhallâḷa II. This records the death of a Jaina merchant named Nâmiseṭṭi, probably by sallêkhana, which consists of giving up food and drink and devoting oneself entirely to contemplation on Jina when one feels that death is very near. He is stated to be the son of Ukkiseṭṭi and Êkavve and a disciple of the Jaina saint Nayakîrti. No date is found in the record, probably due to several letters having disappeared in lines 5-7. The characters seem to be of the 13th century. A Jaina guru named Nayakîrti is referred to in some inscriptions of Śravaṇabelgola of the reign of Ballâḷa II. (See p. 62, Introduction to the revised volume of Śravaṇabelgola Inscriptions) and he may probably be the same as Nayakîrti of the present record. No invocation or imprecation is contained in the epigraph.

Note.

This is a paper manuscript purporting to be a copy of a sannad of the time of the Vijayanagar king Harihara II. It relates to some transactions connected with the agraḥâra village Kûduvaḷḷi, in the Chikmagalur Taluk, about 7 miles from Chikmagalur town.

It begins by stating that the village Kûduvaḷḷi was in the enjoyment of the Śringêri Matt, being given away by king Harihara II. It next refers to the possession of the village by the Śringêri guru named Purushôttama-bhârati and states that when he became the pontiff he gave away a part of the village of the annual value of nearly 21 varahas to his blood relatives. We learn that on the death of this guru and the installation of his successor named Râmachandrabhârati all this land was taken away from the relations of the previous guru and given to one Mallibhaṭṭa, son of Kallinâthabhaṭṭa of Âraga. Thus a portion of the village was in the enjoyment of the new landlord Mallibhaṭṭa and the rest belonged to the Matt.

We next learn that owing to the displeasure of the spirit Brahmanâthadêvar worshipped as god in Śringêri Matt, cattle died in large numbers and the evil was warded off only by the intervention of one Naraharibhaṭṭa who came to Śringêri and propitiated the spirit by the repetition of some mantras. Pleased with his service the guru gave away to this Naraharibhaṭṭa all the land in Kûduvaḷḷi except the portion belonging to Mallibhaṭṭa and thereupon Naraharibhaṭṭa lived in the village Koṇḍana-haḷḷi near by, looking after his newly acquired lands.

It is next stated that Naraharibhaṭṭa, discovering that his own tenants belonging to the caste of dêvara-makkaḷu (fishermen) in the village Kûduvaḷḷi plundered his house at night and carried off the food supplies to their homes, represented to the svâmi of Śringêri that he could not manage the village by himself and that it should be divided into vṛttis and distributed among many Brahmans. Accordingly the head of the Śringêri Matt, Râmachandrabhârati, divided the lands of the village consisting of wet land of the sowing capacity of 147 khaṇḍugas into 33¾ vṛttis of 4¼ khaṇḍugas each and distributed them among various Brahmans, giving Mallibhaṭṭa 5 vṛittis, Naraharibhaṭṭa's son Nile Narasimhabhaṭṭa, $4\frac{1}{2}$ vṛittis, etc., and the village deity Mahālakṣmīdēvi $\frac{3}{4}$ vṛitti. Sôṁêśvaradēvaru $1\frac{1}{4}$ vṛittis and Gâyatri-maṇṭapa (a pavilion for Brahmans to perform sandhyâ) $\frac{3}{4}$ vṛitti. The balance left after this distribution consisting of land of the sowing capacity of $3\frac{1}{2}$ khaṇḍugas was given to the dēvaramakkaḷu community of the village referred to above. This division of land into vṛittis, etc., is stated to have been made on the 5th lunar day of the bright half of Chaitra in the year Śrīṁukha S' 1313. (A.D. 1391 ?)

We next learn that the members of the dēvaramakkaḷu community after enjoying their land for some time gave it away to a Brahman named Doḍḍaṇṇabhaṭṭa for conducting the service of mantrapushpa (repeating some prayers to god after the ceremonial waving of the lights) in the Śiva temple at Gautamêśvara (which is situated at a distance of 2 miles from Kūduvaḷḷi). As time went on, the community declined in numbers and at last no one belonging to it was left in the village. Doḍḍaṇṇabhaṭṭa died issueless and his property went to Giribhaṭṭa of Singāpura who had a mortgage on it. As Giribhaṭṭa also died issueless some time later, the property was taken possession of by the family of Upādhyaya Narasīdēvaru in the year Chitrabhānu (9 years after Śrīṁukha ; A.D. 1402). Now, as the whole village had a claim over the property, the unclaimed lands should have reverted to the Śringêri Matt according to what the writer of the present record says. The total wet lands of the village at the time were calculated at $156\frac{1}{2}$ khaṇḍugas consisting of the original 147 khaṇḍugas and the newly cultivated $9\frac{1}{2}$ khaṇḍugas. No further historical facts can be gleaned from the rest of the manuscript which gives merely some transactions of no importance between the vṛittidârs of the village and Śringêri Matt and has therefore not been copied.

The present record may therefore be considered as relating to transactions regarding the village Kūduvaḷḷi from the period that it was given away to the Śringêri Matt by the Vijayanagar king Harihara to the above year Chitrabhānu (A.D. 1402). Another record of the same village Kūduvaḷḷi already published (E. C. VI Chikmagalur Taluk 88) purporting to be a copy of an inscription, also refers to the gift of that village by Harihara to Śringêri Matt and its division into vṛittis and their distribution among several Brahmans including Nile Narasimhabhaṭṭa mentioned in the present record, made by Rāmachandrabhârati, head of Śringêri Matt in S' 1313 Śrīṁukha Chaitra śu 5. In fact the present record seems to be a supplement of the previous record. There is however one difference in that the previous record speaks of the village Kūduvaḷḷi being given by Rāmachandrabhârati to Brahmans in memory of his guru Puruśhōttamabhârati while the present record explains the circumstances that led to the formation of the agrahâra in a different manner. But this is only a minor difference. The chief difficulty for us in accepting both the records as genuine lies in the date.

The date of the formation of the Kûduvalli agrahâra stated to be S' 1313 or A.D. 1391 is Prajâpati and not Śrîmukha and Śrîmukha falls two years later in A.D. 1393. This difference of two years may however be explained by attributing it to the error of the copyist who wrongly read the original inscription and wrote 3 for 5 for the last figure in 1313. There is however another formidable difficulty regarding the record. The Mysore Gazetteer of 1897, Vol I p. 474 gives the dates 1472-1517 to Purushôttamabhârati and 1508-1560 to his successor Râmachandrabhârati. The grants of Śringeri furnish the dates 1418-51 to Purushôttama-bhârati and 1513-24 to Râmachandra-bhârati (E. C. VI. Introduction, p. 24.) Anyway the date S' 1313 is too early for the death of Purushôttama-bhârati and the installation of Râmachandra-bhârati in the pontifical seat at Śringêri. Hence the reliability of the present record as well as of the previously published record of the same village is questionable.

2. The present and future Revenue Authorities of Pargana Kolār Karnāṭak Subah Dāru-z-zafar Bijāpūr are hereby informed that the village of Hunain Halli, Simt Haveli
3. assigned for the miscellaneous charges of the staff of the said Pargana has been, as before, restored and confirmed for the maintenance of Sankri Maṭha according to the Zimn (entry) made on the back of the document. Therefore it is enjoined that the said village Darobast (entire)
4. be released so that for the well-being of His Majesty (lit. charity for the protection of the auspicious head of the King,) the revenue of the place be assigned from year to year for
5. the maintenance of Sankri Maṭha. And no new Sannad need be asked for. The matter should be regarded as binding and be acted upon accordingly.

Note.

The Sannad records the grant of a village Honnēna Halli (at present in Kolar Taluk) in the Pargana of Kolār, Karnāṭak province in the Bijāpur country made by the Moghul (?) governor, Dargāh Kulīkhān to the Sankari Mutt. The Sankari Mutt referred to here is evidently the Smārta Mutt now at Āvani, in Mulbāgal Taluk, which had its headquarters at Kōlār in the 17th century as is seen from a copperplate grant of Śrīrangarāya III now in the Āvani Mutt. (E. C. X. Mulbagal 60). The swami has not been named in the present sannad. It is issued under the seal of the Agent, Kāzi

Muhammad Shafi in 1104 A.H., on the 15th Rabi, Regnal year 11 (December 14, 1692 A.D.)

The following sannads also confirm the grant with slight differences in the number and income of the villages granted. The last sannad No. 23 contains the name of the donee Šankar Bhār[at]i, the Guru of the mutt. The name of the mutt is Šankari (or as Prof. Shustri reads the word 'Singeri'¹). The 19th century śrîmukhas or Bulls of the Āvani Mutt refer to its swami as the Śringêri Swami. "Śringêri śrî Śata-śringa-parvata-sannihita vilasat Kôlâhalapuravarâdhîśvara śrî Śringêri śrîmad Abhinavôddanda Vidyâranyabhârati svâmibhih", etc. (See the Telugu book Śrîmukha-vyâkhyâgrantha, Madras, 1915.) The tradition of the mutt is also to the effect that it was founded by a Swami of the Śringêri Mutt named Narasimha Bhârati who left Śringêri on a tour and while at Kôlâr appointed a disciple to carry on the newly founded Kôlâr mutt. Later he is said to have founded the Kûḍli mutt according to this tradition. That these sannads belong not to the Śringêri mutt proper but to the Kôlâr mutt is clear from the fact that in 1754 the donee in the sannad is Šankar Bhârati while the Śringeri pontiff was Abhinava Sachchidânanda Bhârati (1741-1767; See Rice's Mysore Gazetteer Vol. I p. 474.) Similarly in 1645, the date of Śrîranga III's grant, the Kôlâr swami was Râmachandra Bhârati, disciple of Viṭṭhala Bhârati who was himself a disciple of Viśvarûpa Bhârati while the contemporary at Śringêri was Sachchidânanda Bhârati (1627-1663) disciple of Abhinava Narasimha Bhârati who was the disciple of Immaḍi Narasimha Bhârati.

Note.

This last sannad was granted in the reign of the Mughal emperor Âlamgîr II on the 26th Shaban of 1167 A.H. (June 18, A.D. 1754). The seal contains the date 1168 A.H. and the name of the officer Nûr Khân. It is addressed to all the revenue authorities, Dêsamukhs, Dêsapândes, Patwaris and raiyats of Pargana Kolâr and confirms the grant of Hunnêr:ahalli and several other villages of the revenue of 196 hunsto Šankar Bhârati, to whom they had been issued as inam according to previous sannads. It is interesting to note that in this grant the name of the svâmi viz., Šankar Bhârati occurs as the donee in place of the name of the matt in the previous grants. The number of villages granted is also far greater than in the previous ones.

10. ṇyappanu kaṭṭisida maṇ-
11. tapa śubham astu

Note.

This inscription registers the construction of a maṇṭapa by Soṇyappa, son of Bayirapa, during the reign of the illustrious king Achyutarâya of Vijayanagar on the 1st lunar day of the dark half of Kârtika in the year Vilambi S' 1459. The date corresponds to 7th November, 1538 (if we take Vilambi, Ś 1460), but it is not verifiable as no week day is given.

4. Âlahallîya gavuḍa Bairejîyana
5. maga Chokka Battayyanu Munna-bâ-
6. ḷa-vaṃsa.....

Note.

This inscription records the gift of the village Taḷagûr for services in the temple named Perumâl in the village Siri Perumangalapaṭṇa by Chokkabattayya, son of Bairejîya, gaḍa of the village Âlahallî. The last portion of the inscription cannot be clearly made out as it is partly covered by the structure. The date of the record is stated to be Friday the 10th lunar day of the bright half of Âśvayuja in the year Śukla. No śaka year is given. Siri Perumangalapaṭṇa seems to have been the old name of the present Śivârapaṭṇa village.

On a fragmentary stone in the waste weir of the tank in the village Śivâra.

Kannada language and characters of 17th century A.D.

1. śrîmatu
2. saujanya-sîlaru
3. manneya-mauḷiya-
4. rum vûra mâḍisida-
5. rû

Note.

This seems to record the building of the above village by some one whose name is not given but who is praised as righteous in character and head-ornament of chieftains (manneyar). No date is given nor any other particulars to determine the identity of the person who is said to have built the village.

13. kere grāma vomdannu śrīmatu
14. Sivāchāra-sampanna śrī-Liṅga-
15. śakti.....koṭṭa.....

Note.

This records the gift of a village named.....kere, belonging to Vaḍigēhalli-sthala to a Vīraśaiva priest, Liṅgaśakti, by the chief Immaḍi Baichegaḍa, son of Bairegaḍa, ruler of Āvatināḍ and a subordinate of the illustrious king, Venkaṭapatirāya of Vijayanagar. The record is dated the 1st lunar day of the bright half of Chaitra in the year Khara S' 1573 (12th March A.D. 1651). As no week day is given the date cannot be verified.

On a boulder in the waste land near the village Hunasēnahalli in the same Hobali of Sidlaghatta.

Size 1'—8"×1'—8".

Kannada language and characters of 17th century.

4. Muddayyanige koṭṭa mā-
5. nyada hola idake tapida-
6. varu tāyi-tande vadhisida
7. pāpake hōharu

Note.

This registers the gift of a plot of land rent-free to one Muddayya by Sonṇappa-gaḍa on the 1st lunar day of the bright half of Bhādrapada in the year Sarvadhāri. The record ends with the usual imprecation. The date cannot be determined as no Śaka year is given.

30.

On a stone slab set up in front of the Chaḍḍēśvari shrine near the village Jangamakōṭe in the Hobali of Jangamakōṭe.

Size 2'×2'—6".

Kannada language and characters of 17th century A.D.

(The Stone is broken.)

2. ka sasana yentem

3. mânia hola ta
4. tamma guru Mâ
5. saṛa mēlepa ?
6. pāpake hô-
7. haru śrî

Note.

The inscription stone is broken and several letters have disappeared. Hence the record is fragmentary. It seems to register a gift of land by one Bammanâyaka. No date is given.

31.

On a plot of land belonging to the Nâyaka community to the south of the village Ranganâthapura in the same Hobali.

Kannada language and characters of 16th century A.D.

6. Ettinavoḍeyadêvarige
7. êrugâṇikeyanu biṭṭu
8. koṭṭaru mahâ-janara voppa śrî śrî

Note.

This inscription records the remission of plough-tax (êru-gâṇike) made by Chikarâya Nanjapagauda, chief of Sugaṭûr, to two Viraśaiva priests Râyavoḍeyadêva of Beṭṭadahâḷ and Ettinavoḍeyadêva. The approval of the grant by the mahâjanas is also recorded in the inscription. The grant is dated Monday 15th lunar day of the bright half of Mâgha in the year Plavanga. The number of Śaka years expired is not given and hence the date of the record cannot be determined. The Sugaṭûr chiefs ruled over a large part of the Kolar District from about 1451 A.D. to about 1693 A.D. (Rice's Mysore and Coorg from Inscriptions, P. 166.)

Translation.

May there be prosperity. Be it well. After 1460 years elapsed in the victorious and prosperous Śalivâhana era, in the year Virôdhikrit, on the 13th lunar day of the bright half of Bhâdrapada, while the illustrious king of kings, supreme lord of kings, vîra-pratâpa Achyutarâya-mahârâya was ruling the earth:—

We (Râmarâya-Oderayya) have granted as daṇḍige-umbali to Timmappagaḍa, of Are mangala, the village Śivayanahalli belonging to Aramâladahalli in Kôlâla-sîme, pertaining to Bêlûr-châvaḍi, favoured to (us) Râmarâya-Odera-ayyanavaru for the office of nâyaka by Achyutarâya-mahârâya. You (Timmappagaḍa) may enjoy in peace this village as rent-free estate, in hereditary succession for as long as the moon and sun endure. He who violates this grant will incur the sin of having slain tawny cows in Kâśi and will be guilty of the sin of killing his parents. Good fortune. Great prosperity.

Note.

This inscription belongs to the reign of the Vijayanagar king Achyutarâya and records the grant of a village named Śivayanahalli, a hamlet of the village Aramâladahalli situated in Kôlâla province and belonging to the administrative division of Bêlûr-châvaḍi. This village is stated to have been originally favoured by the king to his subordinate named Râmarâyaodeyar (probably the same as the famous Râmarâya, who was killed in the Tâlikôte battle) for his office of governor. It was now granted to a gauda named Timmappagauda by Râmarâyaodeyar as danḍige-umbali. This phrase danḍige-umbali might mean a grant of rent-free land for the up-keep of a palanquin or for making arrangements for carrying the king's palanquin. The former meaning seems to be more probable in the present case. The phrase may also be interpreted as a grant for proficiency in the use of a lute.

The date of the grant is given as 13th lunar day of the bright half of Bhâdrapada in Virôdhi, S' 1460. But S' 1460 is Viḷambi and not Virôdhi and the nearest Virôdhi falls in S' 1451 or S' 1450 expired. Evidently 1460 is a mistake for 1450 and the date corresponds to 17th August 1529 A. D. The village granted cannot be identified in the village lists or Taluk Map.

15. naṁ dânat svargam avâpnôti pâlanâd achyutaṁ padam

Note.

This copy of an inscription, the original of which is not forthcoming, begins with the usual invocatory stanza addressed to god Saṁbhu and registers the gift of a village

Kṛishṇâpura during the reign of Kṛishṇarâjayya (Kṛishṇarâya), king of Vijayanagar by Dêvayya, son of Rudrayya to a Brahman named Tippanabhaṭṭa, of Âpastamba-sûtra, Yajus-sâkhâ and Bhâradvâja-gôtra. The grant is stated to have been issued on the full moon day of the month Mârgaśira with lunar eclipse but no year is mentioned. The usual imprecation is found at the end of the record. Kṛishṇâpura referred to in the record is probably the same as Kṛishṇanahalli in the same hobali of Jangamakôte.

On a waste land belonging to the village Chokkanḍahalli on the way to the same village Jangamakôte in the same hobli.

10. sana mangala.....

Note.

This is an instance of a kereya-śâsana viz., a grant made for the construction of a tank. One Sonṇapagaḍa is stated in this record to have authorised a person named Lingayya to construct a tank and enjoy the land under the tank. The grant is stated to have been made on the 2nd lunar day of the dark half of Mârgaśira in the year Nandana.

On a piece of stone lying near a well below the tank Bhadrnakere in the same hobali.

6. ttarukoḍagi mânya gadde o $\frac{1}{4}$ o
7. idake tappidare tande-tâya
8. konda pâpa śrî

Note.

This records the gift of rent-free land with the sowing capacity of $\frac{1}{4}$ khaṇḍuga as nettaru-kodagi to Bâlaya, son of Mâdaya, by the chief of Sugaṭûr named Mummaḍi Chikarâya Nanjapagaḍa on Thursday 7th lunar day of the bright half of Bhâdrapada in the year Plava. No date in Śaka era is given. The usual imprecation occurs at the end of the record. For Chikarâya Nanjapagaḍa, chief of Sugaṭur, see also No. 31.

On a stone lying in a land belonging to Paṭêl Pillegauḍa near the village Ghaṭa-mâranaballi in the same hobali.

Note.

Some letters in lines 2 and 5 are effaced. The inscription records some gift of land made to a person named Maḍuvabarasa and to some Brahmans by the king Noḷambaraśa, obtainer of the band of musical instruments and descended from the Pallava family. The gift is stated to have been made by the donor along with the inhabitants of the village. No date or imprecation is contained in the grant. It is difficult to determine definitely which king of the Noḷamba dynasty is referred to by Noḷambarasa of the present record. It is probable that he is the same as Kali Noḷambâdi Arasa or Singapôta who fought with Duggamâra, the Ganga prince.

2.avammagan raṇad-eṛeyam
3.ṛida mârggam

Note.

Most of the writing in the record is effaced as it forms one of the stone steps constantly used by people when going to take water from the channel on the bank of which it is built. What remains legible seems to record the death of some general belonging to the army of Duggamâra. It is likely that this Duggamâra is the same as Prince Duggamâra Eṛeyappa, son of the Gaṅga king Śrīpurusha (circa. 726-777) and ruler of Kovalâla-nâḍ, who fought with the Nolambas (see pp. 39 and 55 of Mysore and Coorg from Inscriptions by Rice.)

Translation.

Be it well. When Bijayita caused Bhagavati (image) to be set up in Mariyase (Marase), Permmâḍigâvuṇḍa, the Thousand (citizens) and the royal accountant (arasarâ śrîkaraṇam) granted the land on the high ground to the north of the water-course for Bhagavatî. He who destroys this will be guilty of the five great sins.

Note.

This inscription records the setting up of the image of goddess Bhagavatî, a form of Kâlî, by Bijayita in Marase (called Mariyase in the epigraph), a village situated at a distance of 6 miles from Mysore on the way to Nanjangûḍ. No temple of Bhagavatî is now found in the village but an image of Châmuṇḍi is lying in the Śiva temple to the east of the village. Probably it must have been enshrined in a separate temple at an earlier date and when the temple went into ruins, was brought to the present Śiva temple.

Who is this Bijayita ? It appears to be the name of some high personage, king, prince, or chief under whose orders the image of Bhagavatî was set up and an endowment made for the worship of the goddess by the headman and the royal accountant and the thousand chief inhabitants of the village. The characters seem to be of the 8th or 9th century. There is a king Bijayita Bânarasa of the Bâna dynasty who ruled in Kolar District in the beginning of 10th century A.D. (E. C. X. Mulbagal, 243, 244, 249 of S' 831 ; Srinivasapur 40). But Marase, the village where the record is found, is far off from Kolar, and no stone inscriptions of this dynasty are found in the Mysore District. A copperplate grant discovered at Hullenahalli (Mys. Arch. Rep. 1927. p. 105) in Mandya Taluk refers to a Bâna king named Diṇḍigarar as a ruler of Kaḷbappunâḍ district (district round Kaḷbappu hill in Śravanabelgola village), but Marase is far off from Śravanabelgola and there is no evidence of its being included in Kaḷbappunâḍ. Hence it is very probable that the Bijayita of the present record is quite different from the Bâna king of the name.

There is a Ganga prince of the name of Vijayâditya, brother of king Śivamāra II who ruled in the beginning of the 8th century A.D. As the rule of the Gangas in the Mysore District is attested by several inscriptions, it is probable that Bijayita which is a Kannaḍa form of Vijayâditya refers to the above Ganga prince Vijayâditya and to his setting up the image of Bhagavatî in the village Marase.

The usual imprecation is found at the end of the record.

2. nvayô bhâti yô sêsha-śâstra-vâ-
3. râśi-pâragaiḥ

Note.

This inscription engraved in Hoysala characters of the 12th century on the pedestal of Pârśvanâtha figure, consists of only one verse in Sanskrit. It may be thus translated :

“In the illustrious Drāviḷa-saṃgha, in the Nandi-saṃgha, is the Aruṃgaḷa-anvaya, brilliant from (its members) having crossed the entire ocean of the śâstras.”

This stanza is found in several inscriptions of the Hoysala times referring to Jaina gurus (Ep. Car. III Nanjangud 134, V. Hassan 128, Arsikere 1. 14, etc.).

Drāviḷa-saṃgha (lit. the congregation of Draviḷas or Dravidas) with its branch Nandi-saṃgha (lit. the congregation of the Bull) is a sect or branch of the Jainas. So also is Mûla-sangha with its branches Sêna, Nandi, Dêva and Simha sanghas (E. C. II revised volume of Śravanabelgola Inscriptions, Translations, P. 112). Similarly Arungaḷānvaya and Koṇḍakunḍānvaya are the main sub-divisions or families belonging to these sections or groups.

The inscription stops abruptly after the above stanza and no further particulars are to be found.

Note.

A part of the inscription-stone is lost being cut off on the right side and hence several letters in each line have disappeared and the meaning of the inscription is therefore not clear.

The record is dated śaka 1113 or A.D. 1191, which corresponds to the year Virôdhikṛit. The first letter Vi of the name Virôdhikṛit is found in line 3 and the month Kârtika and the bright fortnight in the next line. No lunar day nor week-name is contained in the grant. A number of gauḍas named Kêtalegauḍa of Ânhur, Kampana of Bhêrya, Kesimayya, Kampanna,.....Hiriya Harahapagaḍa, seem to have made a grant of land under Gôḍakatte belonging to the tank Anṇayasamudra, and under Âḷvabâḍi tank in Mâsenâḍ.

We next learn that one Maṁḍalika-bôva, son of Saṇṇabôva and Hêṁabôviti made some repairs to the tank Anṇayasamudra and granted a plot of land of 8 salages as koḍagi for its maintenance.

It is next stated that the citizens of the village Marase made a grant of land in Gurur (Probably Gûlûr, a village near Marase), Kaḍaveyasarige, Kallukere, and Hiriyaḷakere to Maṁḍalikâchâri and Maṁḍalikabôva and others.

The usual imprecation next follows.

13. dar avara śadha-
14. maru Kamaladê-

Note.

This records the death by sanyasana of a Jaina guru named Vardhamânadêva who is described as one who took a prominent part in the administrative work under the Hoysalas, and as a disciple of Vâdirâjadeva, descended from Śântimuni belonging to the section of the Jainas known as Draviḷa-sangha, Arunaglânvaya, and Nandi-gaṇa. The present inscription-stone (which contains the inscription and a seated figure of a Jaina guru) is said to have been set up in his memory by his fellow-student Kamaladêva. No date nor the name of the reigning king is given. The characters seem to be of the last part of 11th century A.D. and the inscription might belong to the reign of the Hoysala king Vinayâditya or Viṣṇuvardhana. A Jaina guru Vâdirâja is described in the Śravaṇabelgoḷa Inscription No. 67 of 1129 A.D. as having acquired great fame in the Châlukya capital and to have been honoured by Jayasimha I (1018-1042.) Probably the guru Vâdirâjadêva referred to in the present record is identical with the above. If so, his disciple Vardhamânadêva must have lived in the middle of 11th century i.e., in the reign of the Hoysala king Vinayâditya and helped him with his advice in the government of the kingdom.

Note.

This records the death as sati of the wife (not named) of Virapadêva of Malevûr who died while defending the cattle of his village against enemies in the reign of the Hoysala king Viraballâlâdeva. Malevûr referred to in the record may probably be the old name of the village in which the inscription is found. No date is contained in the record.

Note.

This inscription is incomplete as several lines after line 10 are completely effaced. It belongs to the Vijayanagar king Bukkaṇṇodeyar or Bukka I and is dated 12th lunar day of the dark half of Bhâdrapada in the year Śrîmukha, the 1273rd year of the Śâlivâhana era. But Śaka year 1273 or A.D. 1351 is identical with Khara and not Śrîmukha. The nearest year Śrîmukha is Śaka 1255. The date is hence irregular.

Note.

This inscription records the construction of the above tank by Vîraiya, belonging to the household of the Kaḷale chief Nanjarâjaiya, son of Vîrarâjaiya and grandson of Daḷavâyi Doḍḍayya on the 5th lunar day of the bright half of Mâgha in the year Íśvara 1676 of the Śâlivâhana era, 11th year of the cycle beginning from Prabhava and 4878 years in Kaliyuga era. The date is irregular as Śaka 1676 or A.D. 1754 is Bhâva and not Íśvara and the nearest Íśvara is S' 1679, three years later viz., 1757 A.D. Kaḷale Nanjarâjaiya was the famous general of Mysore under the king Immaḍi Krishṇarâja Voḍeyar (1734-66).

This records the gift of a rice-field 5 kuḷis in extent in the village Kâttupura made for the service of offering food at different times to god Allâlaperumâl (Varadarâjasvâmi) by the sons of Perumâladeva, mahâprabhu of Kolkana, named Allâlâḍêvan, Vimayyan, Nâraṇan, and Gaṇṇayan. The grant is dated in the month of Mêsha of the year Krôdhi (1304 ? A. D.).

No king is mentioned in the record nor the number of years expired in Śaka era at the time of the grant. The characters seem to be of the 14th century and the year Krôdhi of the record may be regarded as falling in 1304 A.D. It is difficult to determine who the Perumâledêva referred to in the grant, is. A Perumâlâdeva-daññâyaka, minister of Narasimha III and Ballâla III and governor of parts of the present Nanjangûḍ and Châmarâjnagar Taluks, is referred to in several inscriptions of those taluks along with his sons Mâdhava-daññâyaka and Chakravarti-daññâyaka. The names of the sons of Perumâlâdêva of the present record are however different and in place of the usual titles of the minister Perumâlâdêva, he is given the simple title of Mahâprabhu of Kolkana, which is probably identical with the village Kulagâna in the Châmarâjnagar Taluk. As regards Allâla-Perumâl temple in Kâttupura referred to in the grant, it is learnt that a temple of that god was standing near the present village Heḍatale and Kâttupura seems therefore to be the name of a village which was once situated near Heḍatale and has now disappeared.

Note.

A part of this inscription has been so thickly coated with oily grease that it is very difficult to make out the characters. It seems to record the gift of the village Kâṭûr belonging to Mutavâḍi in Kaṇiyala-sthala free of taxes to some one (name not found) by Mâdaṇanâyaka on the 10th day of the bright half of Âśhâḍha in the year Durmati. The date is not verifiable and the record probably belongs to the same period as the previous number and the donor also is probably the same as Mâdaṇaya of the previous number.

Good Fortune. Be it well. While the illustrious mahâmaṇḍalêśvara, Tribhu-vanamalla, capturer of Talākâḍu, Kongu, Nangali, Banavase, Hânungal, Uchchangi, and Noṇambavâḍi, a Ganga in the prowess of his arms, unassisted hero, śanivârasiddhi,

Giridurgamalla, a Râma in battle, possessed of undoubted valour, Vîra Ballâladêva was ruling the earth in peace and wisdom from his capital Dôrasamudra :—

Be it well. After 1120 Śaka years elapsed, in the year Kâlayukta, on Saturday the 5th lunar day of the dark half of Bhâdrapada, during the rule of the illustrious mahâpradhâna (chief minister), sarvâdhikâri, hiriya-dañṇâyaka Gauḍayya—

Four persons named Kâṭûra, Huṭṭida, Âridara and Koladama of Nugunâḍ built a tank and erected a temple. For this temple Kâṭûra granted wet land of the sowing capacity of 3 khaṇḍugas for conducting the daily offering of food. Kolagaḍa, Sôvagaḍa's sons Muddagaḍa, Kalagaḍa, Châvâḍi Âytagaḍa, Huṭṭida, and Tammaḍi Râyâḍi gave away with pouring of water, 1000 guḷis of land for paying up of the fees to managers of this temple (tâṇikada-honnu) and for proprietary rights? (samyabhâga). (The meaning of lines 8-10 is not quite clear).

He who violates this act of charity will be guilty of killing 7 crores of cows on the banks of the Ganges and will incur the sin of destroying a tank and a temple. They will suffer the penalty of one who slays his father and commits incest with his mother.

(Signatures of) Kâṭûra, Huṭṭida, Âridara, Haliya, Hemaḍi Âchâri, Hemaḍi Âchâri's grandson Châkâchâri, Kambâchâri, Kambâchâri's son Hêmâchâri, Mâlabôviti's sons Kâṭabôva and Châvabôva.

Note.

This record is of the reign of the Hoysala king Vîraballâla II and is dated Saturday 5th lunar day of the dark half of Bhâdrapada in the year Kâlayukta, S' 1120 (corresponding to Saturday, 22nd August of 1198 A.D.) A person named Gauḍaiya with the titles mahâpradhâna (chief minister) sarvâdhikâri and hiriya-dañṇâyaka is stated to be the ruler of the district Nugunâḍ under the king. At this time four persons of that district named Kâṭûra, Huṭṭida, Âridara and Koladama joined together and built a tank and a temple; and a plot of land of the sowing capacity of 3 khaṇḍugas was granted by one of them named Kâṭûra as an endowment to the temple for offering food daily to the god. It is also stated that some grant was made for the office of sthânika (managing authorities) of the temple by various individuals named Kolagaḍa, Muddagaḍa, Kalagaḍa, Châvâḍi-Âytagaḍa, sons of Sôvagaḍa and Huṭṭida and Tammaḍi (priest) Râyâḍe. Then follows an imprecation against those who violate the grant and lastly are appended the signatures of various individuals named Kâṭûra, Huṭṭida, Âridara, Haliya, Hemaḍi Âchâri and his grandson (mamma) Châkâchâri, Kambâchâri and his son Hêmâchâri, Mâlabôviti's sons Kâṭabôva and Châvabôva.

The temple and the tank said to have been erected in the record are evidently the Sômêśvara temple of the village Kâṭûr in which the present inscription is engraved and the tank Sômasamudra referred to in the previous inscription. The names Huṭṭida etc., in the record are rather peculiar.

Note.

This short inscription is engraved on the pedestal of a stone image of Pârvati-Paramêśvara which has been described in page 12 of the last year's report. The record contains the names of several persons of Kundanâḍ district (a portion of the present Sagar Taluk, Ep. Car. VIII Sâgar 87 and 88) who collaborated in the consecration of the above image. Their names are Sirigâvuṇḍa, younger brother of Sântagâvuṇḍa, son of Prabhu Sirigagâvuṇḍa, who was the son of Mâvanta (Elephant-rider) Kêtaleman, and Dâkarasi:—Chandôja, younger brother of Gulugôja, son of Sivara Jôgôja of the village Nulavara:—Dâseya, son of Baramanôja and Chandôja of the village Pûgôḍu.

Be it well. While the illustrious Jayasimhadêva was governing the kingdom, while the illustrious Kundarâja was ruling Banavâsi 12000 and Sântalige thousand, in the Śaka year 941, the year Siddhârthi, on the occasion of Uttarâyana-sankrânti:—

Biyaḷa, son of Halliyânma and Jakkabbe, obatined and granted one mattar of wet land for food service of god Mahâdêva of Banniyûr, to continue as long as moon, sun and stars last.

He who destroys this grant will incur the sin of killing a tawny cow and breaking a lingam. He who protects this gets endless merit. Good fortune.

Note.

This record is of the reign of the Châlukya king Jayasimhadêva (1018-1042) under whom Kundarâja called also Kundamarasa was governing the provinces of Banavâsi 12000 and Sântalige 1000. (See E. C. VII Shikarpur 307 of Ś 938 or 1016, 125 of Ś 941 or A.D. 1019, 9 of Ś 943 or A.D. 1021, 30 of Ś 953 or A.D. 1031). The object of the inscription is to register the gift of one mattar of wet land for the service of daily food-offerings to god Mahâdêva of the village Banniyûr (the same as the present village Bannûr, where the epigraph is found) by Biyaḷa, son of Halliyânma and Jakkabbe. The grant is dated the Uttarâyana Sankrânti day of Śaka year 941 Siddhârthi corresponding to December 24, 1019 A.D. The usual imprecation occurs at the end of the grant.

The letters are well-formed and the lines regular. The size of the letters is about an inch. There are few orthographical errors. Line 11 has “konando” for “kondona”; the old Kannaḍa forms kâḍon and kondon still persist in this record of the 11th century.

Be it well. While the victorious kingdom of the illustrious Tribhuvanamalladēva, refuge of the whole universe, favourite of fortune and the earth, mahârâjâdhirâja, paramêśvara, parama-bhaṭṭâraka, ornament of Satyâśraya family, jewel of Châlukyas was prospering to last as long as the moon, sun and stars endure :—when the illustrious

Daṇḍanâyaka Tambarasa, a dependant on his lotus feet, obtainer of the band of five musical instruments, mahāsāmantādhipati, mahāprachandadaṇḍanâyaka, granter of boons to the learned, purifier of his race, the sole friend of all, a sun to the lotus his family, an ocean of good speech, Brihaspati in wisdom, a mahāvratī (Śiva ?) in purity of conduct, a brother to others' wives, a Vidyādhara among the learned, the abode of all good qualities, delighter of both kings (Sômêśvara II and Vikramāditya VI), a Hanuman in fighting for (pêshaṇa-Hanma) the illustrious Trailōkyamalla Vīra Nalamba Permmāṇaḍi Jayasinghadêva, death to hostile troops, possessor of these and other attributes, was ruling Banavâsi 12,000 and Sântalige 1000 in peace and wisdom :—

On Monday the 10th lunar day of the bright half of Māgha in the year Raudri, 5th year of Châlukya Vikrama era ; be it well. The mahâjanas of the agrahâra village Bannivûr where Kappayyabhaṭṭôpādhyâya of Agrahâra Râjajī, son of Padmanâbhayya of Vasishṭagôtra, possessed of Yama (restraint), Niyama (discipline), Svādhyâya (study) Dhyâna (meditation), Dhâraṇa (keeping the mind collected), Mauna (silence), Anusṭhâna (performance of duties), Japa (repetition of sacred formulae) and Samādhi (absorption in holy thought), had set up god Sômêśvara, gave away, for the service of food offerings to the god, one Guṇiga's mattar of wet land, situated to the east of the wet lands belonging to the said agrahâra and north of the wet lands (previously) belonging to the god.

Whoever maintains this charity as a charity of his own will gain the merit of making a gift of a thousand tawny cows with the five gems set in their horns and hoofs to thousand Brahmans in Vâraṇâsi and Kurukshêtra. He who destroys this will incur the sin of slaying a thousand tawny cows and a thousand Brahmans in the same holy places.

Note.

This inscription belongs to the reign of Tribhuvanamalla Vikramāditya VI, Western Châlukya king and is dated in the year Raudri, 5th year of Châlukya Vikrama era. Daṇḍanâyaka Tambarasa, a subordinate of the king's younger brother Jayasingadêva, is stated to have been the governor of Banavasi 12,000 and Sântalige 1000 provinces. The present grant registers the gift of wet land of one matter of Guṇiga in the village Bannivûr (same as Bannûr where the inscription is found) bestowed by the mahâjanas of the village for the service of god Sômêśvara set up by Râjajī Kappayyabhaṭṭôpādhyâya, son of Padmanâbhayya of Vasishṭha-gôtra in the village. The week day of the grant seems to be wrong as Māgha śuddha 10 of Raudri, the 5th year of Châlukya Vikrama (January 23, 1081 A.D.) is a Saturday and not Monday as stated in the grant.

Guṇigana mattar or mattar of Guṇiga is a standard measure for wet land met with in the inscriptions of the period (see E. C. VII Shikarpur, 70, 71, 287, etc.)

Tambarasa of the present record is also referred to in No. 65 of this report.

Note.

A part of the slab on which this record is engraved has broken off and hence several letters have disappeared. The inscription records the gift of 3 mattars of wet land by the mahâjanas of Banniyûr (Bannûr) for the sacrificial house (agnishṭage) and perpetual lamp and food offerings to the god Viṣṇu set up in the village by Kappayyabhaṭṭôpâdhyâyâ of the village Râjaḷi (See the previous inscription No. 54) and worshipped by the people of the surrounding villages including Sâliyûr (now called Sâlûr in Shikarpur Taluk) to the number of thirty-six thousand. A sum of 30 gadyâṇas and two paṇas was also subscribed by the inhabitants of the village named Mākayya, Kālayya, Dêvayya, Biṭṭayya and the barber Nâga and interest thereon was to be utilised for the service of offering a perpetual lamp for the god Viṣṇu ? and also for the matt ? of Biyaṇabhaṭṭa, son of Dākayya, younger brother of Komayyabhaṭṭôpâdhyâyâ of Īsapura. The date of the grant is Thursday 3rd lunar day of the bright half of Vaiśākha in S' 989 Plavanga corresponding to Thursday 19th April 1067 A.D.

As regards the name of the king in whose reign the grant was made, only the letters malla are now left in the record and the titles of the Châlukya kings are given. As the Châlukya king at the time of the grant was Sômêśvara Bhuvanaikamalla (1068-1076) we may supply the missing letters of the name in line 6 as dbhuvanaika.

No imprecation is found in the inscription. The village Īsapura referred to in the grant is the same as Īsûr in the same Taluk (Shikarpur Taluk).

Note.

This record is engraved to the right of the previous record on the same slab. As however the previous inscription ends just above the line 48 of the present record, the present inscription extends to the left after that line to the very end of the slab. Unfortunately a portion of the slab on the right side has broken off and is lost. Hence many letters at the end of each line have disappeared and the record is very fragmentary and cannot be fully read or interpreted.

The inscription belongs to the reign of the Western Châlukya king Bhuvanaikamalla (Circa 1068-1076 A.D.) and issued on a Monday on the day of Uttarâyaṇa-sankrânti in the year Paridhâvi. Although the Śaka year is not given, it is possible to take the year Paridhâvi of the record as 1072 A.D., as that is the only year corresponding to Paridhâvi in the reign of Bhuvanaikamalla and the date of the grant would then correspond to Monday, 24th December 1072 A.D.

A subordinate of the king named Ēchirâja is praised with all his titles and is stated to have pleased the king and obtained from him various honours or offices. While engaged in listening to a religious discourse he seems to have determined to do some act of charity.

The meaning of the rest of the record is not clear. The village Bannivuram (Bannûr) is praised greatly and it seems that Ēchirâja made a gift for the daily worship and repairs to some temple in that village conjointly with Bhaṭṭimayya of Īsavura (the present village Īsûr in the Shikarpur Taluk) and Appajîya in the year Paridhâvi, on the day of Uttarâyaṇa sankrânti. A grant of land, one mattar in extent was also made to the temple trustee (Ka ?) ppayyabhaṭṭôpādhyāya. No imprecations are contained in the grant.

Note.

This inscription has been already noticed in Page 42, of the Annual Report for 1911. The text is now published with a note. The titles of the king show that he is a Yâdava king and part of the name "Chandra" is clear, the rest having disappeared. Evidently the king referred to is Râmachandradêva of Yâdava dynasty.

The date of the record is given as Monday 13th lunar day of the dark half of Mâgha in the Vijayasamvastra, 25th year of the reign of Râmachandradêva. Now according to Rice's Mysore and Coorg Inscriptions page 109, Râmachandra began to reign in A.D. 1271 and 25th year of his reign would be A.D. 1295 or Manmatha. The year Vijaya of the record is the 23rd year of the reign. But there seems to be some confusion or difference in the computations of the regnal years. E. C. VII Shikarpur 211 is of Jayasamvastara 25th year of the same reign. Taking the year Vijaya, the date corresponds to Monday January 25, A.D. 1294.

The object of the record is to register the gift of the office of heggadike (management) of Bhêruṇḍasvâmi temple in Balligâve (Belagâmi) made to Vaidya Dâsaṇṇa by Dêvarasa along with the Paṭṭanasvâmi (the chief of the city) and the heads of the five mattas and the chief inhabitants ? (praje-basava). A plot of land of two mattars situated in the estate belonging to a Jain temple named Prathamasêna-basadi was also given away along with the land.

Note.

This record also has been noticed in the Annual Report for 1911, page 46. The text of the inscription has been given now along with notes. The death of a Jaina woman named Jakauve, desciple of Kamalāsēna by the rite of samādhi (not taking any food or drink but contemp'ating on Jina when one is ill and feels that he or she cannot survive the illness) is recorded in this inscription. It is dated Thursday 11th lunar day of the dark half of Bhādrapada in the year, Akshaya, 16th year of Vira Ballāḷa's reign. Taking the reign of Vira Ballala II the date would correspond to Thursday 31st August 1206 A.D. But this is 23rd year of the reign of Vîraballāḷa and not 16th year. There is no other Akshaya year during his reign. Hence 16 may be taken as a mistake of the engraver for 23, or the calculation of the years of the reign of Vîraballāḷa was made from 1191 A.D. (Compare E. C. VII Shikarpur 148 of the village Belgâmi which speaks of a similar death in the year Kshaya, 16th year of Vîraballāḷadeva.) In case Ballāḷa III's reign is taken, Akshaya would fall in 1326 A.D. and would be 36th year. There are two Bhādrapadas in the year and in either, ba || would fall on Friday and Sunday and not on Thursday. Hence it is more probable that this belongs to the reign of Ballāḷa II.

2. bhavyâbdhi-varhishṇu-saśânka-mûrttiḥ

Note.

Only a portion of the record now remains, the rest engraved on the right side of the image having become effaced. The inscription seems to refer to a Jaina guru who is described here as a sun to the Eastern Mountain gaṇa and moon in causing the sea of Jaina devotees to swell up.

Note.

This inscription engraved on the pedestal of the Kâlikâdêvi image registers the grant of some contribution made apparently for the worship of the above goddess at the rate of one hâga (quarter of a haṇa) for workshop (kôl) by the artisans, Kaṭakada Masaṇa (setṭi) and Yemmeyasetṭi of Baḷligâvi (Belgâmi) and others assembled in a meeting. They are described as entitled to all praise, adorned with all good qualities, endowed with honesty, purity, righteousness, gentleness, courtesy, and piety, possessed of the favour of Kâlikâdêvi, masters of (the art of working in the) five metals (viz. gold, silver, copper, tin and iron), protectors of the city (of Belgâmi?). As several letters in lines 4, 5 and 7 have worn off and are illegible, the names of the other merchants who made the grant and of the engraver of the record are lost. The engraver is said to be a brazier and a son-in-law (aḷiya) of Maṇivôja and a son (maganu) of the great city? (mahânagara). The exact significance of the latter phrase mahânagarada maga is not clear.

No date is given in the record. The characters seem to belong to the end of the 13th century A.D.

Note.

This record also relates to the same temple of Kâlikâdêvi as the previous one (No. 60) and is full of lacunae in lines 1-4. It registers the gift of a rice-field situated to the right of the road leading to Kâlikâdêvi temple in Balligâve (Belgâmi) made for the services of daily worship and food offerings in the temple. The names of the donors are lost but they are praised as experts in five metals, and defenders of the city as in the previous record. It is also stated that Mârôja, brazier of Balligâve built the temple of Kâlikâdêvi in stone and looked after the maintenance of the grant.

The grant is dated Thursday in the dark half of Mâgha in the year Virôdhi. As no year in Śaka era nor tithi is given it is not possible to determine the exact equivalent of the above date. The characters seem to be of the end of 13th century and the year Virôdhi may stand for 1289 A.D.

Translation.

Be it well. In the 9th year of the illustrious Yādava-chakravarti bhujabala Vīraballāḷa, in the year Siddhārthi, on the auspicious day with Vyatīpāta and Saṅkrānti in the bright fortnight of Āshāḍha.

For the eightfold worship of the god Mallikāmōda-śāntinātha in the Hiriya Basadi of the capital city Baḷligrāme :—

While the illustrious mahāpradhāni (chief minister) sēnādhipati (general) Malliyaṇa-daṇḍanāyaka was ruling Nāgarakhaṇḍa and Jiddulige Seventy (districts) in peace and wisdom punishing the wicked and protecting the righteous :—

Heggaḍe Sīriyaṇṇa, the officer of the city, Chāvunḍarāya, officer of Hejjunka (major customs dues) collected chiefly on mūlevarta (heavy packages of merchandise carried in wagons or on bullocks ?) within his district of jurisdiction ? (tann anta-rāḷike), and Sōmayya and Mālaveggaḍe, who was an officer of Manneyada Koppavisa —all these remitted their customs dues on 20 bullocks, for Padmanandi-dēva, preceptor ? of Sīriyaṇṇa with pouring of water and after laving his feet.

He who protects this act of charity will obtain the merit of giving away thousand tawny cows to Brahmins who are experts in Vedas in Benares and Kurukshêtra.

Note.

This inscription has been noticed in the Annual Report for 1911, P. 46. The text is now given with a note and translation.

The record is of the reign of the Hoysala king Yādava-chakravarti Vīraballāḷa. Malliyaṇa-daṇḍanāyaka, mahāpradhāni and sēnādhipati is mentioned as governing the districts of Nāgarakhaṇḍa 70 and Jiddulige 70 which cover most of the present Shikarpur Taluk. The inscription registers the grant (or remission) of customs dues on 70 pack-bullocks made by Heggaḍe Sīriyaṇṇa, Chāvunḍarāya, Sōmayya and Mālaveggaḍe, officers of customs in and around the capital Belgāmi, for services in the Jaina temple of Hiriya Basadi in Baḷligave (Belgāmi). The exact nature of the office held by each of these is not clear. A Jaina guru named Padmanandi was made the trustee of the temple. Who this Padmanandi was is not known. A Jaina guru of this name is mentioned as having set up a monument in memory of his preceptor Śubhachandra who died in 1313. (Śravanabelagola Inscriptions, Revised Edition, Intr. P. 74.) He may be the same as the Padmanandi of the present record.

The dating of the record is imperfect. As merely the Jovian year Siddhârthi is given and the date is not expressed in terms of Śaka era it is not possible to find out its exact equivalent. Taking the regnal year 9 and the name of the king Ballāḷa, in the record, we find that Siddhârthi does not occur as the 9th year either in the reign of Ballāḷa II or that of Ballāḷa III. As the paleography of the record suggests a later date than that of the reign of Ballāḷa II (1173-1220) we may take the Siddhârthi occurring in the reign of Ballāḷa III as the probable date of the record. If so, Siddhârthi Âshâḍha would correspond to June 1319, 29th year of Ballāḷa III (1291-1342) and it may be supposed that the engraver omitted by mistake the figure 2 before 9 in line 2. Neither the tithi nor week-day is named in the grant but the mention of the śukla-paksha, and Sankrânti will enable us to equate the date of the record with June 28, Âshâḍha śu 11, a day on which the sun entered the house of Karkâṭaka. The yôga on the day however was not Vyatipâta as stated in the grant.

This record has been noticed in P. 41, of the Annual Report for 1911. It registers the gift of a plot of wet land to the west of Ballakhaḍeya to Padumâvati, a dancing-girl of the Tripurântaka temple at Balipura (Belgâmi). The donor is Triḷôchanapaṇḍita a Śaiva priest, who seems to have been in charge of the above temple in A.D. 1070 (ibid. P. 40). The engraver of the grant is named Lajeya Muda. No date is given in the record but the letters seem to belong to the 11th century. The exact meaning of lines 4-6 cannot be made out as the record abounds in errors.

BELAGAMI KALLESWARA TEMPLE.

(LL. 1—4.)

Salutation to Śambhu beautiful with the fly-flap that is the moon kissing his lofty head and the foundation pillar for the city of the three worlds. Be it well. While the illustrious Jagadêkamalladêvar, the refuge of the whole universe, favourite of the goddesses of wealth and earth, mahârâjâdhirâja-paramêśvara parama-bhaṭṭâraka, an ornament to the race of Satyâsraya, jewel of the Châlukyas, was ruling in the capital city of Moḷiganûr :—

(LL. 4—9.)

In the Saka year 947 Krôdhana, on Sunday the 5th lunar day of the bright half of Śrâvana :—on the representation of Kundarâja, lord of Vanavâsadêsa, were granted, for the services of offering sandal-paste, lights, incense, food, to god Kalidêvêśvara-svayambhudêvar and for the repairs and improvements of the temple, two mattars of wet land measured by Kachchhavi pole in Hulleyabayal of Baḷligâve and two maḷiges (shops) situated to the east of Vajjada-kêri and within the boundaries of Bidirêśvarada-sîme and a flower garden to the north of the temple with the pouring of water into the hands of and washing the feet, of Śivaśaktipaṇḍita, who was the trustee of the said temple and the chief of Kâlâmukhas, and possessed of the attributes of yama, niyama, svâdhyâya, dhyâna, dhâraṇa, mauna, anushthâna, japa and samâdhi.

(LL. 10—11.)

Prince Jayasimha displayed the great prowess of his arms by terrifying the whole army of Madhurântakachôla which came upon him with great force and cutting it down in heaps with his sharp sword in such a manner as it would form an embankment to the river Kirudore (Tungabhadra) and making him flee in fright towards Kanchi.

(LL. 12—13.)

The said king Jayasimha's son was Trailôkyamalla Âhavamalla in the waters of whose terrible sword all the proud hostile kings were drowned.

(LL. 13—15.)

His beloved son is the invincible king Bhuvanaikamalla Sômêśvara. His younger brother is king Vikramâditya who has vanquished all hostile kings. The younger brother of that great king is Jayasimha, a lion to the elephants that are the enemy kings and a destroying fire to the overbearing hostile rulers.

(LL. 15—16.)

Among them (the brothers) prospered Vikramâditya, a Vishṇu in appearance, possessed of fame bright as moon, and of great prowess, a thunderbolt to the mountains that are the enemies, and a god of the valiant.

(LL. 16—18.)

With the might of his arms Vikramâditya showed his sword blade to the Chôla king and his sheath to the Lâla king and overcame them and with the fierce elephant on which he rode he chased with great force the host of feudatory chiefs of those two kings who had gathered (for battle) and praised by the world became the lord of the bright Lakshmî (wealth) of the Châlukya kingdom.

(LL. 18—20.)

While slapping the Tivûla (Tamil viz., Chôla king) on his cheeks, Vikramâditya-dêva put him to shame and made him serve as a hand-maiden though he was a male. Firmly passing a string through the nose of the Mâlava king he mounted over him. Trampling over the king of Anga he tore him asunder with great noise and bringing many kings in his arm-pits like rabbits he put them in prison making them play-things (lit. kings in play).

(LL. 20—22.)

The elephant of the quarters, the Châlukya king, causes the great fever of fear to the lord of Dhârâ, and is a fierce Angel of Destruction to the Chôla, and its feet are caressed by the crowns of various kings like those of Saurâshṭra, Anga, Kālinga, Vanga, Magadha, Andhra, Avanti and Pāñchâla and it sports in the hills situated in the groves on the shores of the eastern and western oceans.

(LL. 23—24.)

O ! King Vikramâditya ! Your valour is the valour of him (Vishṇu) who in the form of Narasimha tore open the breast of the king of Dânavas ; your strength is the strength of him (Râvaṇa) who lifted up Kailâsa with Rudra on it ; your courage is the courage of him (Dadhichi) who with great love gave up his own skin to Indra ; your resoluteness is the resoluteness of him (Paraśurâma) who in order that the earth may be rid of Kshatriyas slew the kings twenty-one times.

(LL. 24—26.)

“Why share it with others ! I alone can bear this.” Thus thinking, Vikramâditya-dêva boldly lifted off the burden of the earth from the back of the great tortoise, from the hoods of the lord of serpents, from the shoulders of the regent elephants and from the roots of the mountain caves and placed it safely, by his great prowess, on his own shoulders.

(LL. 26—27.)

The fire that is the glory of Pratâpa-Kâlâṇaḷa (Vikramâditya), spread in all directions melting like wax the great birudas of hostile kings, who were considered to be the greatest heroes (?). The Chôla king, with all his titles, bore his crown like dancing-girls wearing their braids of hair. When the Râya-kôlâhala (one who is master over kings) gets enraged which hero is there who can fight with him ?

(LL. 28—30.)

Thus praised :—Be it well. While the victorious kingdom of the illustrious Tribhuvanamalladêva, refuge of the whole universe, lord of fortune and Earth, king of kings, lord over kings, parama-bhaṭṭâraka, an ornament to Satyâśraya family, adornment to Châlukyas, was increasingly prosperous to endure as long as the moon, sun and stars last :—

(LL. 31—32.)

His younger brother, Vikrama Noḷamba, worthy of respect from ali, a friend who is ever in the thoughts of Vikramâditya, beloved younger brother of king Châlukya-Râma (Vikramâditya) praised and loved by him, an enchanting flowery arrow of the Cupid of kings (Vikramâditya) :—When all this is said what more can a poet eulogise ?

(LL. 33—35.)

Dahaḷe is still smouldering. The Lâla (king) is about to enter the forests in the Snowy mountain. The Tivula (Chôla king) unable to remain in his own country thinks of running to the south of Lankâ (viz., to plunge into the sea). Apprehensive of his (Noḷamba's) anger the Konkana tries to hide himself (in the mountain caves of his country). How powerful is this Noḷamba, whose enemies tremble before him ?

(LL. 35—37.)

Possessed of these attributes : be it well : the illustrious Trailôkyamalla Vijaya Noḷamba Pallava Permmânaḍi Jayasimhadêvar, Yuvarâja (Prince) of the kingdom of the Pallava dynasty praised by the whole universe and famous over the world, râja-paramêśvara, a Mahêśvara among heroes, an ornament of valour, lord of the goddess of victory, a protective talisman to those who seek refuge in him, crest-jewel of the Chalukyas, a Śiva in battle, pure among kshatriyas, a haughty lion, a Cupid in beauty, plunderer of the camp of hostile kings, and a champion on behalf of his elder brother :—

(LL. 38—40.)

The great ruler Vîra Noḷamba obtained the dignity of Yuvarâja reigning happily over the kingdoms of Puligere, Kandur, Êḷumale (Tirupati) Kâsavaḷal, Banavâse. down to the southern ocean, making the wicked tremble with fear.

(LL. 40—45.)

Devoted to the service of his lotus feet, was the heroic general Tambarasa, possessed of bright fame, and a conqueror of hostile kings. Victor by his prowess over the Chôla king who confronted him in battle, destroyer of the famous (city) Kâncî-pura by the fire of his anger, prisoner by the might of his arms of powerful and valiant enemy kings, pursuer of Mâlava king, and a tormentor of the Kêraḷa——was Tambadaṇḍâdhinâtha. Wandering through Ma'le seven and Kombu seven (provinces), Tambadaṇḍâdhinâtha a receptacle of prowess, conqueror of hosts of enemies, would with the might of his arms, toss the heads of the hostile kings like a ball and cutting their flesh to pieces would distribute it to evil spirits. Which hero is there who can encounter either him or Yama ?

(LL. 45—47.)

‘Eulogised by all the people, Tamba has freed from enemies the whole world surrounded by ocean for our benefit and making the Sêvuna, ever eager for the sport of battle, bend down before him, is fighting for the conquest of the territory of Chôla king by the might of his arms and is eager to conquer the whole earth. Is he an ordinary man ?’ Thus says the Nôlamba (Jagadêkamalla).

(LL. 47—49.)

With great energy Tambadaṇḍâdhinâtha, praised by all, has defeated and chased the kings of Khasa,¹ Karnâta, Ândhra, Vanga, Draviḷa, Magadha, Nêpâḷa, Kâlînga, Pânc'hâla, Surâshṭra and numerous other rulers and with his glory spreading in all directions presented to his master the freshest among the elephants, dancing-girls, and horses of the enemies. Tamba is a conqueror of the assemblage of enemies, a sun to the lotuses that are the poets, orators, and logicians, and a delighter of the hosts of learned men and a foundation-pillar of Châlukya kingdom.

(LL. 49—55.)

Thus prospering and praised :—Be it well. The illustrious Mahâpradhâna (chief minister) hîri-sandhi-vigrahi-daṇḍanâyakam (senior minister for peace and war) Tambarasar, obtainer of the band of five musical instruments, chief among the mahâ-sâmantas (Principal feudatories), Mahâprachandaṇḍanâyaka, bestower of gifts to the learned, pure in family, sole friend of the world, a Brihaspati in discrimination, a saint for purity, a brother to others' wives, a Vidyâdhara among the learned, a sun to the firmament of his race, an ocean of truth, an abode of all good qualities, delighter of two kings, a Hanuma in fighting for the illustrious Trailôkyamalla Vîra Nôlamba Pallava Permmâḍi Jayasimha, and Death to enemies ;—was ruling (the provinces) Sântalige thousand, Maṇḍali thousand, Jiddulige seventy, Nâgarakhaṇḍa seventy, Eḍenâḍ seventy, Mûgunda twelve and the dêva-bhôgas (?) punishing the wicked and protecting the righteous, and living happily in his capital Balligâvi.

(LL. 55—58.)

While discoursing on gifts, Tambarasa, bestowed with pouring of water, to be respected by all, two mattars of wet land belonging to the old vritti and one mattar below the tank of Pura on the occasion of Uttarāyaṇa-sankramaṇa and Vyatīpāta on Sunday the 5th lunar day of the dark half of Pushya in the year Durmati, 6th year of the illustrious Chālukya Vikrama era for the service of offering unguents, lights, incense, and food and for repairs and white-washing to (the temple of) god Kalidēvēśvarasvayambhudēva to Rudraśaktipaṇḍita, disciple of Śivaśakti-paṇḍita, possessed of the qualities of yama (self-control), niyama (restraint), svādhyāya (study), japa (silent prayer), samādhi (absorption), after inviting him again.

(LL. 58—62.)

The noble person who protects this gift in a friendly spirit will attain the heavenly regions ordained for the gift of thousand cows to those who are versed in the Vedas on the bank of the holy Ganges river. But he who instead destroys this gift will incur the great sin of slaying those Brahmans and those brown-coloured cows in those sacred places in a wicked manner. This will never fail. He who confiscates land given away by himself or others will be born as a worm in ordure for sixty thousand years. Poison is not called poison but the property of gods is (truly) called poison. Poison kills only one while the property of gods destroys children and grandchildren. The earth has been enjoyed by numerous kings, Sagara and others. To whomsoever the land belongs at any time, to him accrues the fruit (of giving away land) at that time. Well-being. Good fortune

Note.

This inscription consists of two grants, the first, a short record of the reign of the Chālukya king Jagadēkamalla and the second, a longer record of the reign of Vikramāditya VI.

There are 62 lines of well-formed characters. The lines are straight and the letters are nearly $\frac{3}{4}$ " long in the lines 1—3 but later come down to $\frac{1}{2}$ " after line 4. In lines 24—26 a portion has peeled off in the middle resulting in the loss of 2 or 3 letters in each line. So also in lines 38—41 a portion has peeled off near the beginning of each line and thus some letters are lost. Single letters are damaged in several lines especially in lines 57—9 but they are not rendered illegible. Both ḷa and ṛa are used throughout the record but ra is used some-times for ḷa as in sīrdan (l.22), negarda (l.35), pogarte (l.50), garde (l.58). Also ḷa is sometimes used for ḷa as in āḷḍu (l.39), āḷdam (l.48) and ḷa used for ḷa in ēḷu (l.43), ṇṇa is used for ṇṇa except in aṇṇa in line 37.

The language is Kannaḍa mostly poetry, the invocatory stanzas in the beginning and imprecatory verses at the end being in Sanskrit. It is generally free from mistakes except for some paleographical errors such as :—sittikkidan in line 19 is a mistake in writing for sīḷdikkidan; anusvāras are sometimes wrongly inserted as after aragu in line 26, and after Pratāpakālāṇaḷana in line 27.

The first of the two grants registers the gift of some wet land, two shops and a flower-garden all situated in the village Belagâmi (Balli-gave) into the hands of Śivaśaktipaṇḍita, a priest of the Kâlâmukha sect and manager of the Śiva temple named Kalidêvêśvara Svayambhudêvar, (now known as Kallêśvara temple in Belagâmi), for the services connected with the said temple. The grant was made by the Châlukya king Jayasimha Jagadêkamalla (1018-1042) from his residence in the village Moḷiganûr, at the instance of Kundarâja, the governor of Banavase. Kundarâja, is referred to as governor of Banavase and also of Sântalige under the Châlukyas in several inscriptions of the Shimoga District. (See also Note under inscription No. 53 of the present year.) As for the king's residence Moḷiganur it is not known where the village was located.¹ The date of the grant is Sunday 5th lunar day of the bright half of Śrâvaṇa in S' 947 Krôdhana and corresponds to Friday, 2nd July, 1025 A.D. But the week-day is wrong. If however, the previous year S' 946 Raktākshi is taken (as is done sometimes), the given tithi would coincide with 12th July, 1024 A.D. which is a Sunday, as stated in the grant.

The second grant is of the reign of the Châlukya king Tribhuvanamalla Vikramâdityadêva (VI.) Several verses in praise of the king and of his younger brother Trailôkyamalla Vîra Noḷamba Permânaḍi Jayasimhadêva and of his (Jayasimhadêva's) subordinate named Tambarasa, mahâpradhâna and hiri-sandhi-vigrahi and governor of the districts Sântalige 1000, Maṇḍali 2000, Jiddulige 70, Nâgarakhaṇḍa 70, Eḍenâḍ 70 and Mûgunda 12. All these formed part of the province of Banavase and included the present Shikarpur Taluk and the surrounding villages of Sirsi and Sorab Taluks. Tambarasa is also referred to as governor of Sântalige under Jayasimha in Ep. Car. VII Shikarpur 107 of Circa 1078 A.D. and as governor of Sântalige and the agrahâras in E. C. VIII Sagar 109 of 1079 A.D. The present record registers the gift of some wet land (specified) by Tambarasa to the temple of Kalidêvêśvara referred to before, the donee in this instance being the priest Rudraśaktipaṇḍita, a disciple of Śivaśaktipaṇḍita. The date of the gift is stated to be Sunday, 5th ? lunar day of the dark half of Pushya in the year Durmati, 6th year of Châlukya Vikrama era. As Châlukya Vikrama era started in 1076 A.D., the 6th year of the era is Durmati, 1081 A.D. In this year Pushya ba 5 falls on Thursday 3rd December and Uttarâyana-sankramaṇa and Vyatipâta occurred on the same day. The week-day is however wrong. The usual imprecation is found at the end of the grant.

Some of the stanzas in this grant are also found in other records at the same village (Ep. Car. VII Shikarpur 124 and 297.)

(¹) A Moḷiganur is referred to in E. C. XI, Chitaldrug 76 and Moḷiganur is stated to be the royal residence of the Kalachurya king Âhavamalla (E. C. VII Shikarpur 197).

This inscription records the death of a warrior named Malleya Bomma in a fight with Bû.....posa Mâda. The date given is Thursday 12th lunar day of the bright half of Vaiśākha in the year Akshaya. The characters seem to belong to the second half of 14th century A.D. and the date intended may probably be S' 1308 Kshaya Vaiśākha śu 12 corresponding to Thursday 12th April 1386 A.D. The usual stanza in praise of fighting in battle-field is given at the commencement of the record.

Translation.

Be it well. In the Châḷukya Vikrama year (?) and Śaka year 10 . . , during the year Vikrama, on the full moon day of Vaiśâkha, Thursday and Vyatîpâta, while the mahâ-maṇḍalêśvara Ekkalarasa was ruling Jiḍuvali and Yeḍenâḍ in peace and wisdom,— Heggaḍe Rājaya's son Heggaḍe Timmaṇa and Rāyaṇa's daughter Heggaḍiti Chandave got constructed the temple of Sakalêśvara in Āsare, set up a finial on the temple and for the feeding of Brahmans and ascetics and for the offerings of boiled food to the god granted 50 kammas of rice land below the well in Āsare and 50 kammas of dry land, aggregating to one mattal of land in all. Whosoever maintains this charity, to him will accrue the merit of giving away a thousand tawny cows in Benares to Brahmans deeply versed in the Vedas. Whosoever destroys this will incur the sin of killing in Benares the same number of Brahmans and tawny cows. He who confiscates land given away by himself or others will be born as a worm in ordure for sixty thousand years. Jnānarāśipaṇḍita, priest (āchārya) of god Sakalêśvara will be in charge of the temple. Vîrôja and Aṭṭakada Bammôja engraved (this). Good Fortune.

Note.

This inscription records the erection of a Śiva temple named Sakalêśvara in the village Āsare, constructing a finial over it, and endowing it with some lands in the village, all these being the work of a heggaḍe named Heggaḍe Timmaṇa son of Heggaḍe Rājaya and of a heggaḍiti (a female holding the office of heggaḍe) named Chandave. A Śaiva priest named Jnānarāśipaṇḍita was entrusted with the management of the temple. The engravers of the inscription are stated to be Vîrôja and Bammôja. The usual imprecation is also found in the record.

The dating of the record is very imperfect, the engraver having omitted the figure indicating the number of years elapsed in Chālukya Vikrama era. Similarly the two figures after 10 in Śaka era are also effaced; only the year Vikrama with the tithi, week-day and yôga are found. The year may be S' 1022 or S' 1082 Vikrama. If the first date is taken Vaiś śu 15 corresponds to April 25, 1100 A.D. which is a Wednesday with no Vyatipāta and is not a Thursday with Vyatipāta as stated in the grant. The name of the imperial ruler is not given in the grant but a subordinate of his named Ekkalarasa is stated to be ruling Jidūvali and Eḍenāḍ provinces comprising portions of the present Sorab Taluk. Who is this Ekkalarasa? A mahāmaṇḍalêśvara Ekkalarasa of Ganga family is stated to be ruling in Uddhare, capital of Jiduligenāḍ in 1129 (E. C. VII. Sorab 149), 1132 (ibid 147), 1159 (ibid 99), 1165 (ibid 6). The date 1100 A.D. may be too early for Ekkalarasa. Moreover the week-day is wrong. In case we take Vikrama of S' 1082 or A.D. 1160, the tithi coincides with April 21, Thursday with Vyatipāta-yôga. As this satisfies all the conditions it may be taken as the correct date.

Note.

This is an order issued by an officer named Uḷavi Basavaṇṇanāyaka to the village headman of Kaṇikal informing him that one Lingaya of the village Udri was granted some rent-free wet land in that village by the king for his service in the army of his division, and instructing him to set up a stone fixing the boundaries of the plot of land newly granted with the help of one Ūḷigada Malla sent by the king and in consultation with the residents of the surrounding villages so that there might be no disputes in the matter later on. This order was directed to be returned to Lingaiya after being copied in the kaḍita of the shanubhog.

The date of the grant is S' 1739 Īśvara sam. Kārtika ba 30 in the reign of Kṛṣṇa-rāja Voḍeyar III of Mysore whose name however does not appear therein. The year S' 1739 or A.D. 1817 corresponds to Īśvara as stated in the grant and the date is equivalent to 8th December 1817.

Salutation to Śambhu who is resplendent with the chāmara the moon touching his lofty head and who is the foundation pillar for the city of the three worlds.

Be it well. On Thursday 10th lunar day of the bright half of Mâgha in the Śaka year 1175 Pramâdi ; be it well. When the illustrious mahâ-maṇḍalêśvara, possessed of numerous titles, a saw to kings in battles, a spear to titled chiefs, a Nârâyana in form, a lover of sports, worshipper of the sacred feet of the god Billêśvara, defeater of hostile army and an axe to the necks of the opponents, maṇḍalika Bîradevarasa marched with full military equipment against Îḍu-sâvanta of Bidirur and causing great tumult plundered all the valuables belonging to the enemy and fought :—

This was the heroic deed of Malaga Vîra Mâla, (son) of Bommayanâyaka, (son) of Mâleya, son of Pârusôja of the illustrious immemorial agrahâra Kuppagedḍe :— The brave Mâlîga, broke, in the battle-field, the pride of the titled warriors, and killed the haughty heroes and playing as with ball the heads of the enemies who attacked him sent them away flying with a kick from the hoof of his horse admired and extolled by the world.

Thus slaying several he went to heaven. Good fortune.

Note.

This is a vîragal inscription giving the exploits and death of a warrior named Mâlîga of the village Kuppagaḍḍe in a battle between Bîradêvarasa, (a Śântâra king) and Îḍusâvanta, chief of Bidirur (same as Bidnur or Nagar, headquarters of Nagar Taluk). The date of the present grant is S' 1175 Pramâdi Mâgha S' u 10 Thursday which corresponds to January 29, A.D. 1254 which is a Thursday. The figure o after l in 10 is not very clear in the record. Bîradêvarasa is also referred to in two other inscriptions of Sâgar Taluk (E. C. VIII Sagar 27 and 150) dated A.D. 1241 and 1255 respectively with titles similar to those in the present epigraph.

This is a record of the reign of the Kadamba king Kadamba-chakravarti Kâva-devarasa who ruled over Banavasi from 1219 to 1231 A.D. (E. C. VIII Intr. p. 3.) It mentions a great battle near the village Parige, when Kêśavadêva, Bommeya and other generals of the Kadamba king were marching with an army under the king's orders to seize the places Bâḷeyamakki (a place near Bâḷehonnur in Koppa Taluk) and Sôde (in South Canara.) In this battle Masaṇa, a servant of Biṭṭeya-hebbâruva, distinguished himself by killing with his arrows several men on the side of the enemy and died fighting. The date of the event is stated to be Wednesday, 10th lunar day of the bright half of Vaisâkha in the year S' 1139 Dhâtṛi. Dhâtṛi coincides with S' 1138 and the date corresponds to Wednesday April 27, A.D. 1216 (the tithi daśami however began after 56 ghaṭikas in the day and remained throughout the next day). The composer of this grant is named Bâcha and the engraver is named Beḷadya of Sôḍina-ṇile Buḷacheyûr. Several letters in lines 8-10 are illegible.

Be it well. While Akālarvarsha Prithivīvallabha, king of kings, supreme lord, great king, the illustrious Kannaradēva was ruling the earth :—and Bappavva ruled the Banavāsi twelve thousand province, and the illustrious Biṭṭiga, chief of Mauḷi Kauśikas, a Hanuma in valour, held the office of nālgāvunḍa (the chief gaṇḍa of a nāḍ or district) of the districts Jiddūr seventy including Balligāme division, and was also the gāmunḍa of the village Gingiṭiyūr :—

Be it well. When eight hundred and eighty-six years had elapsed since the time of Śaka king, in the year Raktākshi, on the 2nd lunar day of the dark half of Pushya on a Friday and a day of Uttarāyaṇa-sankrānti, Kōṭeyamma, of the Kōsigar (viz., descendents of Kauśika-gōtra) and the lord of Gōsahasra, gave to the Mahājanas of Elase, 55 gold gadyānas and also constructed a well. Good fortune. The writing of Kaliviṭṭayya. The engraving on stone of Biṭṭōja. Good fortune.

Note.

This records the gift of 55 gadyānas in money to the mahājanas or citizens of the village Elase (the present Yelasi of Sorab Taluk) by one Kōṭeyamma of Gōsahasra (a place ?) and also the construction of a well by him during the reign of the Rāshṭrakūṭa king Kannaradēva. The date given is S' 886 Raktākshi Pushya ba 2, Friday with Uttarāyaṇa sankrānti, which corresponds to Friday 23rd December, A.D. 964 on which day Uttarāyaṇa sankrānti occurred as shown in Svami Kannu Pillay's Ephemeris Vol. II, p. 331. The Rāshṭrakūṭa king at this time was Krishṇa or Kannara III Akālarvarsha. Other names mentioned in the grant of subordinate rulers are Bappavva, the lord ? of Banavāsi province and Biṭṭiga, the nālgāvunḍa of the division Jiddur seventy and Balligâve (Belagâmi) and the ûrgâmunḍa of Gingiṭiyûr (this place cannot be identified but it must have been in the neighbourhood of the place of the inscription stone.)

The figure of a Gajalakshmi viz., the figure of the goddess Lakshmî with an elephant on each side is engraved between lines 6 and 7. Such figures are often found on the lintels of temples mostly Vaishnavite and on the horizontal beams in the sluices of tanks. The engraving of such a figure is believed to make the structure last long and bring prosperity to the person who constructed it.

This record is not dated but is of the same period as the previous one. (78). This merely gives the names of the members of the family and relations of Kôṭeyamma referred to before. Ponnabbe is said to be his wife, Turâamma, his son, Mâlakka, wife of Turâamma, Akkaṇabbe-gôyiti, elder sister of Kôṭeyamma. Gôsâsi seems to be an abbreviation of Gôsahasara of the previous record. (For this name see also Ep. Car. VII Shikarpur 44, 45, 61 and 133.)

Note.

This record is full of lacunae. It belongs to the reign of some Kaḷachuri king and is dated in the year Khara, 11th day of the dark half of Chaitra. As the year Khara occurred only once in 1171 A.D. during the rule of the Kalachurya dynasty (1156-1183) the date of the record may be taken as Chaitra ba 11 of that year, viz., April 2, 1171 A. D. At this time Râya-murâri or Sôvidêva was the Kaḷachuri king and hence this inscription may be of his reign. A subordinate of his styled Mahâ-maṇḍalêśvara is next named but the name is lost. The inscription records the heroic fight and death of Kâlêya, son of Sômaṇṇa of the village Belâgi on the date specified.

The usual stanza stating that one who fights in a battle will gain either heaven or wealth and that life is transient is found at the end of the record. 9. ḷu Êchakkanu vîra [svar] gga prâpta . .

Note.

This is a vîragal inscription recording the death of a warrior named Bom [ma] of the village Kantanahalli and of his wife Êchakka, daughter of Bommana of Singavûr while fighting. The date is given as Tuesday, 14th lunar day of the dark half of Mâgha in the year Chitrabhânu. But as no Śaka year is given, the date cannot be verified. The characters seem to be of the 16th century. Kantanahalli is a village in Sorab Taluk.

At the village Bommanahalli in the same Hobali, on a stone set up in front of the village.

Size 3'—6'' X 1'—0''.

Kannaḍa language and characters.

1. Hajeya Mallenâya-
2. ka-dêvara Viṇḍôjara-
3. vara Rupôja saggiyâ-
4. danu

Note.

This records the death of one Rupôja, son ? of Viṇḍôja, son (?) of Mallenâyaka-dêvar of the village Hajje. No date is given. The characters seem to be of the 16th century. The village Hajje of the record is the same as the present village Hejje in Sorab Taluk.

At the village Ânevatti in Ânevatti Hobali, on a stone set up to the east of the Kaiṭabhêśvara temple.

Size 4'—6'' X 2'—9''.

Kannaḍa language and characters.

1. subham astu
2. śrîmadu gurudêvêbhyo namah

3. śrīmatu śrī
4. Kupaṭūra Mannôjage mânya
5. hâdi pôgi amṛitapaḍi-
6. ge naḍasuvaru

Note.

Several letters of this short record have become effaced. It seems to register the gift of some rent-free land to Mannôja of the village Kupaṭūr (a village in Sorab Taluk) for offering food daily to some god (not named). The characters seem to be of the 17th century.

At the village Abbalagere in the same Hobali, on a stone lying in the bed of the tank to the east of Basavaṇṇa temple.

Size 3'—6'' X 2'—6''.

Old Kannaḍa language and characters.

1. svasti Saka-nṛipa-kâlâtita-samvatsara-sataṅgaḷ eṇṭunû-
2. ṛa ippatta aydaneya Rudhirô-tgâri yemba saṃbatśaram prava-
3. rttise tadâgata sudhâshṭameyuṃ Sanivâra-daṃdu svasti (the record stops here).

Note.

The inscription is incomplete. The date Saturday, 8th lunar day of the bright half in the year Rudhirôdgâri, 825 years after the expiry of the time of the Śaka king is all that is contained in the record. S' 825 corresponds to A.D. 903 and coincides with the cyclic year Rudhirôdgâri. As no month is named, it is not possible to verify the other details of date.

At the village Jaḍe in the Hobali of Jaḍe, on the 1st stone set up near the Râmêśvara temple in the ruined fort.

Kannaḍa language and characters.

1. namas turga-śiras'-chumbi-chandra-châmara-châravê trailôkya-nagarâ-rambha-mûla-
2. staṃbhâya Śaṃbhavê || svasti śrī vijayâbhyudaya Śâlivâhana- śaka varuṣam-

4. Vīraya nāḍan ā-
5. ḷutire Lakka-Gauḍa Lingaya Bommaya
6. hiriya Chōḷanāyaka kâdi

Note.

Several letters in this inscription cannot be made out as they are too indistinct. It seems to record some fight and the death therein of the warriors named Lakka-gauḍa, Lingaya, Bommaya and Chōḷanāyaka. No king's name is mentioned. Mahāmaṇḍalika Vīraya is stated to be the governor of the district in which the battle took place. The date given is Sunday in the bright fortnight of Āśvīyuja in the Śaka year 1348 Vyaya. The lunar tithi is lost in the record. S' 1348 corresponds to A.D. 1426 which coincides with Parābhava and not Vyaya. The nearest Vyaya is S' 1328 and probably the figure 4 in 1348 is a mistake for 2 and the date may hence be taken as A.D. 1406.

Size 3'—6" X 2'—0".

Kannāḍa language and characters.

1. svasti śrī jayābhyudaya ka
2. Mārgasīra ba pratipada śu
3. Jaḍeya gauḍana Kannabbe
4. Kapinaiya śilā-śāsanava hāki
5. mahā śrī śrī

Note.

As the inscription stone is broken the record is quite incomplete. It seems to commemorate the death by sati of a woman named Kannabbe who was the wife of the gauḍa of the village Jaḍe. A man named Kapinayya is stated to have set up the stone. No year is given in the record to mark the date. The character seem to be of 16th century A.D.

Note.

This copperplate sâsana is a grant by the Keladi king Virabhadranâyaka and is dated S' 1554 Prajôtpatti Âshâḍha ba 3 equivalent to 6th July, A. D. 1631 (if Prajôtpatti—S' 1553 is taken as the correct year) to Tirumalabhaṭṭar, son of Toravaṇa-bhaṭṭa of Anṇigere, belonging to Kauśika-gôtra and Âpastamba-sûtra.

It seems to be recorded that the palace authorities took the estate of Sarasamakkiya Puṭṭanna in the agrahâra village Heddase paying him a sufficient sum for his maintenance in exchange and also paying to the same agrahâra some compensation and out of the land thus acquired in the village by the palace authorities, the king made a grant to Tirumalabhaṭṭa, free from taxes, as an act of charity, of some rice-lands and a garden of the annual rental value of 37 varahas and 6½ haṇas and of a house. The usual imprecatory verses next follow. Details regarding the income from the garden and rice-fields are also fully recorded.

A copperplate grant recording the gift of the village Heddase by Prince Mârapa, younger brother of Vijayanagar king Harihara I in S' 1268, in the possession of Mallârappa, patel of the village Hejje in the Hobali of Chandragutti (Plate XIV.)

Translation.

Lines 1—2.

Obeisance to Gaṇêśa, bestower of all prosperity, by whose favour the things desired by the world are granted.

Lines 2—5.

Salutation to the auspicious Śambhu, the lord of all objects mobile and immobile, whose ears wear, in place of the usual ear-ring, the serpent king, on whom is seated the earth which has the bright Golden Mountain (Mêru) in its centre and is black all around and resembles a kuvalaya (blue lotus) flower with a bright pericarp, worn for pleasure.

Lines 5—8.

Victorious is the earth lifted up from the sea and which rests on the edge of the tusk of Viṣṇu craftily assuming the form of a boar and which is full of water, (looking) as if it were a cluster of clouds attached to the digit of the moon rising from the vicinity of Nîlâdri (Blue Mountain).

Lines 9—11.

Kings who were ornaments to the solar and lunar races (in which they were born) and reminded one of the famous Purûrava by their deeds and were equal to Manu (in conduct) and whose invincible pillar-like arms protected the three worlds and who possessed great wealth enjoyed this earth in Kṛita, Trêtâ and Dvâpara ages successively.

(35) to (37) Anuṣṭup metre. The name of Virûpâksha is first written and then obliterated after oppa in line 150.

Lines 12—24.

In the Kali age, evil having greatly encompassed the earth, Dharma found that he was unable to move about and repairing to the ever benevolent Creator and Benefactor of the worlds, begged humbly (as follows):—"How can I move about on one leg troubled by Kali? Show some mercy, O lord, who befriend those that bow before you by removing the burden of their sorows." Thus entreated for a long time by Dharma in humble supplication, Dhâtâ (God) became pleased and caused king Sangama to be born in a great royal line for the help of Dharma. To the famous king Sangama, supporter of righteousness, were born by Kâmâmbikâ (his queen) four sons possessed of the prowess of the four lords of the quarters and named king Harihara, lord Sangama, the mighty Bukka, and the virtuous Mârapa. Delighters in protecting the universe like the arms of Vishnu, slayers of enemies like the tusks of the elephant of Indra, and abodes of Dharma and Artha (wealth), these four sons of king Sangama shone like the Vedas springing from Brahma.

Lines 24—27.

Their family deity being Virûpâkshadêva worshipped by all gods, their garden canal the sacred Tungabhadra resembling the Ganges, their pleasure hill the Hêmakûta mountain covered with the shadows of peaks, their sporting pond being the Pampâsaras lake—This was their great fortune.

Lines 27—31.

Sole witness of Vâli's prowess was the great city Hastina, ruled by king Harihara and his brothers free from envy. Conqueror of the territories of the hostile kings with his bow and possessed of renowned valour like Prithu, Harihara ruled with his younger brothers the earth surrounded by seas.

Lines 31—37.

By his orders king Mârapa acquired a kingdom in the west, and residing on the hill Gômantaśaila in the excellent (city) Chandragupti (Chandragutti) governed his subjects in peace. While the sun of his prowess shone brightly, strange to say, the stars rose on the earth (no kshatriyas appeared on earth), the moon became very bright, (the arts prospered) and the blue lilies expanded (the earth was filled with joy). The earth pervaded with the perfume of the camphor that is his fame, vies in glory with the region of heaven covered with the sweet scent of the Mandâra flowers.

Lines 37—41.

Conqueror of three kings, lord of the eastern, western and southern oceans, punisher of kings who break their words, destroyer of the pride of fierce hostile kings, a paramour to the courtesans that are the enemy kings, a sultan to Hindu kings, champion over powerful enemy rulers, by these titles is Mârapa known. While the brave Mârapa ruled the earth, righteousness increased by virtuous acts, calamities disappeared, rains fell copiously, and the people on earth were happy.

Lines 42—51.

While on a hunting expedition the king beheld a tank, and the sacred spot Heddasi and the river Varadâ and made up his mind to create an agrahâra near by. Bearing this in mind he returned to his chief stronghold Gômantadurga and from thence started on an expedition to conquer enemies. Once while engaged in conquest, with his big elephants, sprightly horses and warriors covering the earth, that king who was an equal of Indra conquered in battle the Kadamba king and repaired in joy to witness the god Śiva in the form of Gôkarṇanâtha, the origin of the universe. There Mârapa bathed in the sea during parva period and offering libations to pitris and pleasing Brahmins by liberal gifts of land, cows, buffaloes and gold worshipped god Mahâbala with pourings of cold water scented with musk, sandal, agara and saffron and with continuous offerings of gold flowers.

Lines 51—55.

On the expiry of one thousand two hundred and sixty eight Śaka years and in the year Vyaya, on the full moon day in the month Mâgha, on a Sunday with the constellation Śatabhishak, with the sun in the sign Aquarius, during Siddhayôga and Nâgakarana, on the occasion of solar eclipse, the highly virtuous king Mangarâjâ (a mistake for Mârarâjâ ?) granted with pouring of water, in the presence of the God Śiva, the village Heddase, intended previously by him to Brahmins who were his dependants and who were versed in all the Vedas and who had come from Andhradêsa.

Lines 56—65.

He named it Sangamapura after his father and made it over free from defects and imposts, and possessed of appropriate rights including treasure hidden or buried water springs and rocks, and the right to levy customs duties (Sulka), use of an official seal (anka) and the authority to have a private mint (ṭanka) [Cp. E. C. XII Sira 95] to be protected by king's officials and not to be pointed out with the index finger (in contempt or with greed) to Brahmins. The Brahmins (who received the gift) were :—proficient in six duties¹ well versed in six angas² and possessed of the knowledge of six kinds of logic,³ knowers of the different svaras like śaḍja,⁴ demolishers of Bauddha and Jain religions, proficient in six languages,⁵ walking in six righteous

Lines 65—82.

The gôtras and names of these (Brahmans) and distribution of vrittis to them.— 2 vrittis to Mallibhaṭṭa of Bhâradvâjagôtra, 2 vrittis to Chânâyapeddi of Âtrêyagôtra; 2 vrittis to Kṛishṇabhaṭṭa and Dêvarubhaṭṭa of Kaundinyagôtra; 2 vrittis to Bhadrâbhaṭṭa of Kaundinyagôtra and the grammarian Peddibhaṭṭa of Kâśyapagôtra; 2 vrittis to Astrologer Peddibhaṭṭa of Kâśyapagôtra and Appâyabhaṭṭa of Bhâradvâjagôtra; 2 vrittis to Manchibhaṭṭa of Bhâradvâjagôtra and Jârâyabhaṭṭa of Kâśyapagôtra; 2 vrittis to Singayabhaṭṭa and Peddibhaṭṭa of Śrīvatsagôtra; 2 vrittis to Nâgâya Ōjha and Kṛishṇâbhaṭṭa; 2 vrittis to Lakkhâyabhaṭṭa and Tripurâribhaṭṭa of Kauśikagôtra; 2 vrittis to Singaya Ōjha of Bhâradvâjagôtra and Manchi-Ōjha of Gârgyagôtra; 2 vrittis to Pôchanabhaṭṭa and Appâyabhaṭṭa of Haritagôtra; 2 vrittis to Kêśavabhaṭṭas of Kâśyapagôtra and Bhâgavata Vasishṭhagôtra; 2 vrittis to Peddibhaṭṭa and Appâyabhaṭṭa of Kâśyapagôtra; 2 vrittis to Pôtâya Ōjha of Kauśikagôtra and Singâôjha of Śâlâvatagôtra; 2 vrittis to Appâyabhaṭṭa of Vasishṭhagôtra and Bhâṭṭagautama-gôtra; a vritti of 12 khaṇḍugas given away by the above Brahmans to Kôṭinâtha of Śrīvatsagôtra. Having thus settled the matter there alone, he went on a victorious expedition to the different quarters and returning to Chandraguptipura lived in happiness and glory.

Lines 83—92.

This righteous ruler of people had a great minister named Mâdhava, a navigator of the deep sea of the government of the great kingdom, who surpassed even Brihaspati by the power of his wisdom. The teacher Kriyâśakti, who was verily the têjas of Śiva personified was the spiritual guide (âchârya) to Mâdhava like god Sankara to Bhârgava. By that minister (Mâdhava) was composed after a careful study of the Vêdas and Purâṇas and Samhitâs a work consisting of the essence of the Śaiva āgamas for the good of the world, as directed by god Śiva whom he propitiated. The illustrious Mādhava has gained merit extending over the whole universe since the bridge built by him shines in the waters of the Kāvêri as a flag of his glory and the extensive temp'le of Śiva erected by him on the top of Matanga hill stands as a pillar of his righteousness and the great Golden mountain is set up in the houses of the learned men by the gifts made by him in accordance with the treatise of Hêmādri.

Lines 92—97.

Riding in the chariot of righteousness he had a brave charioteer named Bollu who scorned the prowess of his enemies by his valour, and possessed the incalculable heroism of Vikramārka. Under the orders of Mādhavamantri, Bollurâja got this charter of charity for Brahmans prepared (in consultation) with the principal chiefs of his province, and the mahâjanas and the leading men of the two agrahâras. The mahâjanas then present were :—

Lines 97—116.

Born of high family, ever honest in their engagements, firm in their vows, shelterers of those exposed to danger, thunder-bolts to the great mountains that are their opponents, suns in their dazzling effulgence, receptacles for the jewels that are good qualities, ever intent on humanity, possessors of incalculable virtues, wise discriminators between just and unjust acts, versed in all arts, never transgressing the bounds of honourable conduct like seas (which never encroach on their shores), arbitrators to all the world like the peaks of Mēru (which is situated in the middle of the universe), ¹ very firm like the great mountains, constantly engaged in gifts like the elephants in the cardinal points of the universe (from which ichor flows constantly) patient like the regions of the earth, pleasing all the people like the sandal trees, famous for their liberality like Kalpa trees, and proficient like diplomacy in accomplishing many political acts. Notwithstanding their being kshamâśrayas (resting places of forgiveness) they are akshamâśrayas (not kshamâśrayas; shelterers of the weak); though they are mânadhanas ² they are amânadhanas (not mânadhanas; possessors of immeasurable wealth); in spite of their being yaśôbhirûpas (brilliant with fame) they are ayaśôbhirûpas (not yaśôbhirûpa; looking bright with good fortune); though they are born of high family (lofty bamboo) they are free from crookedness inside (joints); though they are punnâgas (a class of trees so named; eminent among men) they are aśôkas (a different class of trees so named; free from grief). The mahâjanas of the two great agrahâras Elase and Kuppugaḍḍe in Eḍenâḍ situated in the eighteen kharvaṭas of Gômanta hill named also Chandragupti, the chief capital of Banavasi twelve thousand, which is an ornament to the country named Kuntala, including the headmen Vîrapa, Bommarasa and others, and the mahâprabhus among whom were the heads of the villages Surabhi, Tavanidhi and Kesalûr named Tammagaunḍa, Bommagaunḍa and

¹. There is a pun here on the word madhyastha. Similar puns are found throughout this passage.

Mêchagaunḍa,—all these having assembled gave away (re-granted) the village Heddasi in or er that it might come under their guardianship though it had been previously granted by king Mârapa, with pouring of water, to be respected by all and to last for as long as sun and moon endure.

Lines 117—140.

Its boundaries are as follows :—In the north-east direction is a tamarind tree at the place where the villages Heddase, Gunjanûr and Elase meet ; and metallic rods and stones set up to the east ; looking well to the south of this (are seen) two twin ponds at the meeting place of Heddase and Elase ; still further to the south is a rock known as Guḍusugal to the north of the open space Vâdadabayal (?) at the meeting of the villages Heddase and Elase ; further south is seen the Sanchari stream, flowing where the villages Heddase, Elase and Bandage meet ; to the west is seen a big bund above a field ? named saṇṇamâni where the villages Heddase and Bandage meet ; looking still further west are a living rock and a water-fall at the junction of the villages Heddase, Bandage and Kaḍasûr ; to the north of this is a pond beyond Kôḍalamâne at the junction of Heddase and Kaḍasûr ; further north is the Porcupine cave at the meeting place of Heddase and Kaḍasûr and an anthill ; to the west is a stone set up to the south of the Elephant pond at the junction of Heddase and Kaḍasûr. Further west is seen the hillock (?) Kâruganahabbe at the junction of Heddase and Kaḍasûr ; to the south-west of this runs the Varadâ river up to its confluence with a stream from north-west. Looking eastwards we see Singatagere at the junction of Heddase and Ankuravalli ; further east, an anthill named Honneyahutta at the junction of the villages Heddase and Ankuravalli ; a little to the north is a tamarind tree given away for service of lamps at a place where the villages Heddase, Ankuravalli and Gunjanûr meet, and a heap of stones ; to the east of this can be seen the Śrîparṇi (silk-cotton) tree and an anthill at the junction of the villages Heddase and Gunjanûr. Looking further eastwards is the dry land with a growth of pen-reed (galagu) at the junction of the villages Heddase and Gunjanûr.

Lines 141—145.

Of the two, making a gift and protecting it, protecting is superior to making a gift ; by making a gift one attains Svarga and by protecting it one attains a region from which there is no fall. Maintaining another's gift is twice as meritorious as making a gift oneself ; by confiscating what another has given, the gift made by oneself is rendered fruitless. He who takes away land given by himself or others is born as a worm in ordure for sixty-thousand years.

Note.

This copper plate record is similar to the Kâtavalli copperplates (E. C. VIII Sorab 375) in several respects. It was in the possession of Mallâraiya of the village Hejje and was kindly procured by the Amildar of Sorab and sent to this office. The paleography and the language are free from suspicion. The invocatory verses to Gaṇeśa, Śambhu and Varâha are the same in both record but the readings in the present grant are generally more correct. The genealogy of Harihara, the founder of the Vijayanagar kingdom next follows and is similar to that contained in the previous grant referred to. The names of Harihara's brothers are given in the present grant as Sangama, Bukka and Mârapa while in the other grant they are named Śankara, Bukka and Mârapa. In both cases Muddappa's name is omitted and Kampa is named Śankara or Sangama. It is very difficult to account for this error in genealogy. Prince Mârapa, a younger brother of Harihara I is stated to have been ruling under the orders of Harihara in Chandragupti (now called Chandragutti) situated on Gômantaśaila (a hill in the north-west of Sorab Taluk, Shimoga District) with imperial titles and in one of his victorious expeditions is stated to have defeated a Kadamba king (name not given) and visited Gôkarṇa, a sacred place on the west coast in North Canara District to bathe in the sea and pay homage to god Mahâbala enshrined therein. While engaged in making various gifts at the sacred place, Prince Mârapa is recorded to have granted a village called Heddase (Now called Hejje in Sorab Taluk) calling it Sangamapura after his father as an agrahâra to Brahmans who had come (at his request?) from Āndhradêśa (Telugu country). The names of the donees and the distribution of vrittis are next given. It may also be remembered that the date of the gift in the present record is exactly the same as that of the Kâtavalli grant referred to before and the donees are Brahmans from Āndhradêśa in the other grant also. The village granted in the present record is named Heddase while the village bestowed in the other record is Kântapura, a hamlet of Kamathapura on the Varadâ river. The details of dating are exactly alike in both records and correct according to Svamikannu Pillay's tables, the date of both the grants being S' 1268 Vyaya sam. Mâgha 30 corresponding to Sunday 11th February of A.D. 1347, on which day a solar eclipse occurred and the constellation was Śatabhishak and the sun was in the sign Aquarius and the yôga and karaṇa were Siddhayôga and Nâgakarṇa as stated in the grant.

Further, both the records state that Mâdhava, the minister of Mârapa was responsible for the issue of the charter granting the villages under the orders of his master. But in the present record we are further told that the copperplate grant was prepared by an officer named Bollarasa under the instructions of Mâdhava and with the approval of the chief officers and citizens of the agrahâras while in the Kâtavalli copperplate grant Mâdhava is stated to have issued the grant direct. Who is this Bollarasa? His relationship to Mâdhava is not given explicitly in the present grant beyond the statement that he was his subordinate (sâhasa). But in an inscription at Bâlehonnur (E. C. VI Koppa 6) of 1369 A.D.. Boltarasa (mistake for Bollarasa) is stated to be the kumâra (son ?) of Mâdarasa Oḍeyar (Mâdhavamantri) and ruling over Makki ?

As regards the geographical situation of the village recorded to have been given away in the present grant, Heddase is the same as the present village Hejje (marked Hechi in some Taluk maps) in Sorab Taluk to the west of Sorab town. Its latitude is about N 14° 22' and longitude is E 75° 2'. The other villages referred to as its boundaries are Ankuravalli (now named Ankravalli) about 2 miles to the northwest of Hejje, Gunjanûr about 3 miles to the north of Hejje, and Yelasi about 4 miles to the east of Hejje. Bandage is probably the same as Tandage to the east. Hejje is about 2 miles to the east of the Varada river. The village recorded to have been presented in the Kâtavalli grant is named Kântapuri and is the same as Kâtavalli in Sorab Taluk, about 12 miles to the north of Sorab, and is also situated near the Varadâ river. Other places referred to in the present grant are Surabhi now Sorab, the headquarters of Sorab Taluk, Tavanidhi, now Tavanandi about 5 miles to north of Sorab and Kesalûr, probably the same as Kyasanûr about 8 miles to the south of Sorab. Chandraguptipuri is the present Chandragutti about 10 miles to the north-west of Sorab. All these places referred to are in Sorab Taluk. The setu across the Kâvêri referred to in ll. 88-9 may probably be the same as Mâdhavamantri dam near Talkâd in T.-Narsipur Taluk and the Śiva temple on the Matanga hill (l. 90) is evidently the temple of "Paraśurâma" near Hampe (See E. C. III, T.-Narsipur 13; M. A. R. 1912, P. 12; Longhurst's Hampe Ruins, P. 118).

Mâdhava referred to in the grant was a minister under prince Mârapa and governed Chandragutti kingdom in Banavase subject to his control. After his patron's death he continued to govern the province during the reign of king Bukka I of Vijayanagar and later conquered Gôvâ. He was the disciple of Kriyâśakti, a Śaiva guru who is called royal preceptor of Vijayanagar kings in several grants. The present grant states clearly that Mâdhava was the author of a work containing the essence of Śaiva âgama and purāṇas. Evidently the work referred to is no other than Tâtparyadîpikâ, a commentary on Sûtasamhitâ by Mâdhava, disciple of Kâśivilâsa Kriyâśakti. Unfortunately no details about the parentage or gôtra of Mâdhava are given either in this grant or in the work Tâtparyadîpikâ. (See also Nos. 113 and 116 of this Report.)

Note.

This inscription is full of lacunae. It seems to record the heroism and death of some individuals named Tammaya and Kuvara Mâchaya while rescuing their women from the attacks of some enemy during the administration of Mâyidêva, son of Vîradêva, entitled bhujbalachakravarti and mahâsâmantâdhipati. No date is given. The letters seem to be of the 13th century.

Note.

This is a copperplate śâsana of the reign of the chief of Bilgi named Śivappanâyaka. It registers the gift by the king, of some rice-fields and gardens and houses (with details stated) in the hamlet Heggarahalli-sthala belonging to the village Koṇḍali in his kingdom, made as perpetual hereditary endowment remitting the tax of nearly 131 varahas to a Vîraśaiva priest named Sômappadêvaru on his representation to the king praying for some property to maintain the matt newly built by him. It was also stipulated that lands belonging to the temples of Umâmahêśvara in Bâlikopa and of Hanumantadêvaru in Koṇḍile were to be let out on Śraya tenure (leasing out land on a rent below its original value, to which it is expected gradually to rise after some years) and the income used for their maintenance. The usual imprecatory stanzas follow. At the end of the grant is engraved the king's signature Sadâśiva.

The grant is dated the 3rd lunar day of the bright half of Phâlguna in S' 1589 Parâbhava. Taking Parâbhava which corresponds to S' 1588, the date is equivalent to February 15, A.D. 1667.

A Correction.

In a copperplate grant of the Râmachandrâpur Matt, Nagar Taluk, published in page 78 of the Annual Report for 1923, the date was read as S' 1343 Raudri in line 2 and it was stated in the Note under the inscription that the date was irregular and the record unreliable. This reading seems to have been based on a copy of the grant produced at the time. The original plate has now been read and the date given is S' 1243 Raudri Mâgha ba 30. Taking the Śaka year 1243 as current, the year corresponds to Raudri and the English equivalent of the date is January 29, A.D. 1321. The remarks published in the Report about the unreliability of the grant are cancelled.

Note.

This sannad issued by Kṛishṇarâja Voḍeyar III, king of Mysore on the 5th May of 1813 A.D. has a seal of the king in Dêvanâgarî characters on the top of the sannad. A Brahman named Kuppâchârya, an ancestor of the present Jôḍîdâr, cut down the trees in the hill slopes behind Maddagiri (Madhugiri) hill and brought the land under cultivation and enjoyed it under shrâya tenure for some years paying a sum of five varahas to Government annually. He next represented to the king through Lingarâjaiya, fouzdâr, that he was a poor man without any other landed property and that he might be permitted to possess the land permanently on payment of a quit-rent of 5 varahas per year and the king accordingly granted the whole of the land to the Brahman as Jôḍi with an annual payment of 5 varahas to Government. The order was issued to the grantee through the Amildar (then called Āmîl) of Maddagiri named Lakshmî-narasaiya.

The date of the sannad is given as Śrîmukha sam. Vaiś śu 5 according to Hindu calendar and the equivalent English date is also mentioned in the grant. The clerk who wrote the order is named Subbarâv and the king's signature Śrî Kṛishṇa occurs at the end of the grant. Below the sannad is a certificate stating that the grant has been entered in the Kannaḍa daf'er (register) of Hazur Dewan Kacheri on the 9th october 1813 (Śrîmukha sam. Ās'vîjuja śu 15) by the official named Hiraṇyappa.

Note.

This records the grant of the income from tolls for the services in the temple of Ranganâtha, made by Kenchayanâyaka of Bijavara in order that merit might accrue to Mummaḍi Chikapagaṇḍaraya. Kenchayanâyaka seems to have been a subordinate of Mummaḍi Chikapagaṇḍa, chief of Bijavara, a village near Madhugiri (or Maddagiri), who ruled over parts of the present Maddagiri and Koratagere Taluks. The record is dated 8th lunar day of the bright half of Kârtika in the year Paridhâvi S' 1474 (October 25, A.D. 1552). The date is not verifiable.

It may be remarked here that the object of worship in the above Ranganâtha temple is merely a pil'ar of stone and no image.

Note.

This records an act of charity of Hiriyaṃma, wife of the illustrious Mahânâḍa-prabhu Chikapagaṇḍa. What the act of charity is is not stated. Chikapagaṇḍa is the name of several of the chiefs of Bijavara. As merely the name of the year Pingaḷa and that of the month Kârtika are given in the grant, it is not possible to assign the inscription to any particular chief of the name. As the characters seem to be of 16th century, the date may be taken to be November, 1557.

Note.

This record purports to give details regarding the stone inscription of the Rishabhêśvara temple (in the village of Siddâpura) in the year S'1515 Vijaya sam. Kâr. śu. 15 (October 2nd, A.D. 1593). But the story given here is quite different. See Ep. Carn. XII. Maddagiri Taluk No. 21.

It informs us that the fort of Kuḍuti, a hamlet of Siddâpur, was built by Kambegaḍa and others, among the 100 families of the village, at an expense of 1892 varahas and that this amount which had been borrowed by Karegaḍa and Kambegaḍa was paid off by a woman named Jirle Mallamma. She also got a well constructed in front of the temple at Kuḍuti at a cost of 30 varahas and also fed people freely on the occasion and made presents to artisans and priests. Two temples, viz., those of Kambadaiya (Narasimha) and Gôpâlakṛishṇa were built by her in the same village and above the steps of the well dug by her, she got two pillars set up and had her figure carved on one of them. Her request is that every way-farer who passes near by might pour a handful of water over the head of her image and that her descendants might put a little butter over the head and in the mouth of the image just after cows and buffaloes give birth to calves. Further, Jirle Mallamma has also instructed that Vannegaḍa of Siddâpura and Dâsegaḍa of Maritimmanahalli should be regarded as heads of the 100 families of the villages Siddâpura and Kuḍuti and that the office of gaḍa as well as the management and upkeep of the temples of Bûta (temples enshrining spirits or ghosts), Gôpâlakṛishṇa, Kambadaiya and Lakshmîdêvi, should be divided equally among both and that the hundred families of the two villages and the 12 village officers should obey them. It was further laid down by her that the Vaishṇava (Sâtâni) family of the village Yangatapura should conduct the worship of Gôpâlakṛishṇasvâmi and that the family of the younger brother of Vannegaḍa should look after the Vîragals in the neighbourhood and that the yajamân (head) of Guṇḍalahalli should conduct the worship of Lakshmîdêvi shrine and that Hirevannegaḍa's younger brother should have charge of the flowers and fruits (to be offered to gods ?) and the Tirumala Tâtachâr family of Penagoṇḍe Bijavara should be regarded as gurus. A severe imprecation was laid against any of the hundred families or of the twelve officials of the villages who might disobey the above Vannegaḍa, Dâsegaḍa of Maritimmanahalli and the guru.

The document is called Jayarêkhê, the writing of victory and is dated Saturday fifth lunar day of the bright half of the month Âshâḍha in the year Târaṇa S' 1386 (viz., June 9, 1464 A.D., a Saturday).

It may be remarked that the above copperplate inscription merely records the tradition regarding Jirle Mallamma and her charities. The dating is quite wrong since the copperplate inscription purports to give details connected with the stone inscription dated one hundred years later. Probably S' 1386 is a mistake for 1686 and the true date of the record is S' 1686 Târaṇa sam. Âshâ. śu. 5 (July 4, 1764) which is however a Wednesday, not Saturday as stated in the grant. The characters too are of a modern date.

On a boulder near a spring called Manushyanachelime in the village Âvikaṭṭe in the Hobli of Madhugiri.

Kannaḍa language and characters of the 19th century.

1. Madhugiri Gaṇanâta
2. Paḍarangey Aṇaya-
3. chara

Note.

This inscription is engraved on a rock close to the forest range on a hill adjoining Madhugiri. Near by, the figure of a man with hands folded is carved on the rock. The inscription seems to record the salutation of a man Aṇayâchâri of Pâṇḍurange to the god Gaṇanâtha of Madhugiri.

Size 4' X 2'.

Kannaḍa language and characters of the 16th Century.

6. śadavaru vaṃśadavaragaḷinda mârîsi-
7. koṇḍu ho'ava koḍadavanu naṃma vaṃśada i hu-
8. ṭatakavanalâ

Note.

This records the gift of a plot of land of the sowing capacity of two ko'agas made to Kogagaḍa as nettaru-kodagemānya for services in war by the chief Mummaḍi Chikapagaḍaraya, mahânâduprabhu of Bijavara. An imprecation is laid against his descendents who might get the land sold and take it away from the descendants of the donee. No Śaka date is given. Merely the name of the year Parīdhāvi and the tithi, 11th day of the dark half of the month Māgha are given. The characters seem to be of 16th century and the date may probably correspond to February 9, A.D. 1553. (Compare also Nos. 95 and 96.)

On a slab built into the north wall of the garbhagriha of the Śiva temple in the village Doḍḍēri in Doḍḍēri Hobli.

Kannada language and characters of the 17th century.

1. Lakahaḷiya Kāriyappana maga
2. Mari Kenchaṇa Vaḍeru Lingêśvarage
3. koṭa Konti Doḍḍēri maṭha

Note.

A maṭha at the village Konti Doḍḍēri is recorded to have been given away for enshrining god Lingêśvara by a Lingāyat priest? Mari Kenchanavaḍeyar, son of Kāriyappa of the village Lakkahaḷi. No date is given.

On a slab in the pavement of the main street in the same village Doḍḍēri.

Kannada language and characters of the 18th century.

1. Yiśvara-saṁvatsarada Pushya sudha 10 lu
2. Konti Doḍḍēriya Rangagaḍara
3. mommaga Kenchanagaḍara
4. komāra Doḍḍaṇṇa-gaḍa-
5. rige koṭa koḍagi-māṇnya

Note.

This records the gift of some koḍagi land to Doḍḍaṇṇagaḍa, son of Kenchanagaḍa and grandson of Rangagaḍa of the village Konti Doḍḍēri. Why the village is called Konti Doḍḍēri is not definitely known. Probably it is named after the village goddess Kontyamma. The grant is dated 16th day of the bright half of Pushya in the year Īśvara (Jan. 18, 1753 A.D.?). The name of the donor is not given nor the exact date.

On a rock in the lane to the south of the same village (Doḍḍēri).

Kannāḍa language and characters of the 17th century.

1. Chitribhānu-saṁvatsarada Kārti-
2. ka sudha 5 lu śrī Malpāgaḍa
3. Kāḷigaṇḍa Girigaṇḍanu saha koḍa-
4. giyāgi koṭṭa māmnyada
5. hola maṁgala

Note.

This records the grant of a koḍagi (rent-free land) to some one not named by certain gaḍas named Malpā-gaḍa, Kāḷigaṇḍa and Girigaṇḍa. No date is given. The characters seem to be of the 17th century and Ch'itrahānu may correspond to A.D. 1642 and the whole date may be regarded as equivalent to April 24, 1642 A.D.

On a pillar of a ruined mantapa of the temple of god Ahôbala Nârasimha to the west of the village Jakkanahalli in the same Hobli of Doḍḍēri.

Size 6' × 1'—6".

Kannāḍa language and characters.

1. vijayâbhuydaya
2. Śâlavâhana
3. śaka varushagaḷu
4. 1710 ke sanda

9. radallu
10. Puravara
11. Ranga-gaḍana
12. bhôjana-sâlâ
13. maṇṭapa dharma

Note.

This records the construction of a dining-hall (bhôjanaśâlâ-manṭapa) near the temple of Narasimha by Rangagaḍa of Puravara. The date is given as Sunday 15th lunar day of the month of Kârtika in the year Kilaka S' 1710, and corresponds to November 13, A.D. 1788 but the week day is Thursday and not Sunday as stated in the record. Puravara is a village in Madhugiri Taluk.

Size 7' × 2'.

Kannaḍa language and characters.

1. Yiragumḍeya Râ-
2. chagaunḍana maga A-
3. yaṁṇana kere

Note.

This merely records the construction of a tank (in the neighbourhood) by Ayaṇṇa son of Râchagaḍa of Yiragunḍe. The characters seem to be of the 18th century.

On a stone standing in the waste-water channel of the tank Gûlikaṭṭe in the village Basavanahalli in the same Hobali of Doḍḍêri.

Size 5' × 1'.

Kannaḍa language and characters of the 18th century.

1. yi Gu-
2. liyappa-
3. na kereya-
4. nu âku-
5. vaḍadu
6. gadeya
7. geyida-
8. tana bâ-
9. yivaḷa-
10. ge katte

Note.

This consists of a direction and a curse not to bring under cultivation or divide into plots (âkuvade) the land under the tank of Gûliyappa. The tank was apparently meant for the supply of drinking water to men and beasts. No date nor name of the ruler is contained in the record.

106.

On a stone set up to the south of the same village (Basavanahalli).

Size 2' × 1 — 6''.

Kannaḍa language and characters of 17th Century A.D.

1. Hulekereya gaḍa
2. Ningapage koṭṭa kere-
3. goḍage mânya dharma

Note.

This records the gift of land as kerekodage to Ningappa, headman (gaṇḍa) of the village Hulekere. Kerekodagi is the name given to grants of land made for encouraging persons to build tanks. Hulekere is the name of a village in Maḍakasira Taluk about 5 miles from the village Basavanahalli. No date nor name of the ruler is given.

On the lintel of the sukhanāsi doorway of the ruined Hampêśvara temple in the bêchirāk village Hampasandra, a hamlet of the village Chandragiri in the same Hobli.

Kannāḍa language and characters of the 15th century.

1. Bireyanāya-
2. kana heṇḍati Nâ-
3. ki-nâykiti Hampe Virû-
4. pākshan-ālayava mâḍisidu

Note.

The construction of the temple dedicated to god Hampe Virûpāksha by Nâkinâyakiti, wife of Bîreyanâyaka, is recorded in the grant.

No date is given. The characters seem to be of early Vijayanagar period and hence the temple might have been constructed about the beginning of the 15th century.

On a stone lying in the rice-field belonging to Râmalingappa in the same village Chandragiri.

Size 1' X 1'.

Kannāḍa language and characters of the 19th century.

1. yida kaṭi-
2. sidavaru
3. Arurage-
4. ya Nagaya

Note.

This records the construction of something, probably a well, near which the inscription stone is found by Nâgayya of the village Arurage.

On a stone lying in a rice-field of the village Bissanapâlya, a hamlet of the village Doḍḍêri in the same hobli.

Size 3'—6" X 2'—0".

Kannada language and characters of the 16th century.

6. rya-kartarâda Bhima-
7. payanavaru Doḍḍêriya
8. Avabhala-gauḍarige Lakshu-
9. miyapurada kereya keḷage
10. koṭa mânyada-dharma.

Note.

This records the gift of some land to a village headman named Avabhalaḡauḍa of Doḍḍêri under the tank of Lakshmîpura (a hamlet of Doḍḍêri about a mile distant) by Bhîmapaya, manager for the affairs of the chief, Mahânâyaka Rangapaya (of Harati).

The date is given as the 9th lunar day in the dark half of Kârtika in the year Manmatha. No śaka year is given. A Rangapanâyaka of Harati is referred to in an inscription of about 1580 in the village Kaggalaḡu, Sîra Taluk. E. C. XII, Sîra 53. From the nature of the alphabet used in the inscription, it may be supposed that the present record is also of the same period and probably contains a grant of the same king. The date of this epigraph may be therefore tentatively taken to be 15th November 1595 A.D.

On a boulder to the north of the bêchirâkh village Venkaṭêśapura in the same Doḍḍêri Hobli.

Kannada language and characters of the 19th century.

1. Bhâvâ (ṇa) da baravinalu
2. yî mânyada holavanu
3. Annadâni-
4. dêvaru koṭadu

Note.

This records the gift of some land free from rent made by Annadâni-dêvaru (a Lingâyat priest). The name of the donee is not given. The grant is stated to have been made during a famine in the year Bhâva. No further details of the date are contained in the record. The characters seem to be of the latter part of 19th century. The year Bhâva may therefore be presumed to be A. D. 1874.

At the village Koḍagadâla, in the Hobali of Puravara, at the entrance into the fort.

Kannada language and characters of 16th century.

1. Vijaya-samvatsarada Jyêshṭha śu 10
2. Mummaḍi Chikapagaḍaru î kôṭeya kaṭidu

Note.

This records the erection of the fort at Koḍagadâla village by the chief of Bijavara named Mummaḍi Chikapagaḍa who probably ruled in the middle of 16th century A.D. The year might correspond to S' 1515 Vijaya (1593 A.D.) See No. 95 of the present Report.

17. śrî śrî śrî

Note.

This record was issued during the reign of the Vijayanagar king Kriṣṇarâya (1509-1529) by a dependent chief named Timmaṇṇanâyaka and registers a gift for the king's merit, of a village Hulikere, a hamlet of Agaḷe as an agraḥâra, free from taxes, for waving lamps before some god. Which temple was to benefit by this gift is not stated but it is possible to infer that the temple of Mârkaṇḍêśvara on the banks of the Gautami river in whose presence the gift is stated to have been made, might be the shrine in question. This temple may probably be the same as the Mârkaṇḍêya (called also Mârkaṇḍêśvara) temple on the Gôdâvari in the town of Rajahmundry. The chief Timmaṇṇanâyaka of this record was the founder of the Harati kingdom. There are several inscriptions of the Harati chiefs in the neighbourhood. No date is given in the epigraph.

Translation.

(Usual salutation to Śambhu). Be it wel'. While the illustrious Vîra Bukkarâya, mahâmaṇḍalêśvara, destroyer of hostile kings, defeater of kings who break their word, lord of the eastern and western oceans, was reigning in peace and wisdom in Hastinâvatîpura :

During the time that Mâdhavânka, a dependant on his lotus feet was ruling Banavase 12000 :—

His servant, Aubhalanâtha, son of Chaṇḍarasa of Nandavura renovated, in order that his master Mâdhavadaṇḍanâtha might attain all his desires, the temple of Gôpînâtha and for the conducting of the services of personal decorations of the god and of festivals for as long as the moon lasts, sent word to the gaüda-prajega! in the 18 kampas of Gutti and held a meeting of theirs at Banavase :—

Thereupon the chief citizens of Yedenâḍ comprising the mahâjanas of the illustrious everlasting consecrated senior agraharas Yelase and Kuppagaḍḍe, Tammagaüda of Sorab, Bommagauḍa of Tavanidhi, Mêchagaüda of Kesalûr :—the chief citizens of Koṇḍavatinâḍ including Bommaṇa of Hechchita, Narasappa of Bâleyahalli, Gôpagauḍa of Kuppâtûr of Nâgarakhaṇḍa, Hoṭṭeyatammagaüda of Hurule, Bâlappa of Nêrilige, Gaṇḍarayya of Hiriya Jiduvalige, Chikkagaüda and Bisuḍagaüda of Hiṭṭaravalli, Beṭṭaya of Chikka Jiduvalige, Tambâḍibôva of Moti, Kêśavadêva, Haḷiga of Hange, Sivagaüda, Âchagaüda, Hariyapa, Haḷigiga, Chikkaṇṇa of Sirivanti, Bommaṇa of Kaure, Muddagaüda of Sirivanti, Tammagaüda of Hasuvalati, Bammagaüdaya of Baḍagagôve (North Gôve), Hiriya Aralagaüda and Chikk Aralagaüda of Varaligege, Bunâlîga, (son) of Sampagaüda of Âlavalî, Hâlappa of Haruvûr, Kanchalagaüda of Hasirihali, Pârigaüda of Hirûr, Marisinga of Chêlûr, Haḷiga of Gaṇḍaguli, Mâragauḍa, Bîrappa of Mangalûr, Âdamma of Hariyasi.....gave in Banavasi..... in the year Kîlaka, 1290th year.

Note.

This belongs to the reign of the Vijayanagar king Vîra Bukka Râya (1377-1404) who is stated to have been ruling in Hastinâvatipura (Ânegondi). Mâdhavânka, called also Mâdhavadaṇḍanâtha, is mentioned as the governor of Banavase 12000 province, and a subordinate of his, named Aubhalanâtha, son of Chaṇḍarasa of Nandavara, is said to have restored the temple of Gôpînâtha as desired by his master and in order that services in the temple might be conducted for ever, he is stated to have applied for help to the gaudupraje (gauda is the village headman) of 18 kampanas (divisions) of Gutti (also known as Chandragutti in Sorab Taluk). We further learn that accordingly a meeting (kûṭa) was held at Banavasi and among those assembled were the mahâjanas of the aghararas Yelase and Kuppagaḍḍe and the gaudas of the villages Sorab, Tavanidhi, Kesalur, Hechchita in Koṇḍavaṭinâḍ, Bâleyahalli, Kuppaṭûr in Nâgarakhaṇḍa, Hurule, etc. These villages are found mostly in the Sorab Taluk and also in the neighbouring Taluks of Śirsi, Mangalur, etc. The names of the gaudas of these villages. Tam-magaḍḍa, Bommagauḍa, etc. are also given. The nature of the grant made by those assembled is not clear but some land seems to have been given in Banavasi to the temple.

Mâdhavânka of the present record is also referred to as Mâdhavânâtya, Mâdhavarâya and Mâdarasa Voḍeyar in several inscriptions of Shimoga District¹ and also in the Goa copperplate grant of A.D. 1391 (JB. Br. A. S. IV). See also Nos. 90, 115 and 116 of the present Report. The date of the present grant is the year Kîlaka Ś 1290 (A.D. 1368).

Note.

This is an incomplete record engraved on a pillar of the Madhukêśvara temple. The epigraph begins in the middle and it is difficult to make out which inscription formed its beginning. In the beginning of lines 1, 3—6 and 9, some letters are lost and this adds to the difficulty in interpreting the meaning of the inscription.

As it is, the epigraph seems to record a grant made for the services in the temple of Madhukanâtha (or Madhukêśvara, in Banavase) by some people and given to the custody of a Śaiva priest whose name is Chikidêvayya, disciple of Lâkuḷêśvara-dêvayya. The epithets applied to this priest, viz., preceptor of the world, causer of the ocean of Śiva-samaya to swell up, a Triṇêtra in destroying the pride of Cupid, delighter in the gift of food, cattle and lands, a wishing-tree to dependants, pure in body, an emperor who raised up Kadamba kingdom, worshipper of the lotus feet of Madhukanâtha (lines 1—6) are identical with the titles of Chikkidêvavodeyarayya to be found in No. 116 of this report dated 1368 A.D. The present record is engraved in characters of the same period and is probably of about the same date.

After the usual imprecatory stanzas the inscription next contains the name of its engraver, Murâri, son of Dêvarâja, of the village Pombuchcha (same as Humcha in Nagar Taluk). No date is given.

A dependent on his (Harihara II's) lotus feet, a proud bee sporting in the lotus feet of (Śiva) whose chest is marked with the saffron on the breasts of Gaurî, a moon in causing the sea of Śaivâgama to rise, an Âñjanêya in managing the affairs of his lord, a Bhîmasêna in blotting out of existence Duśśâsana that is, the evil advice and wicked government of bad ministers, endowed with invincible prowess, possessor of incalculable strength, skilled in the Rig, Yajus, Sâma and Atharva Vêdas and Vêdângas, a young lion on the peak of the mountain, that is, the kingdom of 16000 janapadas (villages) including the lion seat of Kubêra shining in the city of Gôvâ on the shore of the western ocean, and Vanavasi situated near the Gômanta hill adorning the Kuntala kingdom.....

Note.

This record is also engraved on another pillar of the same temple and is incomplete at the end. It begins with the usual invocatory verse in praise of Śambhu. We next find the various titles of king Vîra Hariharêśvara (Harihara II. 1377-1404), son of Bukka I, ruling at Hastinâpuri (Ânegondi). A subordinate of his with various attributes is next referred to, but his name is not found. Here the record abruptly ends. The epithets applied to the king's subordinate especially, the moon in causing the sea of Śaivâgama to swell, lord of Gôvânagara in the west coast, suggest that the person referred to is very probably Mâdhavânka or Mâdhavâmâtya referred to before. No date is given.

Good fortune. (Invocation to Śambhu).

Be it well. While the illustrious Vîra Bukkaraya, mahâmaṇḍalêśvara, conqueror of hostile kings, champion over kings who break their word, lord of the eastern and western oceans, was reigning in peace and wisdom in Hastinâvatîpura :

A dependent on his lotus feet ; be it well ! While the illustrious mahâpradhâna Mâdhavânka was reigning over Banavase 12000.

Be it well : On the holy occasion of solar eclipse, sankrânti and Vyatîpâta occurring together, on Monday the 30th day of the dark fortnight of Vaiśâkha in the victorious and prosperous Śaka year 1290, the year Kîlaka.

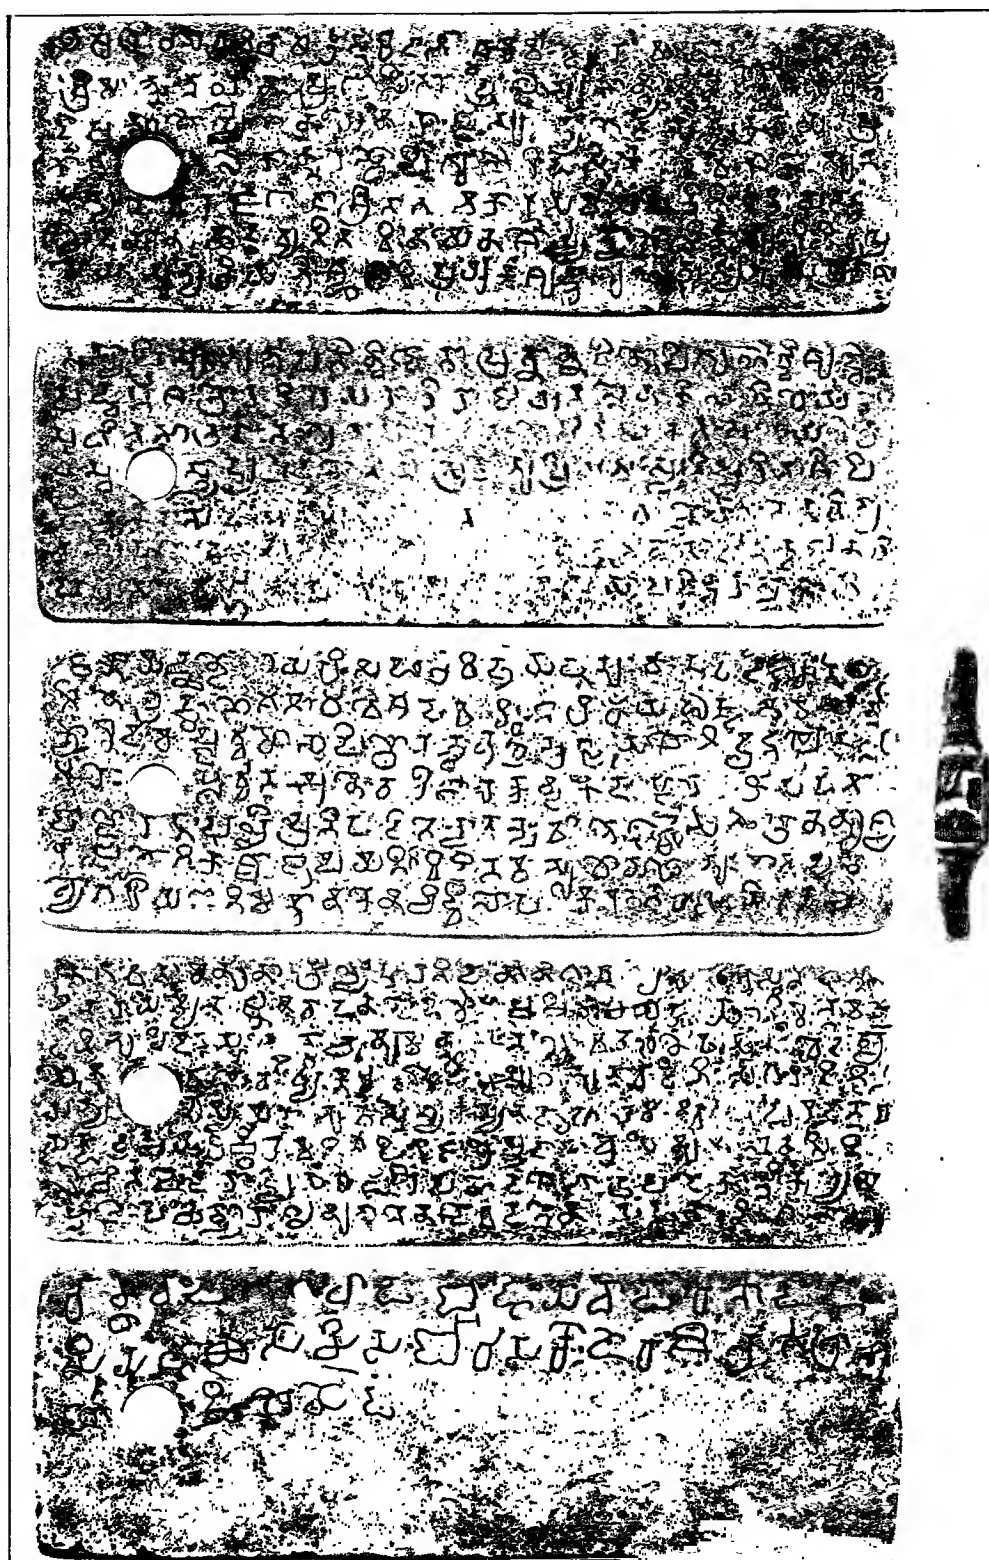

Be it well : Obtainer of the band of five muscial instruments, a great devotee of Mahêśvara, worshipper of the sacred lotus feet of the god Bankanâtha, Nâgappa, son of Sivadêva, chief of Raṭṭikal, set up the god Virêśvara near the god Madhukadêva of Banavase and be it well ; for the decorations and festivities and perpetual lamp of the said god Virêśvaradêva gave away in the presence of the eight hiṭṭu (?) and five matts of the said Banavase, into the hands of Chikkidêva Voḍeyar, son of Lâkuḷêśvaradêva, worshipper of the holy lotus feet of god Madhukanâtha, the presiding deity of the excellent city Jayantîpura, preceptor of the king of kings, spiritual guide of the universe, endowed with the brightness of the rays of the autumnal (śarat) moon in causing the sea of the faith of Śiva to rise up, delighter of the inhabitants of the mountain of Śiva (Kailâsa), hereditary preceptor of Kadamba kings.....

Note.

This inscription has been noticed in P. 206 of Indian Antiquary, Vol. IV. It is of the reign of the Vijayanagar king Bukka I (Circa 1356-1377) and refers to his minister, Mahâpradhâna Mâdhavânka, governor of Banavase 12000 province. A dependant of Mâdhavânka named Nâgappa, son of Šivadêva, chief of Raṭṭikal is stated to have set up the god Virêśvara near the linga of Madhukêśvara in Banavase and made some endowment for the said god, placing it under the management of the Śaiva priest Chikkidêva Voḍeyar, son (or disciple) of Lâkuḷêśvara-dêva Voḍeyar. The grant seems to have been made in the presence of the eight hiṭṭus (?) and five matts of Banavase. The meaning of the word hiṭṭu is not clear.¹ The remaining part of the inscription below containing probably the details of the endowment made is covered up by the building and hence the present record is incomplete.

The date of the record is S' 1290 Kîlaka Vaiśâkha ba 30 Monday and is equivalent to Wednesday (and not Monday) 17th May 1368 A.D. The other details regarding the date given in the grant, viz., Sankrânti, solar eclipse and Vyatîpâta did not occur in the day. They were probably added to make the gift look more meritorious. The exact position of the village Raṭṭikal referred to in the record is not known.

Be it well ! King Mânanka, lord of the earth, and conqueror of Anga, Vidarbha, and Âsmaka, (was) master of the Sâtkuntha land. Though dwelling in another world, he is resplendent by his virtues which remain in this world : peace towards the subjects, respect towards the good, valour towards enemies, tact towards kings, and munificence towards all.

His son, Dêvarâja who was an Indra descended to the earth, won unequalled glory by his brave conquests. By his courtesy free from cunning, valour and generosity and other virtues, he was immeasurable even by the learned. His pure qualities shone by his guileless virtuous deeds.

 The bestower of lands enjoys bliss in heaven for sixty thousand years. The destroyer (of such gift) and his abettor dwell in Hell for as many years. Quoth Vyâsa, the classifier of the Vedas : The earth has been enjoyed by many kings like Sagara.
 Whoever has (possession of) the land, he gets the fruit thereof. Oh Yudhishthira, protect thou to your best such land as has been granted to the Dvijas. Oh great king, better than making a gift is its continuation.

 the sixteenth year of the reign, named Bhâdrapada, on the fifth day of the dark half of Kârtika.

NOTES.

I. DESCRIPTION.

These copperplates were in the possession of the patel of a village near Kolhapur from whom Professor Kundanagar of the Raja Ram College, Kolhapur, obtained them on loan and gave them to Professor Heras of St. Xavier's College, Bombay, and the latter scholar sent them to the Mysore Archaeological Department. The plates are now read and published for the first time. The record consists of three plates each measuring 7·8" × 3·6" and weighing on the average 4·3 oz. or about 10½ tolas. The three plates with the seal weigh 36 tolas. The plates are smooth and rimless and are thick enough not to allow the inscription on one side to appear through on the reverse. The engraving is badly done as portions of several characters and several necessary strokes cannot be seen. The lower half of plate 2 (b) is worn and many characters are effaced while a part of 3 (b) has been damaged though the letters can be clearly recognised. The ring is oval being ¼" thick and 2·7" to 2·1" in diameter. It had not been cut when received in this office. The seal which is a thick and flattened part of the ring itself measures 0·9" × ·5" on its outside and is oblong in shape. In it is a maned lion standing to left (proper right) with the right fore limb lifted up and thrust forward, head raised and tail arched over the back. It is a fine animal and is different from the couchant lion appearing on the seal of the Uṇṭikavâṭika grant of Abhimanyu.¹ The plates contain two records, the second being a Kannaḍa confirmation grant in 3 lines which will be commented on at the end of this note. The other remarks made here apply to the first inscription which is the original record occupying sides I (b), 2 (a), 2 (b) and 3 (a) of the plates.

II. CONNECTED INSCRIPTIONS.

The inscriptions connected with a study of the present grant are :—

- (1) The Uṇṭikavâṭika grant of Abhimanyu Râshṭrakûṭa (Ep. Ind. Vol. VIII, p. 163.)
- (2) The Khariar plates of Sudêvarâja (Ep. Ind. Vol. IX. p. 170).
- (3) The Râyapur plates of Sudêvarâja (Fleet's Gupta Inscriptions, p. 196).
- (4) The Arang plates of Jayarâja (Fleet's Gupta Insc., p. 191).
- (5) The Kauṭhem grant of Vikramâditya V. (Ind. Ant., Vol. XVI., p. 17).
- (6) The Aihole inscription of Pulakêśi II (Ind. Ant., Vol. V, p. 68).

III. PALEOGRAPHY.

The characters of the inscription belong to the western Indian variety of the southern class described by Buhler ¹ and figured in column III and other columns of his plate VII as belonging to the 5th and 6th centuries A.D. ² Paleographically the alphabet of these plates comes midway between the Mandasor prâśasti of Kumâragupta and the Uṇṭikavâṭika grant of Abhimanyu. It is very different from the square variety with the outline box head found in the Khariar plates and also from the true box-headed characters of the Vâkâṭaka and Kadamba inscriptions like the Tâlagunda inscription of Śântivarman. Its proto-type appears to be the alphabet of the Mandasor inscription of Kumâragupta. A cursive form of this alphabet is found in the Uṇṭikavâṭika grant. The Pâṇḍurangapalli plates show slight differences with both the above. While the Mandasor inscription has finely formed neat characters with true nail heads, and similar nail heads in a degenerate form appear occasionally in the Uṇṭikavâṭika plates, the Pâṇḍurangapalli plates have the outline nail heads appearing occasionally. Further, the present plates have some remarkable characteristics. Plate 2 (a), where the calligraphy and the inscribing have both been careful, shows the writing as it ought to be. The rest of the inscription has been badly written, the characters being not uniform in size and the tops of the letters falling into irregular lines; portions of the characters are sometimes highly cursive or so carelessly inscribed that some parts do not show themselves on the plates. Thus some of the characters are puzzling; often a curve is represented by two or three straight strokes meeting at right angles. On merely calligraphical grounds the doubt at first arises whether the plates are genuine at all. But as the paleography is consistent and historically the document is not incorrect it may be accepted as a genuine grant. It is possible that the engraver who perhaps belonged to the present Shôlâpur District was not himself acquainted with the western Indian alphabet in which the draft of the grant was written and which he has perhaps carelessly copied. In some places strokes are added without definite significance and in a few of the ligatures the consonants are difficult to distinguish.

(¹) Ind. Ant. 1904. Supplement, p. 63.

(²) Buhler : Indian Paleography ; plates.

IV. LANGUAGE.

The language of the inscription is throughout classical Sanskrit with a mixture of prose and verse in imitation of the Gupta inscriptions of the period, without their literary excellence. The record begins with a prose sentence after which are a verse in the Vamśastha metre and a Ślōka verse followed by two stanzas in the Indravajrā metre and two Ślōkas. Then occur three long prose sentences followed by four Ślokas quoted from sacred works. The last sentence in prose records the date of the inscription. The language is not without defects and the rules of classical Sanskrit grammar appear to have been overlooked in a few places.

The inscription abounds in orthographical errors due partly to careless engraving like Dharānah for Dharāyāh and ilāśritāt for ilāśritah.

V. CONTENTS.

The main purpose of the inscription is to record a grant made by a king named Avidhēya to a certain Brahman, of the village of Pāṇḍurangapalli along with four other villages namely, Anevari, Chāla, Kandaka and Duddapalli (?). It begins by mentioning that there was a king of the Sātkunta country by name Māṇānka, a conqueror of Anga, Vidarbha, and Aśmaka. After his praises, his son Dēvarāja is described as a great king; then comes his son, the donor of the grant, Avidhēya, whose valour and generosity are extolled. In the prose passage which follows, Jayadvīṭṭha of the Bhārgava-gōtra is mentioned as the grantee, the five villages named above constituting the gift. Then follow some verses soliciting future rulers to continue the gift and threatening them as usual with imprecations if they interfere with the charity. The last sentence informs us that the grant was written out at the king's commands by an official named Dēvadatta on the 5th day of the dark half of Kārtika in the year Bhādrapada to corresponding to the 16th year of the king's reign.

VI. AUTHOR.

From the inscription we gather that the grantor was a king ruling over the modern Shōlāpur district and that he was the son of a king Dēvarāja who was himself the son of Māṇānka. (Plate XII, map 2.) The latter was the lord of the country near the Sātkunta (Satkutta ?) or the Satpura mountains and had overcome the rulers of Anga, Vidarbha and Aśmaka. The name of Avidhēya has not appeared before in any historical record, but his father and grand-father are known to us by the Uṇṭikavāṭika grant of Abhimanyu. The latter, while making the grant from Māṇāpura in the Hoshangabad District of the Central Provinces situated between the Mahadev hills branch of the Satpura range and the river Narmada, states that he is the son of Bhavishya who was one of the three sons of Dēvarāja whose father was Māṇānka, an ornament of the Râshtrakûṭa dynasty. There can be little doubt now that Avidhêya was a brother of Bhaviṣhya and was thus the grand-son of Mânânka, the founder of the first known independent Râshtrakûṭa kingdom. The third of the three brothers might possibly have been Jayarâja of the Arang copperplate inscription¹ issued from the town of Śarabhapura, an unidentified place near the Mahânadi river. That Jayarâja was a son of Dêvarâja has been inferred from the fact that the Râypur copperplate inscription which has been closely imitated in most respects by the Arang plates was issued by Sudêvarâja also from Śarabhapura. That this Sudêvarâja was the son of a king named Mânāmâtra who was descended from Prasanna is gathered from the legend on the seal of the Khariar copperplates². Thus we see the genealogy of this early Râshtrakûṭa dynasty and the position of Avidhêya in it.

It may also be noticed that at the time of the grant, Avidheya was a king and that he had ruled for over 15 years.

VII. DATE.

It has been already stated that the inscription is dated in the 16th year of the reign presumably of Avidhêya. Another view that might be taken is that the dates mentioned in the inscriptions of the dynasty refer to an era founded on the accession to the throne of the first king of the dynasty possibly Prasanna. This would be improbable because after Mânânka and Dêvarâja reigned, the empire appears to have fallen into three pieces under three different rulers who probably formed a confederation. The period of 16 years would in the ordinary course be too short for the occurrence of these events and for the spread of the Râshtrakûta empire from the Mahânadi and the Narmadâ to the banks of the river Bhîmâ. Further the use of regnal years for dating purposes was not uncommon during the period as is seen from other inscriptions like those of the Vâkâṭakas ¹. Thus it may be taken that the present plates were issued in the 16th year of Avidhêya's reign.

From the Râypur grant we learn that it was issued in the 10th year of Dêvarâja. As both Dêvarâja and his father Mânanka were great conquerors and builders of a large empire their reigns may be assumed to have been of the usual length of about 20 or 25 years. Thus the date of the present grant appears to be about 40 or 50 years after the founding of the kingdom by Prasanna. The latter who is mentioned on the seal of the Râyapur plates was perhaps a subordinate ruler under the last great Vâkâṭaka, Harishêṇa, whose Ajanta inscription is attributed to circa 465 A. D. ²

A very suitable date for the present record would be in the middle of November 516 A.D., for the following reasons :—

1. The characters of the inscription, as already seen, resemble most those of the Mandasor inscription of Bandhuvarman which is dated in the Mâlava year 530, equivalent to A.D. 473-474 ³. The characters of the Pânḍurangapalli plates differ from those of the Mandasor inscription in details like the occasional occurrence of the outline nail-head in place of the regularly occurring true nail head. But these differences would not place the present plates beyond about 50 years after Bandhuvarman's time. Fleet's view that the characters of the Uṇṭikavâṭika plates belong paleographically to the 7th century cannot be accepted as final. They may safely be placed in the middle of the 6th century and definitely before the period of Harshavardhana and Pulakêṣi II.

2. The form of the inscription which has not yet developed the elaborate invocatory stanzas is also noteworthy. It resembles the Gupta and Vâkâṭaka inscriptions of the fifth century more than those the records seventh century like the Aihole inscription of Pulakêṣi II.

3. In the Aihole inscription of Pulakêṣi, it is definitely mentioned that he defeated a Râshtrakûta by name Appâika Gôvinda who invaded his territories from the north ⁴. In this war Pulakêṣi gained the sovereignty of the three countries called Mahârâshṭraka containing 99,300 villages. This reference to a Râshtrakûta king and to the three Mahârâshṭras extending over a vast country would be meaningless unless the passage is taken to refer to a large empire called Mahârâshṭra which had fallen into 3 parts before the time of Pulakêṣi II in the early part of the 7th century.

(⁴) Ind. Ant. V., P. 72.

It is probable that the empire founded by Māṇānka and expanded by his son Dêvarāja was ruled over by the latter's three sons Bhavishya, Avidhêya and Jayarāja and that it is the Mahārāshṭra in three parts of which Pulakêśi became master. Gôvinda who came into conflict with Pulakêśi was probably a descendent of Avidhêya or of one of his brothers who ruled the country to the north of Pulakêśi's later territories.

Pulakêśi's great grand-father has been described in the Kauṭhem grant as well as in the Yevûr inscription as having defeated a Râshṭrakûṭa king named Kṛishṇa the son of one Indra. Though both these inscriptions refer to events which took place nearly 5 centuries before their time it is quite probable that in the course of his expansion Jayasimha came into conflict with the Râshṭrakûṭa king Kṛishṇa. The coins of the later Gupta fabric which have been found in the Amaravati District of the Central Provinces ¹ and near Nasik ² bearing the legend Krishna Râja Paramamâheśvara appear to belong to this king. It is known that Jayasimha's rise took place a little before 550 A.D. ³ when the reign of Pulakêśi I began. It may safely be assumed that Indra and Kṛishṇa reigned in the second quarter of the 6th century A. D. before the rise of Jayasimha. This Indra may possibly have been the son and successor of Avidhêya bearing the name Indra which is synonymous with Dêvarāja the name of Avidhêya's father. In any case it is difficult to place Avidhêya after about 525 A.D.

As stated above, the accession of Māṇānka took place about two generations before the Pāṇḍurangapalli plates were issued. But Māṇānka could not have conquered the Vidarbha and Aśmaka (or the Berar and Khandesh) areas and extended his kingdom to the banks of the Bhîmâ so long as the Vākāṭaka empire was powerful. It is known that the Vākāṭaka Harishêṇa was a powerful ruler who made extensive conquests and perhaps ruled for a long time ⁴. Harishêṇa is credited with having conquered the Kuntala, Avanti, Kalinga, Kôsala, Triakûṭa, Lâṭa and Andhra countries ⁵. It is evident that Māṇānka could not have built up a large and independent kingdom during the period of Harishêṇa's greatness which has been assigned the date 465 A.D. ⁶. The rise of Māṇānka cannot have taken place before about 470 A.D. On the ground that the plates were issued about 40 or 50 years after the rise of Māṇānka, their date is very likely to fall between 510 and 525 A.D. In line 28 of the plates the date of the grant is given as the 5th day in the dark half of the month Kârtika in the year Bhâdrapada. The name of the year suggests the use of the Jovian 12 year cycle ⁷. According to this system the year is named after the constellation in which Jupiter takes his rise. Each such year is about 13 months and a few days in length. This reckoning is even now found in connection with the Mahâ-mâgha festival observed at Kumbhakôṇam and other sacred places in India. Inscriptions bearing similar year names have been found in considerable numbers in Bâghelkhand during the 5th and 6th centuries A.D. The Khoh grant of Parivrâjaka-mahârâja Hastin bears the date Mahâ-vaiśākha corresponding to the year A. D. 476-77¹. A second copperplate of the same king from the same place is dated in the "Mahâ-âsvâyuja samvatsara" corresponding to A. D. 482-83. Mahârâja Sankshôbha's grant from the same locality has the year Mahâ-âsvâyuja corresponding to 528-29 A.D. The Majhgawam grant of Hastin has the date Mahâ-chaitra, i.e., 511-12 A.D. The Bhumara pillar inscription of Hastin and Śarvanâtha has the date Mahâ-mâgha commencing on 6th October 520 A.D.

From the above it is clear that the Bârhaspatya or Jovian year names were in common use in Central India during the early part of the 6th century. The Mahadev Hills and the Sâtpura area where Mânânka appears to have established his power are not far removed from Baghelkhand of the early 6th century either in time or in distance. Thus the same system appears to have been followed by Avidhêya though the latter was governing a province farther south. We have already noted the possible limits of the date of the Pâṇḍurangapalli plates as 510—525 A.D. In this period the year Mahâ-bhâdrapada commences somewhere about the 10th (?) of April 516 A.D. The Kârtika-bahula Panchami of that year would naturally be about the early part of November 516 A.D. This appears to be a possible date of the Pâṇḍurangapalli plates. It is found suitable on a consideration from all points of view.

As the plates were issued in the 16th year of Avidhêya's reign the accession of that king appears to have taken place in A.D.c. 500. Thus the period of rule of Mânânka and Dêvarâja would be in the last quarter of the 5th century while it is possible to place the Râshtrakûṭas Indra and Kṛishṇa and the Châlukya Jayasimha between the date of the present plates and 550 A.D., the date of the rise of Pulakêśin I.

4. A possible objection to this conclusion may be answered here. The antiquity of God Viṭṭhala of Pâṇḍurangapalli or Pandharpur, whose namesake is mentioned in the plates as the grantee may be doubted. This is also a point which ought to be taken into consideration in determining the date of these plates. From the two-handed akimbo posture and the Gupta form of dress worn by the Viṭṭhala image and its resemblance to the Udayagiri cave sculptures near Bhilsâ, it has been inferred that the image belongs to a period earlier than the 6th century A.D.². The date now assigned to the plates.

5. The form of the name 'Avidhêya' with its similarity to the Ganga names 'Avinîta' and 'Durvinîta' suggests a probability of contemporaneity. These two Ganga rulers reigned in about the first half of the sixth century, and it is likely that Avidhêya was not far removed from them in time. Sankshôbha the Parivrâjaka, is another contemporary with a peculiar name belonging to the same class.

GEOGRAPHY.

Eleven geographical names are mentioned in the inscription of which the following identifications may be attempted.

1. SÂTKUNTA.—The word 'kunta' has been given the meaning "name of a mountain" in Monier Williams' Sanskrit Dictionary. This appears to be a rare meaning and it is not clear whether it refers to any definite mountain or is only a general name for a particular class of mountains. Sâtkunta may however be taken as referring to Sâtpura or Satpuda mountains. A part of this range known as the Mahadev hills figures prominently in Fleet's identification of the town Mânâpura occurring in the Uṇṭikavâṭika plates. Whether Mânâpura was the capital of the empire or not, it may be conceded that the Sâtpura range was under the sway of Mânânka and was possibly the original centre of the kingdom.

2. PANDARANGAPLLI.—The famous place of Pânḍuranga worship in the Dekkhan has been for a long time Paṇḍharpur, the sacred town on the banks of the Bhîma river in the Shôlâpur District of the Bombay Presidency. Though there is a strong tradition that the image of Pânḍuranga was brought from Dvâraka to Paṇḍharpur, the date of this transfer is not known. The fact that the second inscription on the back of plate III is issued by a later Rashtrakuta ruler in Kannaḍa and refers to the Belgaum and Shôlâpur Districts and the country further south, helps the identification of Pânḍurangapalli with the modern Paṇḍharapur.

3. ÂNEVARI appears to stand here for Ânevaḷi or Ânevaḷi, a village about four miles to the south-east of Paṇḍharpur on the left of the road from Paṇḍharpur to Mangalvêḍha.¹

4. CHÂLA is the same as the modern village of Châla on the right bank of the river Bhîma five miles directly to the east of Paṇḍharpur.

5. KANDAKA is probably Kondarki, a village just to the southwest of Châla and on the way to Anevaḷi. The grant evidently mentions a set of Pancha-grâmas or five villages situated close to each other on the banks of the Bhîma river, the chief of them being the modern town of Paṇḍharpur. Thus we ought to seek for the other two villages in the neighbourhood of that town.

6. DUDDAPALLI.—No village of this name appears to the south-east of Paṇḍharpur. It is possibly some village which was situated in the same area.²

7. VIDARBHA.—This country included the Berars and the neighbouring districts in Hyderabad and the Central Provinces.

8. ANGA.—This refers to Bengal generally.

(¹) See Survey of India Map: No. 47-0—2 and 6.

(²) The reading is not beyond doubt.

9. AŚMAKA.—It is the same as Asaka mentioned in the Prākṛit inscriptions and has been identified with the country around Khandesh. It had its own independent king, probably just before the rise of Māṇanka¹.

10. MAHĀDĒVAGIRI.—Is the name of the mountain range which includes Mahā-balēśvar. To the east of the range at some distance, is Paṇḍharpur. It may possibly have been named after the Mahadev hills of the Satpura range. The name is not clear on the plate.

11. PANDARA.—Evidently the same as Paṇḍharpur.

POLITICAL HISTORY.

The Pāṇḍurangapalli plates, when studied along with the Uṇṭikavâtika plates, and the other inscriptions mentioned above, supply information highly important for the history of the Dakhan in the sixth century A.D. It is now seen that between the decline of the Vākâṭaka empire in the second half of the fifth century A.D. and the rise to greatness of the early Châlukyas in the early years of the 7th century, a dynasty of Early Râshtrakûṭas ruled over a considerable part of Northern Dakhan, instead of being a central Indian power confined only to the fastnesses of the Sâtpura mountains. ten! Dr. Von Konow suggests that Prasanna, Mānamâtra and Sudêvarâja of the Khariar plates and Jayarâja of the Arang plates are identical with the early Râshtrakûṭas, two of whom are mentioned in the Uṇṭikavâtika plates². We now see that Avidhêya, another son of Dêvarâja, was ruling as king over the modern Shôlâpur District. It is evident that he held a considerable extent of territory to the north of that area, presumably continuous with the territories of Abhimanyu or of his son. The early Râshtrakûṭas are thus shown to have been in possession in the early part of the sixth century of a great area comprising even more than the present day Marathi-speaking country. For the first time the greatness of the early Râshtrakûṭas is discovered. The history of this dynasty may thus be reconstructed from the materials available to us.

Somewhere about the seventies of the fifth century A.D. the Vākâṭaka empire began to decline. At this time Prasanna, possibly an officer in the newly reconquered Vākâṭaka province on the banks of the Tapti, or his son Māṇanka, founded a kingdom in the mountainous country of the Sâtpuras.³ No information has been available as to whether they were Rajputs or Dakhanis and what their original home or language was. Māṇanka was however a distinguished person among the Râshtrakûṭas. Māṇanka was lord of the Sâtpura area and claimed to have conquered the countries of Anga, Vidarbha and Aśmaka. His son Dêvarâja appears to have inherited the kingdom and widened it also with the help of his three sons until it extended from the Mahânadi and the Tapti to the Bhîma river. After his death, the empire was divided among his three sons each of whom became ruler of an area called a Mahârâshṭra. It is not known whether there was a confederacy among the brothers. But it is seen that while Jayarâja ruled the eastern part on the banks of the Mahânadi, Bhavishya, presumably the eldest son, held the home province and Avidhêya reigned in the southern area extending to the banks of the Bhîma. Bhavishya's son Abhimanyu was governing Mânâpura when he issued the Uṇṭikavâtika plates in the presence of a general named Jayasingha, the commander of Harivatsakotta. A few years before this event his uncle appears to have issued the Pâṇḍurangapalli plates.

(³) A silver coin of this ruler is mentioned by Mr. L. P. P. Sharma in paper No. 165, Proc. of the Fifth All-India Oriental Conference, Lahore.

The subsequent history of the dynasty can be gathered at present only from the references contained in the inscriptions of the Chalukyas. As mentioned in the course of the discussion of the date, a son or grand-son of either Abhimanyu or more probably of Avidhêya was named Indra and his son Kṛishṇa was defeated by Jayasimha, the founder of the Chalukya dynasty. Whether this Jayasimha was the same as Jayasingha the commander of Harivatsakotta under Abhimanyu is not certain, but this is within possibility as the Uṇṭikavâtika plates were probably issued in c. 530 A.D. and Jayasimha rose to power some time before 550 A.D. Jayasimha defeated Kṛishṇa and took possession of the southern part of his kingdom. The Râshṭrakûṭas appear to have continued to rule in the north, until two or three generations later one of them Appâyika-Gôvinda was defeated by Pulakesin II who established his supremacy over "the three Mahârâshṭras".

Incidentally, it is interesting to note that at the time of Mânânka's rise the powers he had to face were those of Anga, Vidarbha and Aśmaka. His contemporaries on the north were Skandagupta (455-80), Puragupta (480-85) and Narasimhagupta (485-535). In all probability the ruler with whom Mânânka came into conflict was either Skandagupta or Puragupta. The country of Vidarbha was the centre of the Vâkâṭaka empire. It has been above assumed that by the time of Mânânka's rise Harishena's great days were over. Perhaps one of his descendants was the king defeated by the Râshṭrakûṭa ruler. Nothing definitely is known about the political condition of the Aśmaka kingdom at this time. It is possible that the Aśmaka king mentioned in the Ajanta inscription No. 6 was the person who was overcome by Mânânka.

SOCIAL CONDITIONS.

The present record confirms the information already obtained from the published records about the social and economic conditions of the period. Classical Sanskrit language had already come into extensive use and had become established as the vehicle of governmental orders. The God Pâṇḍuranga or Vishṇu in that form was already famous at Pâṇḍharpur on the banks of the Bhîma river, and children born in the locality were sometimes named Viṭṭha after him. Vedic sacrifices were common, and sacrificial officials like the 'Upavid' and the Chhandôga, were highly honoured. It was considered meritorious for a king to give a set of Panchagrâmas or five villages as a gift to brahmîns. It was usual for kings to use regnal years in official documents. The record appears to belong to a time of comparative peace.

Pandurangapalli Confirmation Grant of Sarbarasa.
ON THE COPPERPLATES OF AVIDHEYA IIb.

Text.

1. Kannavâḍa Gaṅgavâḍa Baḷeyavâḍa Rernâḍâḷa
2. Siyalâra sâmi Sarbarasa koṭôr Śintarge-â¹ Śem².
3. bâja geyôdam.

Translation.

This grant was made by Sarbarasa, lord of Kannavâḍa, Gaṅgavâḍa, Baḷeyavâḍa, Rernâḍâḷa and Siyalâra. The plates were prepared by Śembâja of Śintarge.

Note.

Description.—This short confirmation grant has been engraved on the back of the third plate of the Pâṇḍuraṅgapalli grant of Avidhêya Râshṭrakûṭa³. It is in three lines, a small portion of each of which is slightly damaged. But as the engraving is deep, and the characters are comparatively large, the inscription can be clearly read. The lines are nearly eight inches long, the longer sides of the larger characters being about 5" in length. (For other particulars see Avidhêya's grant supra: No. 116.)

Paleography.—The characters of this grant resemble the Kannaḍa characters of the Râshṭrakûṭa inscriptions of the 8th century A.D. more than any others, while there are distinct traces of contemporary northern influences. A few characteristics may be noted :—

The loops of ka and ra have joined the cross lines while va and ba appear both with and without their tops open. Ba is generally closed, though the sides are definitely indented. The tail of ḍa is curved up. The left hook of ya is yet a single curve. The medial i is both partly opened and fully closed, while the medial e appears either to the left or above the character. The circular old Kannaḍa r occurs once. On the whole the characters may, on paleographical grounds, be assigned to the early part of the 9th century A.D.

Language.—The language of the grant is Kannaḍa apparently of a form intermediate between that described by Mr. Rice as Pûrvada-haḷa-kannaḍa and the classical language of Haḷa-kannaḍa. 'Koṭôr' is an old form which is not frequently found after the 8th century. The verb 'geyôdam' is peculiar and is different from the earlier form 'geyidôn' or 'gaidôn' and the later 'geyidam' or 'gaidam'. The intermixture of the old and new forms allows us to suggest the early part of the 9th century as a possible date for the grant.

Geographical Terms.—Kannavâḍa or the Kanna country has been referred to in an inscription of Vikramaditya I Châlukya and appears to have included the village of Kandugul near Sholapur and the neighbouring districts of Bombay and Hyderabad.

(²) The reading of this letter is doubtful. (³) See supra, p. 197.

Gangavâḍa is no doubt the country of the Gangas comprising the neighbourhood of Mysore. It was subordinate to the Râshtrakûṭas in the 9th century A.D.

Baḷeyavâḍa.—This country has been assumed to be near Balegrâma identified by Fleet¹ with the modern Belgaum Tarhala, near Nasik. This was also under the sway of the Râshtrakûṭas in the 9th century. A fortress by name Baḷeyapaṭṭana is mentioned along with Uchchangi, Hombucha and other places as having been conquered by Vishnuvardhana Hoysala,² and was probably situated in the Tungabhadra basin. It is possible that the country around it had the name Baḷeyavâḍa and is mentioned here. Paḷenâḍ was one of the 18 Kampanas of the Chandragutti Province in 1382 (E. P. Carn. VIII, Sorab, 428.)

Rernâḍala is evidently the country around Renadal, a place near Kolhapur.³

Siyaḷâra or Silahara has till now been known only as the name of a dynasty of kings. Here it appears to refer to the country to which they belong, namely, the neighbourhood of Kolhapur and the Konkan.

Author.—The confirmation has been made by a ruler of the name Sarbarasa, which evidently stands for Śarva. This latter appears to have been the proper name of the great Râshtrakûṭa emperor famous under the titles of Amôghavarsha I or Nṛipatuṅga. It is well known that this emperor ruled for more than 62 years a vast empire extending from the Kâvêri to Central India. He is definitely named Sarva or Śarva in several inscriptions, and whatever doubt there might be about his proper name, there can be little doubt that the present grant is his⁴.

Date.—Once the identification of Sarbarasa with the great Amôghavarsha is accepted, the date of the grant can be easily assigned to the 9th century A.D. The fact that no titles of the king are mentioned and that his conquests like those of Mâlva and Vengi are not mentioned would perhaps indicate that the confirmation was made in the earlier part of his reign, perhaps c. 820 A.D.

Importance.—The inscription is useful in that it adds weight to the view that the real name of Amôghavarsha was Śarva, and that he confirmed the grant made three centuries before by Avidhêya who was probably an ancestor of his. In the history of the Kannaḍa language the continued use of 'Pûrvada Haḷa-kannaḍa' forms in an inscription of Amôghavarsha's time is noteworthy, specially because from this reign comes down to us the first extant Kannaḍa work, the 'Kavirâjamârḡa'. It is interesting to note that the author refers to a form of Kannaḍa earlier than the one used by him.

Summary of contents

Records the construction of a tank by Mayûraśarman. The contemporary kings defeated by the ruler are stated to be Traikûṭa, Abhîra, Pallava, Pâriyâtrika, Sakasthâna, Saindaka, Punâṭa and Mokari. The geographical and other details connected with the above and the data for determining the date of the inscription are discussed in detail in the notes under the record.

Describes a battle at Parige which took place during the invasion of Bâḷeyamakke and Sôde by Kadamba-Chakravarti Kâvadêvarasa accompanied by Kêśavadêva and Bommeya. A warrior named Masaṇa, servant of Biṭṭeya Hebbâruva is stated to have fought and died in the battle.

Registers a gift by king Avidhêya of 5 villages Paṇḍurangapalli (Pandharpur), Anevâri, Châla, Kandaka, and Duddapalli situated to the east of the Mahadêva mountain (?) to a Brahman named Jayad-Viṭṭha of Bhârgava-gôtra. Avidhêya is stated to be son of Dêvarâja and grand-son of Mânânka who is described as the lord of Sâtkuntadharâ (Sâtpura region ?) and the conqueror of the kingdoms of Anga (?), Vidarbha and Aśmaka. The writer is named Dêvadatta, lord of Paṇḍara, and the date of the grant is given as the 16th year of the reign, named Bhâdrapada on the 5th day of the dark half of Kârtika.

The date of the grant as determined by its paleography and its connection with the Untikavatika grant of the early Râshṭrakûṭa king Abhimanyu and the Khariar plates of Sudêvarâja, the Râyapûr plates of Sudêvarâja and the Arang plates of Jayarâja are discussed in the notes under the epigraph.

Confirms the grant of Avidhêya by Sarbarasa who is described as the lord of Kanna-vâḍa, Gangavâḍa, Bâḷeyavâḍa, Rernâdâla, and Siyaḷâra. The engraver of the grant is named Sembâja of Sintarge (Sindagi in the Bijapûr District).

This registers the gift of some money and the construction of a well by Kôṭeyamma lord of Gôsahasra : Bappayva is named as the ruler of Banavasi 12000 province and Biṭṭiga as nâlgâvuṇḍa of the division named Jiḍḍûr-elpattu including Balligâme (Belgâmi).

Gives the names of the relations of Kôṭeyamma-Gôsâsi.
